The hours stated in the letter for his visit were a trifle shorter than those counted upon by the city officials and St. John's church, where the Governor-General is to speak, and therefore Dr. Blagrave, rector of the church, is going to send a letter requesting that the visit may be prolonged an hour.

The secretary's letter also asked that no unnecessary expense be entailed by the municipality, and that the Governor-General is to speak, meet as many of the citizens of the city as possible.

A programme was drawn up from the time the party would enter the city at eleven o'clock to the departure at 6.00 p.m. if no other arrangements could be made. The party will be met at the station by the council and other guests, and the Rangers' band. From there a trip will be made over the Lift Lock on the Bessie Butler, leaving either from George street wharf or the first lock. Luncheon will then be served at the Empress Hotel to about fifty guests. Following this a drive will be conducted around the city showing the visitors the points of interest.

An address will be given by the Governor-General in Central Park at 2.30 and then the party will proceed to the centenary celebrations to be staged on the grounds of St. John's Church.

It was moved by Alderman Cotton and seconded by His Worship Mayor Holloway that the chairman, Alderman MacDonald interview Mr. Kenner with a view to moving the pupils to the public schools because the collegiate examinations begin on June 20th, and such a crowd gathered on Central Park might distract their attention from their work. A suggestion was made that Victoria Park be used, but this would spoil the flower beds with so many children attending, and so it was decided that Central Park was the only spot

Over 200 Crimes Traced to Chicago Gang; Two Murders, Five Assaults Are Charged

CHICAGO, May 19 (Canadian Press) — Chicago's youthful "crime trust," as Chief of Police Hughes called it, stood yesterday formally charged with two murders, five assaults with intent to kill, and 225 robberies.

Eleven men, mostly under 20 years of age, and two young women, all arrested in a concentrated round-up last Saturday, were named in the warrants. Bail of approximately $2,000,000 will be asked on members of the band, the police said.

The murders attributed to gang members were those of Edward Keefer and Leonard Fragassi, who were shot down in hold-ups.

Others Involved

Police say that two of the men under arrest have confessed killing Keefer, and that three others have been identified as involved in the Fragassi slaying. Carl L. Lease, booked on ten charges of conspiracy, was pictured as the "Fagin," who trained and directed the younger members of the "crime trust." He also was charged with being an accessory to the two murders.

Eighteen-year-old Marjorie Glynn was called the "bandit queen" of the band. She was arrested last night, when she walked into a trap the police had set.

FORKE PLANS REVISION OF FARM TRAINING

Thorough Overhauling of Immigration Machinery To Be Made.

FAR FROM SATISFIED.

Greater Flow of People From Britain Expected To Follow.

LONDON, May 19.—(United Press.)—The whole immigration situation is going to be revised by Hon. Robert Forke, Canadian Minister of Immigration, now on a visit to London, British United Press learns, and it is likely that concrete plans will be perfected in order to ensure a better flow of immigrants to the Dominion from Great Britain.

This was intimated to your correspondent by the Hon. Mr. Forke and it is obvious that the Canadian Government is far from satisfied with the present situation.

While immigration has of course been steadily increasing, the flow will be greater if some of the difficulties are overcome.

What is obviously needed is extension of the farm training scheme by which emigrants are trained for work on Canadian farms, together with better financial co-operation between the British and Dominion governments to ensure this extension.

It is therefore probable that a thorough overhauling of the present machinery may take place during the Canadian minister's present trip.

Insane People Hold Car Driving Licenses

DETROIT, Mich., May 19.—(United Press.) — Automobile club officials investigating an unusual number of reckless driving complaints discovered that seven inmates of a Detroit asylum for the insane possessed licenses to drive. They went on motor jaunts during suspension periods. One is said to have burned the roads at a rate of never less than 45 miles an hour, according to his story.

STILL UNCONSCIOUS.

While riding on a bicycle through Jackson Park yesterday at noon, Margaret Barnes, Cameron Street, received injuries about the head that caused concussion of the brain. It seems that the bicycle hit a rock throwing the girl over the handle bars to fall on her head on a jagged stone. Helen McBride, the only witness of the accident, called the caretaker, who phoned for Dr. O'Ray.

The girl was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital where an examination showed severe cuts below the ear. Dr. O'Ray told The Examiner this morning that the girl was still unconscious last night and in a serious condition.

Communism and Capitalism Co-existent, Russian Delegation Claims.

CO-OPERATION NEEDED.

Progress Can Come Only From Peacefully Working Together.

GENEVA, May 19 (Canadian Press).—The Soviet delegates to the International Economic Conference served notice today that they would leave Geneva immediately unless assured of the adoption of a resolution recognizing the co-existence of the Communistic and Capitalistic economic systems and the possibility of peaceful collaboration between the two systems.

The Soviet spokesman told the press that his delegation deemed the question vital to the world's restoration, believing co-operation of the Western countries with the Soviet economic system necessary to any real progress.

There had been difficulty in Moscow, he added, in getting unanimity for the dispatch of the delegation to the conference, and the delegates were authorized to return immediately unless they obtained what was deemed their cardinal principle as an element of the economic law now being formulated.

SITUATION CHAOTIC.

LONDON, May 19 (Canadian Press)—Official British advices from China to-day, reporting the declaration of martial law in Hankow on Tuesday, said uneasiness was increasing throughout the district as various semi-independent military leaders threatened actively to oppose the Hankow Nationalist regime. The situation as regards trade and commerce in Hankow was described as chaotic.

ATTACK IMMINENT.

Despatches Indicate Forces of Chiang Gaining Repeated Victories.

SHANGHAI, May 19 (United Press)—Yangtse river traffic to and from Shanghai was blocked yesterday by a battle between the Northern gunboat Haichi and the Woosung forts. The forts vigorously replied to the Haichi's fire.

A Japanese naval officer was wounded aboard the Japanese destroyer Momo, en route to Hankow, when the vessel passed between Northern and Southern troops engaged in battle across the river at Chankiang.

The Japanese consul-general was aboard the Momo. The destroyer returned the Northern fire with her main armament and with machine guns.

A Japanese naval officer visited the moderate Nationalist commissioner for foreign affairs at Nanking yesterday and demanded protection for Japanese property during the absence of the owners. The commissioner said the property would be protected.

Crosses Yangtse

LONDON, May 19—Official intelligence from British and American sources at Nanking, forwarded by the Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Express, indicates that the forces of General Chiang Kai-Shek have crossed the Yangtse river in increased numbers and consolidated their position at Pukow.

(A wireless message from Nanking, received at Shanghai Monday said that Pukow, on the northern bank of the Yangtse, opposite Nanking, fell to the moderate Nationalist forces of Chiang Kai-Shek Sunday morning).

The Chiang Kai-Shek troops are reported to have reached Punchen, where the Tien Tsin-Pukow railway works are located, but were unable to advance further because the northerners had destroyed or withdrawn the rolling stock.

Attack Imminent

HANKOW, May 19—Reports were circulated here yesterday of an imminent attack on the city by former Hankowites who have gone over to General Kai Shek, the moderate Nationalist leader, who broke with Hankow Nationalists and set up a government at Nanking.

It was said that the former Hankowites were 20 miles south of Hankow, having cut the Hankow-Canton railway there. The Chinese populace in Hankow is restless; many are leaving the city by ship.

False, Says Chen

Eugene Chen, leader of the Hankow Nationalists, declared the reports of enemy troop movements near the Wuhan cities (Hankow, Wu Chang and Hanyang) were entirely false; that the only basis for them appears to be an unauthorized movement of a minor force near the Hunan-Hupei border, which was now under investigation. Ample troops were near the border, and the Wuhan cities, he said, to deal with any situation.

On Last Legs

LONDON, May 19—Great Britain's diplomatic break with the Hankow Nationalists does not mean that relations will be established with Chiang Kai-Shek's regime, the Associated Press was authoritatively informed in Downing street yesterday.

Foreign office officials seem convinced that the Hankow government is on its last legs, but they maintain that no move has yet been made toward recognition of Chiang's regime.

Royal Party Given Reception at Perth

PERTH, West Australia, May 19.— The Duke and Duchess of York had a great reception from an enormous crowd as they drove the fifteen miles to Government House yesterday. Both looked fresh and well after their sea voyage from Melbourne on the battle Cruiser Renown.

The Renown's mascot, a kitten, held up the stately ceremony of dressing ship on the arrival here. The kitten, which has been sleeping on some bunting, was hauled up with the pennants and dangled in mid-air until the captain ordered the line of flags lowered. The frigthened mascot was then rescued to the cheers of the crowd on the wharf.

MANIAC BELIEVED RESPONSIBLE FOR BLOWING UP SCHOOL HOUSE KILLING OVER SCORE OF PUPILS

Treasurer of School Crazed Over Taxes Blamed For Blast.

MANY INJURED.

BATH, Mich., May 19 (AP)—Touched off by an apparently demented farmer who fell victim to his own devices, two dynamite explosions at the Consolidated School here yesterday brought death to at least thirty-eight persons — 33 of them pupils in the school. Most of them were tots rangmg in age from six to eight years old. Forty others, injured, were in Lansing hospitals.

The dead, in addition to the thirty three pupils whose bodies had been recovered last night, were the farmer, Andrew Kehoe, who served as treasurer of the school district; E. E. Huyck, the principal; Miss Nan Weatherbee, third grade teacher; Glen Smith, Bath postmaster, and Nelson McFarran, a Bath resident. The last two were passing the building at the time of the explosion.

Search of the ruins was continued until darkness overtook the workers, after state police had estimated that from a dozen to fifteen bodies remained to be located.

The explosions at the school followed by only a short time a blast at the nearby farm home of Kehoe. The blast and subsequent fire demolished the Kehoe home and barn.

The entire north wing of the school, a three story brick structure, was levelled by the blasts which caught all of the pupils indoors, over their books or engaged in recreation periods in their rooms.

Survivors of the disaster described the explosion as an "awful crash" followed an instant later by the crashing of the walls and the falling of the ceilings. Many of the pupils were crushed at their desks as the tons of bricks and beams crashed down.

Lodged in Cellar

State police, probing in the tangled wreckage of the school, found that elaborate preparations had been made for wrecking the building. The basement was criss-crossed with a network of wires which were connected to more than 500 pounds of dynamite scattered in various places. Search of the ruins was interrupted for a time while unexploded dynamite was removed. State police said Kehoe apparently had carried the dynamite into the school building during the night and arranged his wiring.

He was seen to drive up in his automobile in front of the building soon after classes convened. Completing his plans, he is believed to have run a wire from his automobile, in which other explosives were stored, to the charges in the basement. Rifle shells, several of which were found near the battered automobile, served as fuses.

Grappled with Farmer

Just before the blast, witnesses said, Huyck ran from the building and grappled with the farmer, who set off the explosive by firing a rifle into the rear of his automobile. The detonation which killed both Kehoe and Huyck, set off the dynamite placed in the basement, burying the teachers and pupils in tons of debris.

Panic ensued among the school with the first rumble of the blast outside. Terrified, both teachers and pupils rushed to the exits, only to be caught beneath the falling walls and ceiling loosened by the second blast. Some leaped to the ground from lower floor windows while others stumbled over the bodies of their playmates in a mad rush for the doorways.

Clare Gates, 12, sobbed out a story of how she had been hurled through a rear window in one of the school rooms. The girl urged rescuers to remove the body of her younger sister, buried under the ruins.

Miss Bernice Sterling and Miss Evelyn Paul, two of the teachers who escaped with only minor injuries, described their recollections of the blasts.

"Without warning," Miss Sterling said, "This terrible explosion came. I saw the bodies of my children hurled against the walls or through the windows. Then I don't remember much what happened. The explosion stunned me and I could not do much until help came.

"An awful crash, followed by crashing in of the walls and the ceilings," was Miss Paul's description of the blast.

Five in One Family

News of disaster spread rapidly for the reverberations were heard in all parts of the village, which has a population of slightly more than three hundred. Hardly a family in the village did not have at least one child enrolled among the school's normal attendance of approximately 200. Five children of one family were among the identified dead last night. Approximately ninety of the Group Funeral For Children Killed By Explosion Being Planned.

BATH, Mich., May 19,—(Canadian Press.)—Mrs. Andrew Kehoe, wife of the maniac who blew up the consolidated school here with the loss of forty-two lives, his farm home and himself, was the first victim of his fury. Portions of her body were found in the ashes of an outbuilding of the Kehoe farm. Her skull was crushed leading to the belief that Kehoe killed her before taking the body into the building to be burned.

One-fourth of the children of this village are dead, as many more are maimed, and the hand of tragedy has reached into virtually every one of the hundred homes of the community as a result of the carefully devised plot of the demented man.

Among the forty-two victims of the village school house yesterday was the perpetrator of the tragedy, Andrew Kehoe, 45 year old farmer, who was once known as a man of brilliance in the community, but whose mind had been diverted to schemes of revenge against the school board because of anger over the school tax levied against him. Kehoe was a member of the Board.

Of those who were killed, thirty-six were pupils in the school which was wrecked by the explosion of dynamite, while forty others were injured. Of the hundred and some odd families of the community there was none who had not lost a child or relative or friend by the fiendish handiwork of Kehoe, who set the death dealing blast while under the delusion that the school officials were conspiring to ruin him.

Tentative arrangements call for a group funeral for the thirty-six children with separate services for the other victims.

Kehoe was a graduate of Michigan State College and was looked upon as a sort of sage here because of his superior schooling.

The mortgage on Kehoe's home was held by Mrs. Lawrence Price of Lansing, widow of Mrs. Kehoe's uncle. Sheriff Fox, who served the foreclosure notice, declared Kehoe at the time said, "If it hadn't been for that $300 school tax, I might have paid off this mortgage."

Mrs. Price said that when she mentioned foreclosing to Kehoe he declared, "Well, if I can't live in that house, no one else will."

All the little victims of the school blast were pupils of the third, fourth, fifth and sixth grades. They ranged in age from six to fourteen years.

MEETING QUIET OF HAVELOCK SCHOOL BOARD

Free From Bitterness and Criticism Prevalent in Last Meeting.

ROUTINE BUSINESS.

Discuss Installation of Waterbury System of Chemical Toilets.

HAVELOCK, May 19. — The regular monthly meeting of the Havelock school board, which was held last night, was free from all bitterness and criticism, which had been most prevalent at the past two or thre meetings.

The meeting passed off very quietly with no fireworks whatever, and only routine busines was dealt with.

The chair was occupied by Dr. Thompson, who was asked to resign at the previous meeting, but who refused to give up the chair. Trustees Scully and Fraser were absent, and the whole proceedings last a little over an hour.

How Grant was Spent.

Principal Hildred reported how the $25.00 grant from the Strathcona Trust, was spent and on motion of Trustees Anderson and Rigby the report was adopted.

Trustee Anderson reported that a vacant lot west of the school grounds was for sale. He was asked to secure a price on this lot as more room is needed for play grounds.

Accounts to the amount of $87.89 were passed and ordered to be paid.

Discuss Toilet System.

A representative of the Griffith Sanitary Toilet Company addressed the board and advised them to install the Waterbury system of chemical toilets in the school. The estimated cost would be $1500 which would amount to a little over half a mill on the ratepayers' tax bill.

The members of the board were in favor of the project and promised to consider his plan.

Misses Grier and Royce, primary teachers were granted leave of absence for May 27th, so as to attend a primary teaching demonstration in Lindsay on that date.

Those present were Chairman Thompson, Trustees Anderson, Roche and Rigby.

OLD MASTERS

Life! I know not what thou art,
But know that thou and I must part;
And when, or how, or where we met,
I own to me's a secret yet.
But this I know, when thou art fled,
Where'er they lay these limbs, this head,
No clod so valueless shall be
As all that then remains of me.

Life! We have been long together,
Through pleasant and through cloudy weather;
'Tis hard to part when friends are dear:
Perhaps 'twill cost a sigh, a tear;—
Then steal away, give little warning.
Choose thine own time;
Say not good night, but in some brighter clime
Bid me good morning!

LYRICS OF LIFE

By Douglas Malloch

SINCE WHEN?

Since when has God climbed down from heaven
And abdicated earth,
Since when the faith that God has given
Become a thing for mirth?
They tell me dawns and days and seasons
Just happen now and then,
All heavenly things have earthly reasons.
It may be so. Since when?

Since when have things our mothers taught us
Become the insincere,
Since when the church to which they brought us
A thing at which to sneer?
They tell us that a sainted mother
We shall not see again,
That this is life, and there's no other.
It may be so. Since when?
Since when has faith become a folly,
God's signals ceased to burn?
Since when has human melancholy
No friend to which to turn?
They tell us there's no honor even,
No good, no grace, in men,
No God, no Christ, no hope, no heaven.
It may be so. Since when?

SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTOLLED AS RICH ASSET TO THE CHURCH

Convention of Sunday Schools Held at Hastings Wednesday.

YEAR OF PROGRESS.

New Members Provided For Churches, Delegates Report.

HASTINGS, May 19 (Special)—The function of the Sunday School in directing the hearts and minds of youth toward the Church was agreeably reflected in the reports presented at the annual convention of the Asphodel Township Sunday School Association held here yesterday in the United Church. It was the common and encouraging experience of the churches represented that they received from the ranks of their Sunday Schools during the year new members who had made profession of their faith in Jesus Christ; aand the several union Sunday Schools recorded large, regular attendances with consequent deepening of the religious life of their communities.

The Sunday Schools represented were Norwood Baptist, Norwood United, Hastings United, Westwood United, South Dummer United, Elgin and Wildman's.

The churches of Norwood and Hastings are included in the Asphodel branch of the Ontario Religious Educational Council. Hastings United School had the largest delegation with twenty present, and Norwood United was second with ten. Mr. Harry Wildman presided and Mr. Edgar Clark, secretary-treasurer, assisted in the work of the convention.

Rev. M. L. Hinton extended greetings and a cordial welcome to Hastings United Church and also conducted the opening devotional exercises. The presence of Rev. J. N. Norton of Toronto, representing the Ontario Religious Educational Council, and his addresses on the full scope and practical operation of the Sunday School were an inspiration to everyone engaged in church work, and his challenging suggestions must have set more than one new goal for the coming year's endeavour. Other ministers who took part in the general discussions wee Rev, J. P. McLennan of Norwood Baptist church and Rev. R. F. Stillman of Norwood United church.

The re-echoing note of the convention was an emphatic declaration of satisfaction with the Sunday School as a department of the church, guiding the footsteps of children from the Cradle Roll through the intermediate grades to the adult classes and across the threshold of the church into its full responsibilities. There was no criticism or encroachment or over-lapping upon the sphere of the church; rather was there desire that the Sunday school might be strengthened its scope extended and its usefulness enter more and more into the homes of the people, confirming their faith in God and invigorating their zeal for the church and its opportunities and obligations.

Reports of Schools.

Mr. J. A. L. Humphries, reporting for Westwood United, said that the Sunday morning classes beginning at 9.30 o'clock were largely attended in spite of that rather early hour. The school has six teachers who have continuously demonstrated their fidelity to duty, and the future of the school is bright and encouraging. Three scholars were received into full membership of the church during the year.

Hastings United School had a very successful year, Mr. I. Bond stated. His own class averaged 87 members. A corps of the Trail Rangers was organized during the year. Mr. Bond paid a special tribute to the teachers of the school for their sustained interest.

Rev. Mr. Stillman spoke for Norwood United School, which he said was in a healthy condition. A number of the members professed their faith during the year.

CALGARY, May 19. — (Canadian Press.)—Fire Tuesday night did heavy damage to the Donald H. Bain company. It is estimated $40,000 worth of sugar stored on the ground floor was destroyed by water.

The burning paper caused dense smoke into which the firemen disappeared, and it was with difficulty that Lieut. Ted Mayhew, Jack Shear and Jake MacDonald were saved by their companions, who lowered them ropes from the second storey. Several other firemen suffered from the smoke.

PILES DISAPPEAR

No Cutting or Salves Needed

External treatments seldom banish Piles and for the very good reason that the cause is inside—bad circulation in affected parts, veins are flabby and bowels walls weakened.

To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation—send fresh, healthy blood to the raw, sensitive membranes. Internal treatment is one safe method. Ointments and other external treatments can't give lasting relief.

J. S. Leonhardt, M.D., a specialist, set at work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and it has proven successful in thousands of cases — so successful that now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists under a money back guarantee. It is a harmless tablet, easy to take, and can always be found at McDermid & Jury, and McDermid Drug Store, who will promptly refund the purchase price if you are dissatisfied.

TALK ON POSTERS IS GIVEN PUPILS

Mrs. F. A. Hodgson Addresses Boys and Girls at South Central.

In connection with a display of about sixty of the "Safety First" sketches submitted from the Province during the recent Poster competition, on view yesterday at the South Central School, Mrs. F. A. Hodgson, of the firm of Hodgson and Willison, gave an intersting talk on "Posters and Poster Advertising," during the first period of the afternoon session.

"Posters," said Mrs. Hodgson, "trace their history back to the prepaper period. In fact, before printing was discovered there was no other form of advertising. Proclamations of kings and prophets, inscribed on parchment and papyri more than three thousand years old, have been exhumed from the ruins of ancient Thebes, on which were written descriptions of runaway slaves and the reward offered for their return. Sheets of lead bearing curses against those persons who had injured the advertiser may be seen to-day in the British Museum. These were discovered in 1858 in the temple of Demeter at Cnidus. This pagan idea still exists in the "nameless placard" of the Chinese. Ask any foreign official in the land of Confucius and he will tell you how, instead of going to law, a Chinaman who fancies himself wronged will place on a conspicuous wall a full account of his grievances. The name of the transgressor is often given but never the accuser, who figures as the friend of Justice. Pompeii and its sister city, exhumed from an age-old grave of lava, are the source of much interesting outdoor advertising material. Moving along through history, we find that the feudal knights of the Middle Ages placed considerable reliance in outdoor advertising. Unable to spell their own names, these individuals employed local craftsmen to construct signs which would serve to advertise the name and station of the advertisers. One Mr. Harebottle accomplished this by having a sign made showing an empty bottle and a leaping hare. Thus he was known as Harebottle. Out of this practice came the coat of arms -and heraldry."

Speaking of the first printed poster, a modest poster sent forth from the printing press of Caxton in 1840, announcing the sale of "Pyes of Salisbury Use, at the Red Pole, in the Almonry, Westminster," Mrs. Hodgson progressed to Jules Cheret of Paris, accredited as the inventor of the first modern poster in colors, while in England, the first artistic poster was made by a man named Fred Walker, for the dramatization of Wilkie Collins' "The Woman in White," and was done in an impressive black and white design.

The speaker referred to the excellent work done by local boys in the recent Poster competition, and spoke of the forthcoming competition in Accident Prevention drawings by the National Safety Council, with headquarters in Chicago, in which she hoped local youths would compete. Mrs Hodgson also alluded to the way in which posters advertise the wares of manufacturers and to the description given of them as the "poor man's art gallery."

WILL PASS OVER NEW BRUNSWICK

Commander De Pinedo To Fly Straight From Quebec To Newfoundland.

QUEBEC, Quebec, May 19. Canadian Press. — New Brunswick has been erased from the itinerary of Commander Francesco de Pinedo, and the Italian aviator will leave here some time to-day to fly straight to Newfoundland.

This was announced to the Canadian Press last night by the four-continent flyer when he was seen at the hotel whither he had been conveyed following his unexpected landing yesterday afternoon. Pinedo's start to-day is conditional upon his getting good weather. He had hopped off from Montreal shortly after noon yesterday and passed over Quebec about an hour and three quarters later. But around four o'clock yesterday afternoon he returned to the provincial capital, and descended. He was hampered by an east wind, rain and fog.

From Trepassy, Nfld., Pinedo and his two companions, Del Prete and Zacchetti, will make the long flight of 1500 miles to Horta, in the Azores, and from there to Lisbon and Rome.

Asked if he was nervous about this part of the flight in view of the fate that had overtaken Nungesser and Coli, Pinedo simply shrugged his shoulders. Pinedo could give no detailed account of his daily flight. Some days he had flown 2000 miles, he said. "On other days," he added, "I've flown one minute."

Pinedo landed yesterday afternoon near the mouth of the St. Charles River and close to the hull of the Calgaric, outward bound. He was immediately towed to shore and a reception was hurriedly extended by Quebec civic and other representatives

SEEK WRECKAGE.

Believe Might Offer Clue To Fate of Missing Airmen.

BOSTON, Mass., May 19 (Canadian Press)—Coast guard vessels and planes which yesterday sought the bit of wreckage reported Tuesday about 100 miles off here on the chance it might afford a clue to the fate of Captains Nungesser and Coli had reported no success last night. Captain S. F. Ing of the steamer Bellopline, who made an ineffectual attempt to take the wreckage in tow, had said he thought it resembled the wing of an aeroplane.

ORDER OF THE EASTERN STAR "ACROSS CANADA" TOUR MEETING WITH EXCELLENT RESPONSE.

The personally conducted all-expense tour across Canada organized by the Order of the Eastern Star of the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec is being well received by members of the Order.

The party will travel by Canadian National Railways special train leaving Toronto, Thursday, July 21st and the itinerary calls for stopovers in the principal cities of Western Canada, and also in the wonderful and magnificent scenery of the Canadian Rockies, including that gem of the Rockies, Jasper National Park. Certainly no better occasion could be chosen in which to make such a trip as this Diamond Jubilee Year, the sixtieth anniversary of Confederation particularly by the members of the Order of the Eastern Star, who have the welfare of the Dominion so much at heart. The trip will be long remembered by those fortunate enough to enjoy it, not only on account of the wonderful story of Canada which will be unfolded before their eyes, but also because of the pleasant and congenial company which will add much to the pleasures of the trip.

Descriptive booklet and reservations may be secured from the Passenger Traffic Department of the Canadian National Railways at Toronto ,or from any Agent of the Company. 2d-7-19

PHASES DISCUSSED.

Understood Conference on Border Ruling Will Be Resumed Soon.

WASHINGTON, May 19 (Canadian Press)—The latest phases of the border immigration dispute were discussed yesterday between Hon. Frank B. Kellogg, secretary of state, and Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian minister, when the latter paid an informal call at the state department.

It is understood that the formal conference between the representatives of the two countries, adjourned last Friday, will be resumed soon.

KILL OFFICER BANK HOLD-UP

WOUND BY-STANDER.

BEGGS, Okla., May 19 (A.P.).—Paying a return visit to his home town, Matthew Kimes, notorious outlaw, and his gang yesterday robbed two banks here of nearly $18,000 and shot their way out, leaving the town marshal dead, and a woman, who apparently frustrated the robbery of a third bank, probably fatally wounded.

Officials of both looted banks said the leader of the bandits undoubtedly was Kimes, elusive young desperado whose sensational exploits have been a modern parallel to the careers of Jesse James and Al Jennings.

Dashing into the little town yesterday morning in three motor cars, the nine members of the gang divided into groups and drove up to the three banks, two of the banks, the Farmers' National and the First National, were invaded immediately.

"Throw up you hands," came the command almost simultaneously in the two banks, and employees and others in both institutions complied. Both bandit groups then began a systematic search for money.

Warned Marshal

Mrs. Charles Campbell, a shopper, left her children in an automobile and ran into a pool hall crying an alarm. M. C. McAnnally, marshal, went imemdiately to the Farmers' National Bank, arriving just as the robbers emerged.

McAnnally opened fire on the racing figures and a hail of bullets answered him, one piercing his breast and killing him instantly. Mrs. Campbell was struck in the head by a bullet and believed to have been fatally wounded.

The three bandits who had parked their car in front of the American State Bank fled when the shooting started, without attempting to rob the institution.

Attracted by the shots, townspeople poured into the street. The men hastily gathered up all available firearms, loaded into motor cars and took up pursuit. Within an hour one of the bandit cars had been found abandoned eight miles west of Beggs, near the ranch on which Kimes spent his boyhood.

The country into which the outlaws fled is rugged and heavily timbered, affording many ideal hiding places.

Escaped Jail

Kimes led the band that robbed the Farmers' National Bank of Beggs of $20,000 a year ago. He was captured in the Ozark Mountains of Western Arkansas shortly afterward, following a running fight with officers in which Perry Chuculate, Indian deputy sheriff of Sequcah County, Okla., was killed. Kimes and his brother, George, were convicted of manslaughter in connection with Chuculate's death. George was sent to the penitentiary for 25 years and Matthew was rescued by his cohorts from the Sequcah County jail in a daring raid.

Encourage Hunting And Prevent Crime

BEAR MOUNTAIN, N.Y., May 19.—Encouragement of hunting as a preventative of crime has an advocate in John Burnham, president of the American Game Protective Association.

"The instinct of the chase is inborn in some of our best people," he told the national conference of state parks, now meeting here. "The state ought to provide them public hunting grounds for the natural exercise of this instinct. Otherwise the instinct is likely to be perverted, making bandits out of men whom Nature intended to be mighty hunters before the Lord."

DOCTORS ADVICE TO THE SICK

Wash Away All Poisons in Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bowels Before Breakfast

To feel your best day in and day out, no more headaches, indigestion, gas on stomach, bilious attacks, rheumatism, kidney pains, bad breath, you must bathe your self inside. Start today by taking one Tanol Calomel tablet before meals or two at bedtime, then next morning drink a glass or two of hot water to wash from the stomach, liver, kidney and bowels all the previous day's waste, poison and toxins before more food is taken in. Get a few Tanol tablets from F. C. Weber, Charlotte street, Peterborough. They are harmless to take, do not nauseate, no bad after effects, no salts or seidlitz next morning, like ordinary calomel. Then you can eat better, sleep better, work better, think better and look better.

Today's Useful Hint on Jam and Jelly Making

By Elizabeth Palmer

Once you have tried the new short-boil method of making jams and jellies with Certo you will discard the old, uncertain way as an out of date piece of kitchen drudgery.

Certo is a pure fruit product—the jellying substance of fruit refined and bottled.

Certo jams and jellies jell perfectly—just tenderly firm every time—never a failure. They taste better, because the delicate, delicious, fresh flavor of your fruit is not boiled away. They look prettier, because you preserve their bright, natural color. You get half again more jam or jelly from your fruit because you save the juice which used to boil away.

A book of nearly one hundred recipes for delicious jams, jellies and marmalades comes with each bottle of Certo. Even if you are not an experienced cook, you can make perfect jams and jellies every time the Certo way.

FAREWELL PARTY.

Tendered Mr. and Mrs. William Casey on Departure For East Emily.

EAST EMILY, May 19.—On Monday evening, May 16th, a large number of the members of Bethel United church friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Casey on the eve of their moving from our midst to enjoy a social evening with Mr. and Mrs. Casey and family, and also to present them with a small token with regret of their leaving the neighbourhood.

Mr. Milton Sherin read the address which was as follows and Mr. Harry Jackson made the presentation:—

May 16th, 1927.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Casey and family, Our Dear Friends:

We, your friends and neighbours, who have gathered here this evening, felt that we could not let you go from our midst without in some slight way at least, extending to you our good wishes and appreciation of you, as co-workers in our church and community.

As caretakers of Bethel church, as well as in all other departments of church work, we have always found you willing and glad to do your part to the best of your ability.

We are sorry to lose you, one and all, but realize that our loss will be some one else's gain and we are glad to know you are not going so far away, but that we may meet to exchange greetings at least once in a while.

We ask you to accept this purse of money as a very slight token of our friendship and with it please accept our prayers that God will bless you and your little family with health and prosperity, where ever you may go, for we know that after all it matters not so much in this world "where we are" as it is "what we are" that counts.

Signed on behalf of the members of Bethel church and your neighbours.

O. M. Sherin,
Harry L. Jackson,
Eugene Switzer,

Mr. Casey made a very suitable reply on behalf of his wife and family, and Mrs. Casey's mother, Mrs. Skuce, who lives with them.

The evening was spent in games and music, after which refreshments were served.

Every person retired to their respective homes after a pleasant evening spent.

MUSICAL RECITAL

CAVAN, May 19.—The pupils of Mrs. L. Winslow and Mr. Wagner gave a very pleasing recital in the parish hall, Ida, on Wednesday evening.

The hall was nicely filled with the pupils, parents and friends, as well as to a good musical programme.

The pupils of Mrs. Winslow, many of whom are quite young, and who were making their first appearance in public, acquitted themselves remarkably well, doing great credit to themselves and teacher.

Mr. Wagner's pupils played the Hawaian guitar. Their music was of a kind not so often heard in rural parts as is the piano and was thoroughly enjoyed.

Mr. Wagner played the ukelele with one of his pupils, J. McIvor, playing the mouth organ.

They played in chorus on the guitar.

God Save The King.

Little Miss Juan Shields, on behalf of the Mount Pleasant pupils presented Mrs. Winslow with a beautiful bouquet of roses to which Mr. Winslow made suitable reply, thanking her pupils and stating what pleasure she had derived from preparing her pupils for the recital.

Mr. Jas. Paul moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Wagner and Mrs. Winslow and all assisting in the programme for the very enjoyable evening's entertainment provided.

This called forth a hearty applause. Lunch was served in the basement.

SUNDAY SCHOOL

Wildman's or Donegal Sunday School, as the president preferred to designate it, comprises six classes, Mr. J. Starke informed the convention. There are 70 members on roll and 11 on the cradle roll, with an average attendance of 45. Several scholars became fully united with the church during the year.

Elgin School reported 114 members, whose average attendance was 51 last year. The financial receipts of the school amounted to $314, with a balance of $8.64. Miss Eunice Morrow read the Elgin School report.

Main Department.

Mrs. A. E. Metcalfe asserted that the children's division was the most important department of the Sunday School. The children of the primary classes were receptive and responsive, and in those years the first religious impressions were usually permanent. Mrs. Metcalfe was opposed to grouping into one class all children from five to eleven or twelve years.

Rev. Mr. Horton dwelt upon the importance of teacher training, the home department and temperance and missionary interests. There have been many instances in which the home department has been the means of a real revival in a community, and as an avenue to the church it deserved serious and unflagging support.

The teacher training course is a splendid equipment for Sunday school teachers. In some places short courses have been held for three or four-day periods, intensive instruction being afforded to teachers meeting at some central place in a township. Mr. Horton promised every encouragement to those teachers who would undertake this self-improvement, and urged that it be adopted as an objective in this year's progress. Incidentally, it was brought out that the normal school students take the teacher training course, and most of the schools represented here yesterday have members qualifying in that course.

A Flourishing School.

Mr. H. A. Thistlethwaite, superintendent of Elgin Union Sunday School, spoke on the co-operation of the home and Sunday school. He endorsed Mr. Horton's recommendation of the home department as an agency for the promotion of faith. Elgin School has a home department of seventeen members, a force that won Mr. Horton's congratulation. Some of the church school representatives reported that they had been unable to maintain their home departments. The contrast with the Elgin School's achievement was all the more striking. To the home department, Mr. Thistlethwaite attributed much of the accomplishment for Christ in his own district.

"We had got into a deep rut," he said. "Then something happened, and I know that our home department was the best thing that ever happened to our Sunday School."

"The things the Sunday School stands for should be taught in every home by the parents. The father and mother are indifferent about religion, if they spend Sunday in any old way, if they permit their children to suit themselves about going to Sunday School, then you may be sure that is the way the children will grow up."

The speaker advised teachers to take an interest in the boys and girls seven days in the week, not just on Sundays; notice them at play or at work and keep alive the friendly, helpful spirit manifested in the Sunday school.

The afternoon program included a duet by Mrs. Gordon Faux and Mr. J. C. Wilson.

A DOUBLE BENEFIT.

The experiment that the Ontario Government proposes to carry out this summer by which some 100 settlers will be moved from three townships in Haliburton and placed on better and more promising land in New Ontario will be followed with keen interest.

If it proves successful the scheme will be enlarged and other people similarly situated will be given a chance to establish new homes under conditions that offer a much more favourable opportunity to succeed.

Two great benefits will follow.

Settlers who have been fighting against insurmountable obstacles to make farming profitable in a section of the Province totally unsuitable for agriculture will be placed in a position where they can look forward to prosperity.

At the same time the land from which they have been removed will be reserved for forestry purposes, and eventually will materially add to the wealth of the country.

THE RED CROSS DRIVE.

"All their work, and in particular their pioneer work in the North, their outpost hospitals, their care for disabled soldiers and their Junior League are of very real and very great value to the nation, and deserve the assistance of every Canadian," is the tribute paid to the Canadian Red Cross Society by Hon. Mr. Justice Riddell, President of the Canadian Social Hygiene Council, in announcing the postponement of that organization's appeal for funds in order that the Red Cross campaign next month may have the right-of-way.

The Red Cross drive for funds, the first made since the war years, should be heartily supported in all parts of Canada.

The peace-time activities of the society are, as Mr. Justice Riddell has pointed out, of great value to this country.

Here in this section of Ontario we are able to judge at first hand of what the Red Cross outpost hospitals mean to districts shut off from hospital service.

In the hospitals recently established at Apsley and at Bancroft the society has provided very complete plants that will be of immense service to the people of the surrounding district.

When the call comes the response to the Red Cross appeal should be on a par with the service rendered by this splendid organization.

A GRADUAL PROCESS.

The issuing of liquor permits began in Peterborough this morning, although the sale of alcoholic beverages under Government auspices will not commence until June 1st.

Chairman Hanna has refused to be hurried in his launching out of the Government sale of liquor, and while the policy he has been followed may appear unduly slow to some impatient supporters of Government control, there is no question of the wisdom of his course.

The issuing of permits well in advance of the opening of the Government stores serves to prevent any unseemly rush, and the Hanna policy of a gradual and slow process of introducing the new system will have the effect of discouraging attempts to celebrate the inauguration of Government control.

Mr. Hanna is well aware that a wild rush upon the Government stores when they are opened would be a decided black-eye for the new method of dealing with the liquor problem, and his handling of the whole matter is designed to introduce the control system as quietly and smoothly as possible.

In that aim he should be strongly supported, and by nobody more heartily than by those who look upon the opening of Government stores as a restoration to them of a privilege that has been lost for some time.

"TELLING THE BEES."

There are many ways in which a municipality may get into the limelight, but it has remained for the Town Council of Pembroke to hit upon an absolutely novel method of advertising their community.

The town fathers have solemnly decreed, by means of a bylaw, that the keeping of bees within the town limits shall be prohibited.

Grievous complaints as to the annoyance and inconvenience caused to citizens by flights of bees were responsible for the action of the Council, who doubtless have no objection to honey but who feel that it is their duty to protect their constituents.

It was even alleged that worshippers in church had been stung.

Such atrocities could not be overlooked.

There could be nothing more uncomfortable than be awakened just as the preacher reaches his "and fifthly" by a parking bee.

And those who stay awake, while they must take a chance of being stung occasionally by a remark from the pulpit, do not come to church to be stung by anything else.

The matter will, of course, wind up in the courts, where it is safe to predict that the lawyers will get all the honey and somebody is sure to get stung by something more deadly than a bee.

MR. TASCHEREAU RETURNS.

Time does not wither nor custom stale Liberal Governments in Quebec. The snows of thirty winters have melted into spring since the last Conservative Government yielded office, and yesterday Mr. Taschereau was returned to power, secure for four years more. Curiously enough, not even the law of diminishing returns, as prevalent in politics as in economics, made anybody expect something different. The reason was that the issue in Quebec yesterday was not really between real Liberalism on the one hand and real Conservatism on the other. It was between a Government that uses the label of Liberalism, but which is essentially conservative, and an Opposition that calls itself Conservative, but which is really merely opportunist. Principles, policies and parties were hopelessly mixed.

Mr. Taschereau is about as Liberal as Mr. Joynson Hicks, Britain's Die-hard Home Secretary. Beside him, judging from their records, Mr. Howard Ferguson, Ontario's so-called Tory, is a flaming radical. But that does not matter—in Quebec. The magic which the name and fame of Laurier gave to the word "Liberalism" in French Canada is still mighty, and when to that advantage Mr. Taschereau added the record of a Government that has been able, practical and efficient, and which the breath of scandal has not touched, he became invincible. Liberals supported him because he called himself Liberal, Conservatives because he stood for conservative policies, people of no particular party allegiance because of his administrative competence. Thus he was able to command the support of a solid Liberal press on the one hand, and of the English Conservative press, as well as of French Conservative papers like La Patrie and L'Evenement on the other.

Mr. Taschereau is a unique figure in Canadian public life. Of a family that, over a period of a century or more, has made distinguished contribution to both Church and State, he was born to the purple. But although an aristocrat in politics, and temperamentally antagonistic to the arts of the demagogue, he has a marvellous hold upon the masses. While Taschereau is a realist, and in many ways a materialist, believing in economic development and in commercial progress, it is from the walled and steepled city of Quebec, with its mediaevalism and traditions and storied past, not from the turrets of St. James street, that he appeals to his Province. In Ontario Mr. Howard Ferguson is Prime Minister and the rest of us his followers, constituents. In Quebec Mr. Taschereau is the "Grand Seigneur," and his constituents are his people. It is a difference with a tremendous distinction; one that English-speaking Canada is too liable to forget.

Canadians more interested in good government than in parties will not greatly worry over the return of Taschereau. Quebec, in recent years, has been in many ways an example to the rest of Canada—sane, moderate, constructive. So long as Mr. Taschereau continues that sort of government, no one, either in Quebec or out of it, need feel deeply concerned regarding what he labels himself.—Ottawa Journal.

A WAR OF IDEAS.

The raid made upon the Soviet headquarters in London is a phase of a twentieth century problem. Russia was regarded in the nineteenth century as an enemy or a possible enemy of Great Britain because of the ambitions of its rulers to conquer new territories. Today it is looked upon as the stronghold of Communism. War, if it should break out, would be not merely for certain bits of territory, but for conflicting ideas. Hence the situation is far more subtle than that which confronted statesmen in the last century. At one time the French Revolution gave rise to a somewhat similar problem. The spread of revolutionary ideas was dreaded by our ancestors just as the spread of Bolshevism is dreaded today. Napoleon changed the character of the conflict; he fought with military forces, and his new ideas were mainly of a military kind. He really helped to destroy the revolutionary idea, and when he was finally defeated it was an easy matter to re-establish the European thrones and the old system.

In the twentieth century the situation was reversed. Revolution followed instead of preceding the war, and the Bolshevists had the advantage of establishing their system while Europe was weary of the physical conflict. The situation was and is such as baffles the masters of old-fashioned statecraft because war is being waged within the field of ideas. Protests against Russian propaganda may be effective to some extent, but Communism is not a racial or national idea, but one which stirs the feelings of humanity all the world over, arousing either enthusiasm or intense opposition. Fascism, for instance, is a product of Bolshevism, one extreme giving rise to the other. The Labor Government in Great Britain fell because of alleged sympathy with Bolshevist ideas, though there was nothing in its policy or in its personnel to justify such a fear. The general strike was regarded as a product of those ideas, and the bill for curbing the trade unions is defended as a means of opposing them. But an old-fashioned war with Russia would not settle the question one way or the other. Bits of territory might be lost and won, ports blockaded, men killed and wounded, cities bombarded; and when the exhausted combatants faced each other after the war, nothing would be settled. Russia could not break Great Britain's power on sea, and the vast Russian territory would defy conquest, as it did against the first Napoleon. If we try to imagine a possible war between Fascist Italy and Bolshevist Russia, we are confronted with the same probable result. The combatants could injure each other, but conquest on either side would be impossible. After the war each nation would go its own way, working out its own ideas.

There are said to be two Russian parties, one still trying to spread Communistic ideas all over the world and bring about a world revolution and the other content to maintain those ideas in Russia. It may be assumed that the peasants of Russia, who compose the bulk of its population, are for the less ambitious policy. Their desire would be to keep and till their own lands, rather than go crusading after the lands of others, and trying to establish all over the world a system for which they have no enthusiasm. Russia is surely a large enough field for economic experiment and there is little fear of outside interference with the plan. But Bolshevist fanaticism takes no heed of these considerations, and its dreams are far removed from common sense. The world today needs peace—not only international peace but friendly relations between all sorts and conditions of men. One does not need to be a Communist in order to recognize that industrial conditions in Great Britain are far from satisfactory, but the solution is to be found in the working out of British ideas of justice, not in imported ideas, wrangling over which is an impediment to progress. It is true that the economic problem is universal, affecting all humanity, but in working out the solution, regard must be paid to national characteristics and ways of thinking. The result of Bolshevist propaganda in any country outside of Russia is that any one having advanced ideas of social justice is liable to be branded as a Bolshevist. Timid and conservative people are afraid of any kind of social reform, just as early in the last century the French Revolution scared the same kind of people away from the most moderate political reforms, far behind those which have since been accomplished.—London Advertiser.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

It must be admitted that it has been wet enough in Ontario this month, even if the Government liquor stores haven't been opened yet.

It costs $2.00 and a climb up the Court House hill to get a liquor permit. But some people at least will figure that the privilege is worth the money and the exertion.

"At any rate," says The Toronto Globe, which does not usually offer any encouragement to those who want a legal chance to drink, "while the thirsty are waiting the stuff is aging."

The Detroit Automobile Club has discovered that seventeen inmates of an insane asylum have driving licenses. We always knew that there were people driving cars who should be inmates of such institutions.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND DULLNESS.

MONTREAL, Quebec, May 19. — Canadian Press. — Extreme dullness again marked the export trade in grain here yesterday, there being practically no demand from foreign buyers.

The only business of importance in the local cash grain market was the sale of 100,000 bushels of No. 1 northern wheat for export account at 13c per bushel over the Winnipeg May option, c.i.f., Montreal.

Owing to the further advance in corn futures at Chicago, spot prices for cash corn were marked up another 2c per bushel. Car-lots of Argentine were quoted at $1.04, American No. 3 yellow at $1.02, and sample corn at 99c per bushel, ex-store. Canadian western oats were unchanged.

The local and export trade in spring wheat grades of flour was again inactive but the tone was firm. Winter wheat flour was steady with a small trade passing.

The demand for all lines of millfeed slackened off somewhat, but prices were unchanged. The inquiry for standard grades of rolled oats showed no improvement.

A weaker feeling developed in the hay market and prices were reduced 50c per ton. The weakness was attributed to the liberal supplies coming forward and the limited demand.

The trade in eggs continued fairly active and values were steady. The receipts were 2876 cases.

A moderate amount of business was done in potatoes and the undertone was firm. Car lots of Quebec grades were quoted at $2 to $2.10 per bag of 90 lbs. in bulk, ex-track.

The weakness which had characterized the butter market of late was again the main feature to-day and prices scored a further decline of ¾c per pound. The demand continued quiet. The receipts were 142 packages.

The foreign demand for cheese continued of a limited character but the local trade was fair and values were firm. The receipts were 1699 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 19 (Canadian Press).—Wheat and corn scored yesterday largely as a result of adverse weather for wheat seeding in Canada and for corn planting in the United States. Corn reached new high price records for the season, closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 1½ to 2 1-8 to 2¼c net higher, with corn 1 1-8 to 2c up; oats at 3-8 to 5-8c gain and provisions varying from 5c decline to a rise of 27c.

Aeports of general rains over the Canadian prairies accompanied by snow and by lower temperatures were taken to indicate a further serious handicap for the already much delayed start of the Canadian wheat crop. Notwithstanding that fair and warmer conditions were predicted, the outlook was for an important curtailment of acreage in Canada, and this prospect was emphasized by less favorable crop reports concerning domestic wheat southwest, although assertions were made in some quarters that wheat losses in Oklahoma and Texas would be offset by gains in Nebraska and Colorado.

Corn trading was on a big scale. Incentive to buy came not only from unfavorable weather but also from estimates that farm reserves of corn in nine surplus states are 343,000,000 bushels less than last year. Oats derived firmness from corn.

Provisions were dull but were helped by grain strength, which more than counterbalanced lower quotations on hogs.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

SHORTHAND

(By Dr. Frank Crane.)

There is much more reason for a person learning shorthand now than there ever was in any previous time in our history. The demand is greater. There is a constant cry going up from business men asking for competent assistants. They appeal for colleges and institutions of learning to give them material for private secretaries.

The typewriter has enormously increased the business of writing letters, but the shorthand secretary is even more in demand.

The head of a business finds himself overloaded with the making of speeches, the attendance of conferences and other things incidental to big business. He needs somebody who knows all the details of his office. Nobody is well equipped to attend to this as one who knows shorthand.

Instead of being merely a clerk's job with no prospects of advancement, it is a place in which one can advance rapidly.

When a manager of a new department or some one else in a responsible position is needed, it is natural for the boss to turn to one who knows all the details of his business, and the shorthand secretary is the logical candidate.

Of course, shorthand is not everything. Nothing can take the place of efficiency and personality. But shorthand is a good staff to lean upon, and no one is the worse for it.

In these days, when the art has been brought to perfection, the method of learning shorthand is much more simplified. It is by the efforts of Mr. Gregg and others that the science of shorthand has been made easier to learn and quicker to practise.

If one may devote his time to it for a while and give to it all his energy, he will be securing an aid which will stand him in good stead in many instances.

"If you allow your vision to be limited to the point of your pencil and you keep your audition, as the radio operator would say, attuned only to the sound of your typewriter and the vocalization of the dictating machine, stenography will not do you much good. But if you take up stenography with a definite purpose, with a willingness at all times to do more than your employer literally expects of you, and you possess the ability to see beyond the limitations of your present job, you will succeed in the secretarial in spite of every obstacle."

The fact that shorthand was used by such men as Woodrow Wilson, Cortelyou, Elihu Root and others shows that it is not merely a clerk's equipment. It is useful to a man in any profession, even to the President of the United States.

PROHIBITING MINCE PIE

In the United States there are laws prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors. There is a difference of opinion, however, regarding what constitutes an intoxicating drink.

The effect of alcohol is at first to stimulate and then to depress. If too much strong liquor is taken at one time, the stimulation will develop to the stage of intoxication, but there seems to be no set rule which applies to all individuals alike.

In the case of mince pie, the only excuse for its use is that it tastes good. No one has ever claimed that it brought even temporary stimulation. The result is always a depressed, enervated, dopey feeling, but we are going to be saved from all this if a Senator from Kansas has his way and succeeds in passing an Anti-Mince Pie Law. To quote from a recent speech he made:

"A slab of mince pie is very likely to give a child—even an old stager like me, or the Governor of the state—a bad case of indigestion and probably nightmare. In the case of a mere youth, loss of sleep stunts proper growth and development, tends to create a bad disposition and nervousness, and the first thing a person knows the whole system has been undermined and a pie-eating habit formed that often lasts a person all through life.

"I believe the only solution is a law forbidding the possession of mincemeat in Kansas and rigid penalties for making, serving or selling mincemeat in our state."

Although I consider mince pie causes more harm than good, I am sure it would prove useless to make a law prohibiting its use just as our other prohibition laws have proved so ineffective.

But, we do need education through our newspapers, public schools, and other educational institutions on the proper use of the different kinds of food with more emphasis being placed upon the use of good food rather than effort wasted in denouncing foods of an inferior quality.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

A LITTLE MUSIC, PROFESSOR!

The new music, such as "Ballet Mechanique," "Flivver 10,000,000" and "Pacific .91," written for riveters, motor cutouts, airplane propellers, bells, locomotive whistles and foundries, is all right but it doesn't go far enough. The ideal will be reached when the vinegar makers collaborate on a few notes that really are sour. . . . A "knockout" could be written in the Chicago stockyards. It might be called "Adventures of Cow No. 2,923,456." Is it necessary to say that thismust be for horns only? . . . Another number, representing factories, could be done in one of the cash register plants. It could be called "Titillating Till," and a good place for an opening audition would be Edinburgh, Scotland. . . . What this country needs is a symphony that illustrates the racket created by a deaf and dumb man sewing up a sofa pillow.

Grain and Hay Doing Well — Some Land Very Wet.

WARSAW NEWS.

WARSAW, May 19.—The cold, damp weather has necessitated keeping stock in the stables, and feeding them, when otherwise they could be outside, and find plenty of pasture. Those who have feed for sale, have no trouble selling it.

There are still some fields of parts of fields too wet to sow. Indeed, some report land dryer two weeks ago than now.

There is promise of abundance of hay and, except where too wet, fall-wheat is doing well.

The woods are filled with wild flowers, but the white trilliums are not nearly so large as usual. Rhubarb and asparagus are developing slowly.

For about a week the telephone service has been rather poor. The thunderstorm seemed to do mischief.

At a meeting of the Executive of the Woman's Institute, held on Saturday evening, the following program for six months was arranged. The regular meeting on June 9 will be omitted, as Mrs. Lowe will be here the following week, June 15, Wednesday, in Warsaw Town Hall, Lakefield Junior Institute will also attend. Mrs. Lowe a graduate of Toronto General Hospital, who has been superintendent of more than one hospital, and is much interested in Institute work, will be the speaker. All women are cordially invited.

July 14 will have a roll-call answered by "Hints for a Hope-Chest," and a maple cream contest, music, reading and a ten cent lunch.

The August meeting will take the form of an ordinary social picnic on August 11.

On September 8, the Norwood Institute is invited to visit us, and provide the program. Lunch will be served.

On October 13 the roll-call will be answered by a reply to the question, "If you could have one more labor-saving device, what would it be?"

Miss Stewart is expected to address the ladies on "Prevention of tuberculosis and care of it, if it has developed."

November 10 will ask for suggestion for next program as replies to the roll-call, with the main subject a question drawer.

Miss Alexander, who conducted the class in First Aid and Nursing, will speak in Prince Edward County, as summer series delegate in June.

SETTLING UP DAY IMPORTANT EVENT

People of Apsley District Receive Pay For Wood Cutting.

APSLEY, May 19.—The Peterborough Lumber Co. had their "settling up" day in Apsley on Tuesday, and the farmers reaped the harvest of their winter's lumbering work. It is only perhaps when settling up day comes that the people of the district fully realize what an important factor the lumber companies are in their existence, as without the revenue derived from the timber cut on their farms and bought by the lumberman, it would be difficult to get a bare livelihood. The Peterborough Lumber Co. alone has disbursed tens of thousands of dollars this season amongst the fifty or more jobbers who have been getting out timber, and the company has the largest drive it has ever taken out of this country. The Purdy Co. has also a big drive going down Eels Creek, besides a great quantity of hardwood, and other timber on Loon Lake.

Prices this season have been the highest ever obtained, and general satisfaction at the result of the winter's work is felt by all.

Preparations are going apace for the formal opening of the Red Cross Hospital on June 10th. On Friday, an ornamental fence was erected along the front, the grounds were graded and levelled, eavetroughing put on the building and the sign, painted by J. J. Turner and Sons, erected. All this was voluntary work, those taking part being the members of the committee, and Messrs. A. Downing, Ben Coones, F. Tanner and J. Phillips. Mr. Webster, Ontario Land Surveyor, of Peterborough, also rendered valuable aid.

The Peterborough Red Cross Society which has done so much in equipping the hospital sent a fine supply of towels this week for which the committee is most grateful.

The nurses have been busy inspecting the local schools. A considerable number of cases of diseased tonsils is reported.

"MICHAEL STROGOFF."

A massive and thrilling spectacle has been contrived in the filming of Jules Verne's famous work, "Michael Strogoff." The stage play of this name was on the boards many long years ago, but it remained for the art of the silver sheet to transmute in all its picturesqueness the tale of the romantic and gallant emissary of the Czar, Michael Strogoff, played by Ivan Moskine, whose presentation of the character is outstanding. The cast is excellent, and the picture carries with it a foreign touch that sets it slightly above the usual run of stereotyped American and English productions. The characters as portrayed, the backgrounds and settings, the episodes in the career of the famous courier, all fit in admirably with the story. It is spectacular and massive, with vivid color to many of the scenes that seems to make them more realistic than the ordinary black and white of the silver sheet.

Ivan Moskine, picturesque and vital in his portrayal, is Michael Strogoff, courier of the Czar Alexander Second, bearing a letter to the Czar's brother, entrenched in the beleaguered city of Irkutsk, in Siberia. On his way, he encounters Nadia Fedor, a beautiful girl journeying to Irkutsk to join her father, a general in the Russian army. Nathalie Kovahoe has this part, and her Russian beauty adds another foreign touch to the production. Many strange adventures await the two, who are entangled in the web of Tartar spies over-running the country. Ivan Ogareff, a traitor to the Russian cause, heads the Tartar hordes of the Grand Khan, and into his hands Michael falls, along with his aged mother and Nadia. The picturesqueness and splendor, the barbaric magnificence of the Khan's camp, and the weird festivals which have been arranged to celebrate their victories over the Russians, make a colorful interlude in the picture, while a savage scene is enacted in the torturing of Michael. The sombre note of the picture, in keeping with the Russian atmosphere of the story, is emphasized here, and later, there is more savagery in the terrific fight staged between Michael and Ivan, in the Grand Duke's quarters at Irkutsk. Throughout the picture runs the thread of foreign intrigue and warfare, with the brutal Tartar hordes in bold relief, wearing their furred turbans and queer striped cassocks. A glimpse into another land and another time when Russia still harbored its Imperial masters, is afforded by this picture, which has been filmed with an eye to the magnificent and the barbaric. It is one of those spectacular efforts of the silver sheet in which every detail of artistic presentation has been studied and utilized.

The comedy is ludicrous in the extreme, with plenty of fun in a Yiddish romance, complicated by a Black-Hand bombing trio and a trained seal that does some odd stunts in matter-of-fact fashion.—Jeanette.

Only nine presidents of the United States were not college men. They were Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Van Buren, Taylor, Fillmore, Lincoln, Johnson and Cleveland.

THREE MURDERS WORRY POLICE

London's Reputation As Almost Crimeless City Is At Stake.

LONDON, May 19.— (United Press).— Three unsolved murders within a week have marred London's record as a relatively crimeless city and harassed Scotland Yard detectives.

In addition to the murders the raid on the Soviet trade delegation headquarters occupied a large section of Scotland Yard's force for several days during the week, giving the Yard the busiest seven days it has had in recent years.

Two men and women were the murder victims. The Charing Cross Trunk mystery, in which the dismembered body of a young woman was found in a trunk checked at Charing Cross, railway station, was the most sensational case. Although police had seevral descriptions of the probable slayer, they have been unable to capture him.

Harold Smith, young locomotive fireman, was found dead in railway carriage at Finsbury Park, a suburb, his head had been crushed with a heavy instrument. James Storton, watchman, was beaten to death with an iron bar at Sanderstead another suburb.

Eight cases were on the calendar of old Bailey Police Court, when its May session opened yesterday. It was the heaviest docket in years. Two manslaughter, four attempted murder and five wounding cases were on the list.

COMMITTEES ARE

wiped out altogether.

Organization Necessary.

Organization was necessary. There was no town which did not contain some men who were not being placed in their just category as regards disability.

During the war they had often seen the officers or some other comrade carry the pack of a soldier who was worn out and unable to carry on himself. They had often seen some such sights in France or Flanders. Did they not think that the same spirit was still needed today? Some people said that the Pensions Act was fair. It was fair, but not generous. In many cases, however, the category was grossly unfair. If a man was 100% incapacitated, and was passed as being only 40% disabled that was not right by any means. There was an appeal Board, but it could not say whether a man was 50% or 100% disabled. All it could decide was whether a man's incapacity was due to the War or not. If this Board decided in a man's favor, he had then to go before a Board which had often turned him down before. If this Board decided that he was only 10% disabled, he had no further opportunity to go before the Appeal Board.

It was essential that they should get the right to appeal against Assessment. They could not afford to trust to the tender mercies of any Government. Under the Pensions Act, as at first passed, the Dominion Government agreed to assume responsibility for the pensions of service men who were resident in Canada in 1914, but had joined Imperial units rather than the Canadian Corps.

In 1925, someone with an eye to economy thought it would be a good idea to amend section 47 of the Pensions Act. The result was that in some cases widows of such men had their pensions cut from $110 per month to $45 per month. Canadian-born wives and Canadian-born children were the sufferers by the fact that dependants were reduced to existing on the meagre Imperial pension. If pensions could be cut one way they could be cut another way. No municipality or fraternal organization sent a deputation to protest against these changes. Ex-service men had to do it themselves, and if they did not take action they would have to take what was coming to them.

Outlines Reasons.

Mr. Shields outlined 10 reasons why ex-service men who were out of the organization should affiliate themselves with it.

To maintain the legislation enacted on behalf of ex-service men in respect to pensions, care and preference in Government employment. He mentioned as an instance of the need of the organization the case of a woman, the widow of a dead soldier who was reduced to an Imperial pension of $35 per month, who died of a broken heart on the very day representatives of the Legion were arguing her case at Winnipeg. Ex-service men had been promised preference in Government jobs. During the last four years the numbers of Veterans in the Civil Service had fallen from 55% of the whole to 15%. That was the manner in which this promise was fulfilled.

To advocate the effective administration of Acts passed on behalf of veterans and their dependants. Too much had been left to the interpretation of legal minds; indeed he had been told by a lawyer that even the average lawyer found difficulty in fully comprehending the provisions of the Pensions Act.

To retain the comradeships formed during the war and to advance such comradeships throughout the British Empire. No organization had such an initiation as theirs. It was initiated in the blood and mud of the battle-front. During the past two weeks the first two families brought out under the Legion's Settlement scheme had arrived in Ontario—both veterans and their families of a fine type from the Old Land. One of these families had been located at Paris and the other at Aylmer. "One of our female statesmen has lately been lambasting the militia" said the speaker, "but the British Empire was not established nor was Canada first settled by men who were too proud to fight."

To assist in strengthening the tie between Canada and the Empire. Some people professed to see signs of disintegration of the Empire. But the Empire was still very young. It was not much older than the lifetime of two generations, and for such a youngster it was very lusty. The Empire would not dissolve while there were organizations such as the Legion to help in holding it together.

To encourage the comrades to take an interest in their country and in improving the standard of citizenship. Members of the Legion had seen much and learned much in their four years of life abroad, and they could be of great assistance in developing their city and their province.

To uphold the splendid record of the Canadian Corps and to see that its history was handed down correctly to posterity. Magazines were discussing the question as to who won the war, but such questions could only be adequately discussed by the men who were in charge in France, and not by men sitting in an armchair in Ottawa. The part played by the Canadians would have to be recounted by those best qualified to do it.

To see that those who had become permanently incapable received assistance in accordance with their needs.

To assist the feeble-minded and paralytics who were in receipt of no pensions for service and disability.

To continue the work of the Last Post fund. They had now so arranged matters that no ex-service man would be buried as a pauper. In cases where a man died without leaving sufficient money, the Legion paid expenses up to $75.

Referring to the coming Convention, he said that the men who had organized the Legion would be present and would justify themselves. The chief topics which would come before the Convention would relate to the need of future legislation, questions of treatment, especially of those whose physical system had broken down; developing and extending the organization, and attracting the great body of A1 men who had kept aloof.

Mr. Shields answered a number of questions, after which the meeting proceeded to the election of the Convention committees.

BISHOP CONFIRMS AT CAMPBELLFORD

Good Class Presented By Rector of Christ Church.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 19. — A large congregation attended the confirmation service in Christ Church on Tuesday evening when the Rev. N. C. Wallace, rector, presented eleven young people for confirmation, the Lord Bishop of Toronto, the Rt. Rev. J. P. Sweeny, conducting the services. Rural Dean T. J. O'Conor-Fenton of Norwood assisted in the services.

The service followed the Order of Confirmation in the Prayer Book. The Bishop spoke a few words expressing his regret at not being able to attend the induction services of the rector, Mr. Wallace, but was more than pleased to be present this evening and also praised Mr. Wallace, that in so short a time he was enabled to have his Confirmation Class prepared.

The Bishop spoke from the words: "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge Him and He shall direct thy paths," 3rd Proverbs, 5th and 6th verses.

In these works of Solomon. His Lordship said, may be found words of good advice and counsel. Young and old need this and if they commit their ways unto God will find peace. Life is full of mystery and although many are trying to solve the mysteries of the future the words of the Master: "Take no thought for the morrow," should be taken and people should be content with the things that God wishes to reveal. Take life a day at a time, seek His strength day by day, for many unhappy people are borrowing future trouble instead of living their lives in today.

"We are told, Be Holy in conversation. Holiness becometh God's house forever. We cannot make ourselves holy, but the secret of holiness is that our bodies are the temple of the Holy Ghost and we must live that we glorify God in our spirits. Keep your hearts open to the spirit of God and say: I must keep my body holy by the indwelling presence of His spirit, for I am a child of of God, who dwells in me and makes me His temple.

"Religion," said the Bishop, "is not a sad, dour thing, but full of joy. The Lord said: 'Lo, I am with you always.' Is not that a thing of joy? Tune your souls to the joy of God's power and presence and feel that you are walking with a Friend that sticketh closer than a brother. There are crosses to bear, and sorrows, too; but power is given us to endure, even as Moses endured as seeing Him that is invisible."

In conclusion, the speaker said that all long for peace, the peace of God that passeth all understanding. He told the story of the writing of the hymn, "Peace, Perfect Peace," by Bishop E. H. Bickersteth, based on the text, "Thou wilt keep Him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on Thee, because he trusteth in Thee." All want peace, for it is the third of the fruits of the spirit—love, joy and peace. "May that peace keep your hearts and minds until life eternal."

Appropriate hymns were sung during the service, Miss Gertrude Maynard acting as organist for the service.

The rector, Rev. N. C. Wallace presented the following candidates to His Lordship for the privilege of entering the full Communion of the Church:

Isabel Bygott, Muriel Linton, Mrs. Jarvis Benor, Ivy Ray, Beatrice Baker, and Dora Collins.

Franklin Linton, Jack Bygott, James Heptonstall, Morley Baker and Tom Lazier.

His Lordship Bishop J. E. Sweeny of Toronto conducted Confirmation services in Christ Church (Anglican) Norwood, on Monday evening. Rogers, Miss Dorothy Beavis, Miss Dorothy Peoples, Miss Alice Foote, Miss Elizabeth Thomson, Miss Lillian Rogers, Mr. Lyman McCracken, and Mr. Willie Rogers.

Frantic mothers rushed screaming to the school grounds and struggled wildly with volunteer workers in an attempt to enter the ruins in search of their children. Fathers summoned from their places of employment joined the horror-stricken crowd and confusion reigned.

The workers soon began carrying out the little forms of the pupils and placed them under blankets in a temporary morgue in the school yard. Finally convinced that search in the ruins was being cared for by workers the parents turned to a survey of the silent forms in the school yard morgue. A moan from a mother or a stifled cry here and there from a father as a blanket was lifted, testified that another search was ended.

Wrecked Own Home

State police, checking over the ruins of Kehoe's farm building late yesterday, found a charred homemade battery manufactured from a spark plug, a small cap of gasoline and a coil. Several hundred feet of wire were attached to the device and it is believed this was the mechanism used to wreck his home. A sign on a fence in the rear of the farm bore the words "Criminals are made and not born."

Kehoe, a mortgage on whose farm recently was foreclosed, is believed to have dynamited the school as revenge for a controversy some time ago with the school board over taxes. Neighbors to-day said he had complained taxes were so high he could not meet the mortgage and that the board had refused his request for a reduction. A bitter quarrel with the other members of the board followed.

SAFEGUARDING MILK BY PASTEURIZATION

In further reference to this subject of pasteurization, in this report, the Ministry of Health, in referring to the effects of pasteurization on the vitamins, says:

"Milk is rich in fat soluble "A" vitamin, and also contains water soluble "B" vitamin, and the anti-scorbutic or water soluble "C" vitamin. Both fat soluble "A" vitamin and water soluble "B" vitamin have a relatively high resistance to heat so that pasteurization has practically no effect on them whatever. The anti-scorbutic vitamin, however, is sensitive to heat above 122 degrees Fahrenheit and there seems to be little doubt that pasteurization at 145 degrees Fahrenheit weakens the anti-scorbutic properties of milk."

However, this is the only loss that milk suffers during pasteurization, and inasmuch as all recognized pediatricians strongly recommend orange juice to be given to all babies after the second month, and to constitute a part and parcel of their daily nutrition whether they are nursed at the mother's breast or on cow's milk, and as that fruit juice is rich in the anti-scorbutic vitamin, it matters little whether or not this vitamin "C" is entirely destroyed. It is important to bear in mind, however, that all the orange juice that we could drink will not destroy the disease producing germs that are destroyed by scientific pasteurization.

The following extract taken from a pamphlet on milk, by Professor H. Kenwood, Professor of Hygiene and Public Health in the University of London, England, is of interest, in this connection:

"So far as we know, the changes which result when milk is sterilized or boiled, do not occur in low temperature pasteurization, which implies the heating of milk to a temperature of only 145 degrees Fahrenheit for 30 minutes, and then rapidly cooling it, but a great reduction of micro-organisms takes place, so that the milk keeps better and is always completely free from risk from any harmful germs which may have gained access to it. The available evidence in this and other countries supports the view that the heating of milk to a temperature of 145 degrees Fahrenheit does not materially reduce the nutritive value to the infant."

LEAGUE DEBATE HELD AT OMEMEE

Coboconk Branch Wins Final In United Church Series.

OMEMEE, May 18. — On Friday evening the Sunday school room of Trinity United Church Omemee, was thrown open to debating teams from the Young People's Union of Coboconk and Cordova Mines, Omemee being the central place of meeting. Many visitors accompanied the debaters from both points, and the society in Omemee was well represented.

The subject for debate was: "Resolved,—That the Inventor has done more for human happiness than the Legislator."

The affirmative was ably upheld by Miss Barrie and Mr. Purdy of Cordova Mines, while the negative was supported by Miss Graham and J. B. Thompson of Coboconk.

Rev. E. W. Rowland was appointed the critic, and H. Lamb, the timekeeper; while Messrs O. R. Stalter and L. Curtis of the Omemee school staff and Rev. R. Brown of Cordova Mines, acted as judges.

Mr. Rowland, in offering his criticism, commended each speaker on his or her delivery, which was exceptionally good, and showed the careful preparation which each had given the subject. He also pointed out to each their weak places, denouncing the lengthy manuscripts, improper pronounciation, etc.

The judges are not allowed to communicate with each other according to the rules of this series of debates, and their decisions were handed to the chairman, who announced the result in favor of the negative.

At the conclusion of the debate a hearty vote of thanks was extended to the Omemee Young People's Union by Mr. Thompson of Coboconk, for the hospitality shown the visitors. Mr. Purdy of Cordova Mines, in a few words, seconded the motion.

F. G. Sandy, M.P.P., ex-president of the Y.P.U., of Omemee, ably replied on behalf of the local group, who later served refreshments to the visitors.

OBITUARY.

MRS. JAMES FEE

MILLBROOK, May 18 — There passed away on Friday, May 13, one of the oldest and most highly respected residents of this community in the person of Mrs. James Fee (Elizabeth Mulligan), whose death, following a nine weeks' illness with 'flu, took place in her eighty-seventh year, her birthday having occurred just two weeks prior to her decease.

Deceased was born on the Seventh Line, Cavan, the farm now occupied by Mr Maitland having been the one where her parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mulligan, settled first upon arrival in Canada from Ireland.

Two years later they moved to Peterborough where Mr. Mulligan conducted an undertaking business, his store being located where the market building now stands. They also lived in Port Hope, and Newcastle.

Mrs. Fee was the last surviving member of a family of seven children, five daughters and two sons, those previously deceased being: Mrs. Samuel Caldwell, and Mrs. Jane Hamil of Perrytown, Mrs. Martha Long, of Virginia, U.S.; Mrs. Eleanor Brock of Zion, Mrs. Margaret Luxon, of Manvers, Mr. William Mulligan, of Omemee; and Mr. John Mulligan, who passed away in early manhood.

Fifty-eight years ago Elizabeth Mulligan was united in marriage to Mr. James Fee, their wedding taking place at Zion, the late Archdeacon Allen performing the ceremony. Their first home was on the farm now owned and occupied by Mr. Henry Hubbeard, and here their family of six children, three daughters and three sons, were born. One son, Charles Wilbert, died in infancy, and the immediate surviving relatives are: Mrs. Fred Ivans, of Winnipeg; Miss Maud Fee, at home; Miss Irene Fee, of Peterborough; Messrs. Chester Fee, of Cavan; and Harvey, of Alameda, Sask.; there are also eleven grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren. Mr. Fee predeceased his wife by nine years.

It is thirty years since Mr. and Mrs. Fee moved to Millbrook to reside ,the cosy home on the corner of Union and Centre streets having been the family residence for some time.

Previous to her marriage Mrs. Fee was a member of the Methodist church, joining the Anglican communion with her husband, and bringing to the church of her adoption the same loyal service and faithful attendance which had characterized her allegiance to the church with which she had formerly been identified..

The funeral, which was very largely attended, took place on Sunday, May 15 at 2.30 p.m., the rector, Rev. Canon Allen, having charge of the service at the house, and afterward at St. Thomas' church; also at the graveside, interment being made in the Zion cemetery.

Mr. George Mulligan of Peterborough, a nephew of the deceased, sang one of her favorite songs, "Eternity Where?" during the service at the home, and the hymns used at the church included three of which the late Mrs. Fee was particularly find: "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," "Rock of Ages" and "Peace, Perfect Peace." In his address Rev. Canon Allen, who has had a life-long connection with the parish of Millbrook and Cavan, spoke in the warmest terms of his personal acquaintance with his late parishioners ,both Mr. and Mrs. Fee, and related some incidents giving an intimate view of their helpfulness in connection with the church history and activities.

The pall-bearers were four nephews of the deceased: Messrs. Walter Caldwell, Perrytown; George Mulligan, Walter Brock, Peterborough, and Martin Brock, Zion; with S. J. Hamilton, Zion, and A. J. Brown, Millbrook. Many beautiful floral tributes were laid upon the casket in loving memory of the one who had been called home.

Among those from outside points who attended the funeral were: Mrs. George Adamsm, Mrs. R. J. Mulligan, Miss Stewart, Dr. and Mrs. M. B. Annis, of Lindsay; Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Mulligan, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brock, Mr. and Mrs. Hilliard Strong, Miss Verna Strong, Miss Berta Brock, Mrs. T. M. Caldwell, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Byles, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Armstrong, of Peterborough; Mrs. Milligan and Miss A. Kelly of Bethany; Mr. W. Caldwell, of Perrytown.

ADDRESSES I.O.O.F. ON ANNIVERSARY

Rev. N. C. Wallace Delivers Interesting Sermon at Campbellford.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 18. — On Sunday evening, in recognition of the 108th anniversary of the founding of the I.O.O.F. lodge, Campbellford Lodge, No. 248, and Loch Lomond Rebekah Lodge, No. 248, attended divine service in Christ Church Rev. N. C. Wallace, the rector, delivered an interesting sermon. After a few suitable words of welcome to the lodges, Mr. Wallace took as his theme, 1st Kings 22,39: "The rest of the act of Ahab, and all that he did, and the ivory house which he made, and all the cities that he built." The rector pointed out the fact that Ahab dwelt in material things, building cities, commercial trade, costly houses and palaces, rather than looking towards the spiritual side of life and friendship toward other people. The three links in the chain of the I.O.O.F. Order stood for Friendship, Love and Truth, which meant also fidelity to religion, state, home and charity to all. This lodge was founded on these noble ideas for the purpose of practical expression. In Ahab's case, he would not sacrifice anything to the state or church, married a foreign princess and was an adherent to the god Baal as well as Jehovah. The speaker said: "You of this order appreciate the fact that without love and truth, the things of life are purely material, these thing are absolutely important in both home and nation. Friendship is a spiritual structure. You can buy a house but not a home. A home is a spiritual structure built out of love, truth and character. You of this Order to whom I speak are pledged to build your lives on the three foundations: Friendship, Love and Truth, and a chain made of those three links is not easily broken."

After the service, the lodges marched to their rooms, where they dispersed.

Several out of town members were present, among them: Mr. and Mrs. Fraser, Frankford; Mrs. Draper, Mrs. Sexsmith, Mrs. Post, Mrs. Gordon, Mrs. J. Little, Mrs. Green, Miss White, Mrs. McQuaig, Mrs. Rice from Rebekah Lodge, Havelock; Messrs. W. Rice, J. Little, J. Faulkner, F. McKay and H. Gordon, Havelock.

Pleasant to the Eyes

(By W. J. Cottrell.)

Home decoration is an art or hobby revelled in by the feminine sex. In thinking of this subject, a little phrase comes to mind from the story of Eden. It is the first recorded statement about a human look. Eve, who gave that look, saw the fruitfulness of the forbidden tree, but she saw also that it was "pleasant to the eyes." That tree, whatever may be said for or against it, attracted her because it decorated her primitive home, and many an admiring glance did she bestow upon it. Furthermore, she induced her husband to see it as she saw it, with no small measure of success. Are daughters of Eve granted such success in our time? Just how successful the ladies of to-day are with their decorative schemes, generally speaking, is left to one another to tell.

Occasionally, a meek husband is perforced to offer congratulatory remarks, and there are instances known where a son of Adam spontaneously shares the admiration which his better half has for the pretty and artistic. Still, of a vast majority of men, is it not true to say that it is a matter of indifference to them whether the kitchen mirror faces north or whether the wallpaper lasts five years or ten, and so forth?

So long as the calendar on the wall is right way up and the day of the current month is plaintly visible, so that they don't accidentally work on Sundays, they are satisfied with what else of decoration their domain possesses. They don't seem to understand that a little appreciation of wifie's efforts towards home beautifying goes a long way towards making their residence a sweet home of a surety.

Home decoration can be carried out excessively, as is the case with many another good thing. There are homes in some parts of Wales where the housewife spends most of the forenoon every day, save Sunday, polishing up brass utensils and ornaments, and where the husband, if so disposed, may get the meals.

There is a large mansion in England laid out in suites and elaborately furnished. The owner thought it would be so pleasant to his eyes, as his sons and daughters married, for them to settle down in comfort beneath the same roof. But the scheme did not work out to his liking. Discussing the matter afterwards, a neighboring squire said: "It was all right, so far as the male members of the family were concerned, but when the daughters-in-law took up residence, there was trouble, for you can't have more than one queen in one house." Too much decoration in that case, it would seem. Rearrangement of bedrooms is often combined with home decoration in these days, if not before. Many funny stories might be told of unfortunate individuals who arrive home late at night without hearing of a particular tidying up of their room that has occurred during the day. It is advisable for such that they resort to the electric switch the very first thing, or the next morning the good lady of the house will not be able to testify to their appearance as being pleasant to the eyes. A face decorated with plaster is too reminiscent of a hospital to be admired in a home.

After all said and done, new tenants enter residences for better or for worse, as the landlord knows by experience, and there is nothing pleasanter to the eyes than when the interior of a house, known in time past for its dullness and cheerless appearance, undergoes a transformation through the new tenants deciding aright that it should be beautified to their best affording.

Kingston Dog Owners Oppose Dog Catcher

KINGSTON, May 18.—One of the liveliest rows in years is now brewing here over the dog question. The city has a dog catcher on the job, enforcing the by-law regarding dogs running at large and the owners of canines are up in arms against the enforcement of the by-law, while citizens in general are upholding the by-law and appealing to the council to stand pat. Today four citizens appeared before Magistrate Farrell, and were fined $1 and costs with the option of five days in jail, for allowing their dog to run at large. For every day during the past ten days, the local newspaper has devoted three or four columns to letters from citizens for and against the by-law.

PRESENTATION TO MEMBERS OF CHOIR

Pleasant Meeting Held By Choristers of Christ. Church.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 19.—A pleasing event took place on Friday evening in the Parish Hall, when the members of the choir met to do honor to their past organist, Miss Gertrude Maynard and to Mr. and Mrs. James Benor, who were recently married.

Mr. Harry Moore presented Miss Maynard with an ivory mirror in recognition of her long term as organist of Christ church, during which time Miss Maynard gave whole-heartedly of her time and talent. Major J. M. Bygott, on behalf of the choir, presented Mr. and Mrs. Benor with a cut glass fruit bowl and sherbet set, assuring them of the many hearty wishes of the choir that they may enjoy a happy wedded life. Mr. Benor has been a choir member for many years and Mrs. Benor is the present organist. Miss Maynard and Mr. and Mrs. Benor made very fitting replies thanking their friends for their gifts. A dainty lunch was served and all enjoyed a happy social time.

Decorating Your Home

By Jessie J. Johnston.

So often you look around your rooms at home and wonder what you could add to bring new color or charm or interest. And so often during the winter season you find the very suggestion that has not occurred to you. Thus, planning combines good taste and harmony of furnishings, here meaning good value for the money involved.

Many homes are over-crowded, either with antique articles, pictures or draperies. The living room should be comfortable and pleasing to the guest, with the new type of Chesterfield and a few chairs to match, one or two easy chairs of good quality are exceptionally attractive items—the gold-colored marquisette curtains that is so well liked, because it brings a glow like sunshine into the room. Hand-blocked Krinkle Satins in supple weave and soft, rich tones make very distinctive draperies, with the cord and tassel arrangement of the side curtains in this room is very satisfactory. You draw the curtains across the windows so easily. Small pictures or paintings may brighten up the walls; but not too many in number. The miniature grandfather's clock in the hall with its brass pendulum swaying back and forth, is one of the most-to-be desired piece of furniture for the hall; also the hall-seat and mirror combined.

The kitchen, which is very often the mostly-used room in the house, especially in country homes, should have the desired decorations to make it bright and cheerful. The walls either papered or painted to blend with the light graining or painted woodwork. So inexpensive can very attractive curtains be made out of scrim-edged with some pretty shades of gingham or chambray or even a light weight of factory cotton can be trimmed similar with a basket of flowers, embroidered on a applique.

The comfortable cot, which becomes an attractive couch by day, would be very serviceable with a repp cover, rose-edged, and its rose and black cushions. Cushions in daily use are best made of material that will wash and iron easily. Ginghams, broadcloth, Indian-head and colored linens all laundry well. Every one cannot afford the polished hardwood floors; therefore, some light in color paisley or small pattern in linoleum is very pleasing to the eye and does not show the dust as plainly as a dark one.

The boys' bedroom is proving a favorite. Everything is so essentially a boy's. Side curtains and bedspread of sand repp, banded with plain amethyst, make a neat and clean appearance, a comfortable chair, a desk a boy would like. Even pictures to his taste. The painted dressing table, side table, bed washstand and chairs done in grey are very appropriate for a young girl's bedroom; little tints of color such as gold, blue or pink may be added for decorating the furniture.

No one house could ever be furnished to suit everybody. But there are helpful experts always ready to assist in planning, as to style, color scheme, etc.

May the house be large or small, use every room and make it a real home. A home that knows something about charades and tournaments of tennis and croquet, and wild smothered gales of mirth. Kitchenward over spilled milk and jam, filched from the cellar. Home, where there are pianos, and groups about the pianos singing, "There's a long, long trail a-winding," "My Wild Irish Rose," etc. Have the old, pleasant neighbor to spend an evening. If the children are going to do a big puzzle or play a game let them use the dining room table or parlor table, throwing out a glorious stream of hospitality that will flow for years. Everyone loves games, and homes, and Mothers, and safety, and laughter, and the joyous give-and-take of intimate friendship.

BEES BARRED BY PEMBROKE

AT WISH OF HOUSEWIVES.

PEMBROKE, May 18 (Canadian Press).—Following a three-hour discussion with complaining neighbors, apiarists and bee experts, the Town Council by a vote of seven to five, passed a by-law prohibiting the keeping of bees within the town limits, except on farm lands. It is believed to be the only legislation of its kind in Canada and action was taken despite the adverse advice of C. P. Gooderham, expert of the Dominion Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

The passing of the by-law marks the close of years and years of agitation to have a prohibitory by-law passed. The burden is now shifted to the bee-keeper, and there seems no doubt but that the legality of the by-law will be tested in the courts.

With over a score of complaining citizens present, including irate housewives, the experts did not have a chance. All theoretical arguments were broken down by the volleys of the housewives, who insisted that washing after washing on the lines were ruined by the cleansing flights of the bees, which, they maintained, existed from April to December. They could not work their gardens, pick their flowers, do their preserving, and even worshippers told of being stung in church.

Mr. Gooderham spoke for nearly two hours in defence of the bee, steadfastly maintaining that its cleansing flight, if properly kept, was confined to two or three days and that it would not attack a human being unless molested.

WHEN good friends call to grace your home—to sit and talk as good friends will—to dine—to dance—to play a little bridge perhaps . . . there's no drink in all the world so altogether welcome as a sparkling, bubbling glass of "Canada Dry."

The very appearance of the stately green bottle, with its aristocratic crest and foil, adds a touch of distinction to every occasion. The delicate appealing flavor of the ginger ale itself will charm your taste and tell you something, too, of the matchless purity and quality of this famous drink.

"Canada Dry" is altogether different from every other ginger ale because it is made with something of the same expert care as a mellow old wine. It is, indeed, Canada's most famous product.

This is the Hostess Package of 12 bottles—the most convenient way to buy "Canada Dry."

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

"Churchill would either laugh at us or haul Hutchinson into court on a subpoena in regard to that threatening letter, and Hutchinson would know good and well that Churchill couldn't actually pin the letter on him. And it would tip him off that he's under suspicion which would warrant Churchill's getting out a warrant for his arrest. No, let's wait and work this thing out ourselves, if possible. We've at least found Phil today and connected him with the writer of the threatening letter," Faith advised Bob.

"All right, sounds sensible to me, but let's stop at a soda fountain and get a sandwich and a glass of milk and then beat it back to the courthouse. It's past one-thirty now, and we may have missed something important."

After they had snatched a quick lunch and were speeding toward the courthouse Bob suggested: "Don't you think I'd better ask Churchill if Hutchinson is one of the four men whom Crowell checked up on, when he was looking for convicts who might have written that threatening letter?"

"Yes, I do. He may have a clear alibi for Hutchinson and we'd be wasting our time to pursue the thing further—but I don't believe it! We've got something big and we're going to follow it through to freedom for poor little Cherry! I never felt more sure of anything in my life."

When Faith and Bob entered the courtroom they found Adolph Bohn, a former employer of Cherry's, on the witness stand. His examination by Churchill had evidently been in progress several minutes, for the facts of her employment with him had been disposed of.

"Now, Mr. Bohn, will you kindly tell the jury what your own feelings toward Miss Cherry Lane were?" Churchill asked almost coaxingly.

"I—I was very fond of her. Well, to be frank," and the handsome, dark young man of thirty-five flushed and lowered his keen black eyes for a moment, "I—er—asked her to marry me."

"Will you tell the jury when and under what circumstances this proposal of marriage was made, Mr. Bohn? I do not wish to cause you needless embarrassment but I believe the jury should hear the facts."

"Well, sir, I came in from lunch one day and found Miss Cherry in tears. I tried to comfort her, asked her to tell me what the trouble was. She said she was in love with a man whom her parents did not approve of, and that they had ordered him out of the house the night before."

"Will you give the name of the man referred to, Mr. Bohn?"

"She said his name was Chris Wiley," Bohn answered.

"Go on, Mr. Bohn," Churchill directed. "Did she tell what her feelings for Mr. Wiley were?"

"She said—I think her exact words were that he had cast a spell on her, that she despised him for his philandering with women, but was infatuated with him in spite of herself. She confessed to me that she was afraid she would break her parents' hearts by eloping with him, and that she knew she would be unhappy with him if she did. She was particularly agitated at the thought of how her mother would suffer if she married a man unworthy of her."

"And what was Miss Cherry's answer to your proposal?" Churchill asked, casting an affectionate glance at the defendant, whose pale little face had flushed rosily.

"She refused me, and voluntarily left my employ because, as she said, her presence there might be embarrassing to me," Bohn answered.

"May I ask, Mr. Bohn, if during her employment Miss Cherry made any effort to take advantage of your good nature or your generosity, to gold-dig, as the phrase goes?"

"She did not!" Bohn answered emphatically.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

Friday, May 20, 1927.

(Copyright, 1927, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Another adverse day is announced by astrologers who find this month a time of industrial unrest and political uncertainty.

Women are subject to sinister influences under this direction of the stars, which indicates that they will arouse much sex antagonism among men with whom they seek to work.

Fluctuations in the prices of oil and by-products are forecast and increase in demand will raise the ultimate cost to consumers, the seers declare.

While this planetary government prevails there may be even greater prevalence of secret diplomacy and suspicion of motives than usually prevails in international affairs.

Both stage and screen may be adversely affected, but they are to benefit greatly before the end of the year.

Craving for excitement and desire to escape the contemplation of serious things will affect both men and women at this time, much to the advantage of all purveyors of amusement, it is prophesied.

All who seek employment would better delay making applications for positions until a more promising direction of the stars prevails.

Arrogance is supposed to be encouraged by this planetary rule and for this reason it is difficult to obtain respectful consideration from persons who wield power of any sort.

There is a sign not favorable to writers who may be inclined to exaggerate and to see the gloomy side of things.

Newspapers and magazines are to profit immensely, it is again prophesied, because of sensational world events.

Persons whose birthdate it is should be economical and careful in the administration of their affairs the coming year.

Children born on this day probably will be endowed with great vitality and bright intellects. Many writers of popular fiction are born under this sign.

GIRL'S CRYING SAVES FRIENDS

LADS NEARLY DEAD.

TORONTO, May 19. — A little girl stood at Pape Avenue and Don Mills Road at 6 o'clock yesterday sobbing helplessly. Obviously her difficulties were very, very great.

To her assistance came W. Thomas, a passing motorist, who was attracted by her wailing.

When he pressed her to tell him about her troubles she paused in her grief to point to a large sand bank, in a vacant lot where the Corporation of East York had recently been removing sand.

"There's a boy buried in the sand," she managed to say.

Then Mr. Thomas noticed a piece of cloth sticking out of the sand, and rushing over he dug furiously with his hands. Sure enough he uncovered a small boy. But they were evidently not happy yet, for he joined the girl in the crying match. It seemed that there was still another boy under the sand and with the assistance of two passing workmen, Mr. Thomas soon had him uncovered, too. They were not a minute too soon, for the child, sputtering sand, was gasping for breath. He would soon have stopped breathing.

It was later explained that the two boys had been playing at the bottom of the sand bank when a huge section caved in and buried them six or seven inches deep.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

Satin ribbon forms the shoulder ornament and girdle of this lace frock and rhinestone pins, one on the waist and two on the girdle, add a note of brilliance.

Every fashion period has its own use of ribbons. You may somehow trust the ribbon manufacturers to see to it that their lovely lengths of silk are adapted to every passing mode. If fashion does not favor ribbon-trimmed hats, then ribbons may be worn for sashes; if sashes are out of the picture, maybe neck ribbons or hair ribbons may be stressed. One year we wear ribbon bows on our shoes and another year, tiring of these, we wear frills on our frocks. The whole history of costume within recent years might be written from the point of view of how ribbons have been used.

Ribbon bows are placed on shoes by some of the smartest shoemakers—little bows of ribbon placed at the joining of the instep strap. Sometimes a jeweled ornament or bead is attached to the end of the ribbons to give distinction.

Nowadays one might go almost entirely dressed in ribbons. The all-ribbon hat would not be hard to find, for milliners here and abroad are just as interested in this type of headgear as ever. Perfectly adequate bits of lingerie might be bought or easily made entirely of ribbon save perhaps for an edging of lace and a ribbon girdle might play the role of corset. There are frocks of ribbon—made from diagonally arranged lengths of chiffon or net ribbon, and a most attractive coat is made of black moire ribbon arranged diagonally from shoulders to hem—nine or ten spans of ribbon in all, with four or five for the sleeves. Stockings do not appear on the list of things made from ribbon, but one woman at least had shoes of ribbon. Her evening gown was trimmed with lengths of a lovely, rather heavy, figured brocade ribbon, and from this she had sandal slippers made by her shoemaker.

There are all sorts of trimming possibilities for ribbon this season. Some of the dressmakers are making summer frocks with rather full skirts of organdie or net trimmed with flutings of narrow ribbon—a quaint mid-Victorian fashion that was well worth reviving.

Ottawa Merchant, Formerly City Officer, Rundown By Kidney Trouble...Wasted From 201 To 135 Lbs. Tanlac Restored Robust Health; Now Weighs 217 Lbs. and Feels Fine.

Philias Sequin's grocery at 265 St. Patrick St. is well known in Ottawa. Mr. Sequin was formerly a police officer. When ill-health seized him he lost weight rapidly. "I had kidney trouble for 6 years," he tells, "and was given up as a hopeless case. Many times, from sheer weakness, I have fallen where I stood, and had to be helped to my feet.

"Pains racked my entire system, especially my back, which felt like splitting. Needless to say, I could neither eat nor sleep normally. Weak spells and nervousness would leave me trembling all over. I faded away from 201 to 135 lbs., and tried endless treatments and remedies in those 6 years, without result.

"I had begun to despair, and when a friend advised Tanlac I was skeptical. But one month's regular use of this wonderful medicine convinced me that I was on the road to health. I kept on taking Tanlac and to my delight and surprise it made me a new man in a surprisingly short time. Now I weight 217 lbs., eat and sleep like a healthy boy and feel like a different man altogether."

Keen's Seasonable Recipes

Five delicious dishes fit for a King

They are not every-day menus—they are different, very different, and will add laurels to any housewife's culinary achievements. Mustard—of course—is the secret of their savouriness. Clip these recipes for future reference.

ROAST PORK—BRUSSELS STYLE

Cover a piece of pork (fillet or other) with a coat of Keen's Mustard, mix with a piece of butter the size of a nut, salt and pepper to suit. Place the roast in a hot oven, when it begins to color, baste it; let it brown, baste it again after adding to the sauce 2 tablespoonfuls of milk. During the cooking, baste the roast several times by adding at intervals milk to the juice. Pork thus prepared is easy to digest and has a very agreeable chicken-like flavor.

BREADED LAMB CHOPS

8 French chops; 2 tablespoons butter; 4 tablespoons flour; ½ cup chopped ham; ½ teaspoonful salt; Cayenne; 1 cup milk; ¼ teaspoon Keen's Mustard.

Make a thick white sauce, when thoroughly cooked, add ham and set aside to cool. Broil chops, season with salt, Keen's Mustard and pepper, cool and spread both sides with a layer of sauce. Let stand on buttered plate till firm, then dip in crumbs, egg and crumbs. Fry in deep fat. Garnish with paper frills and serve with Cuban or tomato sauce.

CASSEROLE OF EGGS

Hard boil eggs, split lengthwise, pulverize yolks, add chopped chives, chopped olives, ½ teaspoon of Keen's Mustard and a little cream. Season to taste. Refill whites, heaping well, place in buttered casserole (close together) fill up with rich cream sauce, cover all with a thick coating of grated cheese. Bake until brown.

BAKED VIRGINIA HAM

Select a slice of ham 1 inch thick. Mix together 2 heaping teaspoons Keen's Mustard with ¼ cup vinegar. Spread over the ham. Slice apples enough to cover ham. Sprinkle ½ cup brown sugar over the whole. Stick whole cloves through the slices of apple every 2 inches apart. Put in baking pan and bake in moderate oven from 1½ to 2 hours. Keep water enough in pan to keep liquid boiling. This is delicious served with baked potatoes.

When ham is ready to serve, remove cloves, but serve the apples. The brown sugar, mustard and vinegar give the ham a most delightful flavor.

FISH SALAD

Take the remnants of fried fish left over from a previous meal. Remove the bones and hash it to fill 2 cups. Add to it ½ cup of celery cut in pieces, 5 radishes, cut fine, and mix the whole thoroughly. On this mixture pour ½ cup of well-seasoned mayonnaise sauce made with Keen's Mustard. To serve, dress a salad dish with fresh lettuce leaves of medium size. Lay out the salad and pour the mayonnaise over it. Finish with ½ cup of small or medium sized French peas spread on the top. Garnish the edge with thin lemon slices, and small bouquets of parsley. This salad is just as delicious made with chicken, veal or pork.

FIRE DRILLS IN GOOD TIME

Children of Schools Come Out in Short Notice.

OUT IN TWO MINUTES.

Accompanied by E. B. Fowler and J. R. Corkery, chairmen respectively of the Public and Separate School Boards, Frie Chief Gimblett made a tour of inspection of a number of the schools in the city yesterday for the purpose of testing the efficiency of the fire drill in which the pupils are trained by their teachers.

South Central School, which was the first to be visited, made a good showing, its 200 pupils finding their way out of the building within 53 seconds after the Chief pulled the fire alarm. At Sacred Heart School 345 pupils from 8 classes made a speedy exit in 59 seconds. At Queen Mary school 475 scholars from 12 classes marched out in 61 seconds. St. Peter's School, 480 pupils in 14 classes was emptied within one minute and 36 seconds; St. Mary's Convent School with 6 classes and 235 pupils in one minute and 36 seconds. At Queen Alexandra School the scholars, 380 in 10 classes, marching with military precision, filed out into the open air within fifty seconds after the Chief pulled the bell. At Central School 450 pupils marched out in good order in one minute. Although the results attained were one the whole very satisfactory the Chief indicated that he had under consideration some minor changes which he believed would have the effect of still further speeding-up the process of withdrawal.

CONFIRMATION AT HAVELOCK

INSPIRING SERMON.

HAVELOCK, May 19. — On Tuesday afternoon the Right Rev. J. F Sweeney, Lord Bishop of Toronto, conducted a confirmation service in St. John's Anglican church, when a class of nine received the holy rite.

His Lordship delivered a very forceful address, choosing a portion of the eleventh verse of the 6th chapter of Romans, "Alive unto God," as the subject. The sixth chapter, St. Paul's letter to the Romans, deals with sin, the speaker said. The word sin occurs 16 times in the chapter and the climax is reached with the words, "The wages of sin is death."

"Alive unto God" means first that God is fundamental; secondly, it means "Living unto God" a life of faith, a life of love, a life of service, and a life of self-sacrifice, if God should so require. Third, "to be alive unto God" is to take a supreme interest in the things pertaining to the kingdom. Those who are "alive unto God" will not be indifferent regarding God's day, attendance at God's house, the study of God's word, and the work of extending God's kingdom. Religious conditions of any part of the world, such as exist in Russia, Mexico and China, will be the subject of sorrow and regret to those who are "Alive unto God."

Fourth, "Alive unto God" means separation or dedication to God from this world. In this age the walls between the church and the world are being slowly broken down, and there seems to be no emphasis between the Church and the world. Friendship with the world means enmity to God.

In conclusion, His Lordship asked, "How shall we give evidence to our friends that we are living alive unto God?" By a life dedicated to God's service, by prayer, by meditation of God's word, by attendance at God's house, and by frequent and regular partaking of communion," he answered.

Those confirmed were: Annie Brinkman, Margaret Jones, Irene Anderson, Elfreda Pincombe, Mrs. Jas. Cook, Frank McKay, Donald Anderson, Bruce Longmuir, Wilbert Bush.

At the beginning of the service His Lordship dedicated a prayer book and desk, the gift of Messrs Frank and Joseph McKay, in memory of their mother, the late Mrs. William McKay, and a chancel chair, the gift of Mr. Isaac Barlow and the late Mrs. Barlow, in memory of their son, the late Garnet Barlow.

The above view shows the levee near Poydras, Louisiana, 14 miles south of New Orleans, pierced by dynamite blasts to relieve pressure of the Mississippi's flood on New Orleans' dikes. This picture was taken immediately following the explosions and shows the three breaks (indicated by arrows) caused by the dynamite charge. The waters are already pouring in around the buildings at St. Bernard's parish. The Mississippi River is seen in the background.

NO TRACE OF FLIERS.

French Tug Reports Lack of Success in Search.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., May 19 (Canadian Press).—The French tug Angegase, which has been searching along the south coast of Newfoundland for sign of the missing French fliers, Nungesser and Coli, reported from Hermitage that so far she had found no trace of the airmen.

THE "BIG ONE THAT GOT AWAY" LAST YEAR IS BIGGER THAN EVER NOW.

You ardent fisherman, beside whom a golf addict is a gentle babe, do you realize that fishing time is here again? Of course you do—and for the past month you have been furtively overhauling your gear—rehearsing the alibi you are going to spring on friend wife—and deciding your fishing grounds.

Where will it be this year? Will you try the same old place you've learned to love—or will you wander into newer places in search of the fighting lunge—the sporting black bass or the gamey speckled trout?

Wherever you wish to go—Timagami, Kawartha Lakes, Georgian Bay or Algonquin Park, Canadian National Railways offer you a most satisfactory service — in actual transportation and in helping you plan your trip—descriptive booklets, game laws, etc., gladly supplied by any Canadian National Agent.

FRASERVILLE NEWS.

FRASERVILLE, May 19.—A new garage and repair shop has recently been opened at the village by Mr. James King and is already busy.

The Fraserville circuit of the United church at the Quarterly Official Board, a few days ago, reported a good year with thirty-six added to the membership of the church by profession of faith, and the circuit allotment to the maintenance and extension fund paid in full.

Go-to-Sunday-School Day was observed in the Fraserville Sunday School, Sunday, May 8th, with an attendance of 92.

The Fraserville congregation is making great plans for the celebration of the Golden Jubilee of the church on Sunday and Monday, June 19th and 20th. Some 200 invitations are being mailed to people, families and ministers who formerly belonged to the congregation, to return for the Jubilee re-union. A jubilee choir is also being organized for the occasion consisting of every person who has sung in the choir in the half century, who can possibly get home, with a posibility of having Mr. Edgar Finlay, B.A., of Kansas City, as leader for the occasion, while rD, Thomas Manning of Toronto, the minister forty-five years ago, will preach one of the sermons. Committees are all busy on details of preparation for the home coming.

Mr. George Sellers, who spent the winter with his people in Liverpool, is back again with Mr. G. F. Clarke. He things Canada is all right.

Within two weeks after its release more than 30,000 copies of the new "Cheyless" prayer book were sold by the Oxford press.

BULLET-PROOF COPS.

BERLIN, May 14.—Bullet-proof vests are all right in their way, but they weigh too much, authorities have decided. Now they are considering the adoption of entire suits of a material which not only stops bullets, but is impenetrable to knives and daggers. A suit of this material weighs only seven pounds, while the steel vest alone weighs fifteen pounds.

$1,000 DAMAGES FOR BREACH OF PROMISE

Toronto Girl Awarded Judgment Against Merrickville Man.

TORONTO, May 19 (Canadian Press).—Miss Jessie Murdock was awarded $1,000 damages in her breach of promise suit against Hubert Meredith, of Merrickville, by the jury in the Assizes before Mr. Justice Smith.

The jury returned a sealed verdict and all agreed that there was a contract entered into between the two to marry and that Miss Murdock was not a party to the annulment. Miss Murdock replied to an advertisement in a local newspaper, and, following correspondence, became engaged to Meredith. The man married another woman.

BETHANY INSTITUTE ANNUAL MEETING

Officers Elected By Acclamation—Congregations Hold Meeting.

BETHANY, May 18.—A meeting of the Women's Institute was held in the Town Hall on Thursday evening, with ten members present, and Mrs. S. Jemison, presiding.

Business arising from the minutes of the previous meeting was the report of the ladies who were looking after the erection of the fire bell. They reported that the bell would in all probability be in place by May 24th.

The ladies who formed the committee that was looking into the advisability of planting shrubs, flowers, etc., on the Town Hall grounds, reported that owing to the rocky and stony soil around the hall, cultivation would be impossible unless some good earth was drawn to the grounds to form flower beds and borders.

It was decided to continue the sale of ice cream this summer every Saturday evening, providing the weather would be warm enough to warrant it.

The election of officers for the ensuing year by open nomination and vote resulted as follows: President Mrs. Elizabeth Reynolds, vice-President, Mrs. J. R. Sisson; Secretary, Mrs. A. H. Monk; Treasurer, Mrs. A. Driver. They were all unanimously elected. It was decided to hold a tag day on May 24th, proceeds to go toward the maintenance of the street lights.

A circuit congregational meeting of the four United Churches of this district was held in the Sunday school room of the United church on Friday evening.

Over one hundred people sat down to supper.

The tables looked very nice with their decorations of spring flowers and loaded with plenty of good things to eat, provided by the ladies of the different congregations.

After supper the Rev. Mr. Poulter, the pastor, as chairman, called for reports from the different organizations of the several churches. Those who gave interesting reports were for the Sunday schools—Mr. Richard Wright, for Yelverton Sunday school; Mr. Jasob Hart for Fleetwood, and Mr. A. H. Monk for Bethany; Mrs. A. H. Monk reported for the only Women's Missionary Society on the circuit, which is at Bethany, with sixteen annual members; eight life members, and contributes $100 to the Cobourg Presbyterial.

Mrs. W. Malcomb, reporting for the Yelverton Ladies' Aid, told how they had made great improvements on the cemetery grounds in which their church stands and also helped redecorate their church inside and out. Miss Elsie Richardson, reporting for the Bethany Ladies' Aid, told how they had raised over $100 which went to re-decorating their church and supplies and repairs for the parsonage.

Bert Monk, reporting for the only young People's League on the circuit, which is held in the Bethany church, said the aim was to get as many of the young people interested in church work as possible, and while there were many discouraging features in league work, there were also many encouraging. They had also raised a nice sum for missions, beside financing their own local work.

Miss Priscilla Howden reported for the Young Ladies' Mission Club. Among other encouraging features of her report she said they had also bought and paid for a piano for the Sunday school.

The Rev. Mr. Poulter reported that he had one hundred and fifty families under his supervision, and they were widely scattered. He said he tried to visit each family at least twice a year oftener if sickness was in the home. He said there were many pleasant features in his pastoral work, and might be expected, some not so pleas but on the whole he was pleased with the progress they were making. Nearly all of the allocations had been met, and the work looked promising for the future. Mr. Poulter reported ten deaths, thirteen baptisms, and one marriage last year.

A program followed, the opening number being a piano duet and encore by the Misses Laura and Muriel Magill of Yelverton. Other numbers were recitation and encore by Beatrice Darroch. A quartet by Messrs. Alfred Driver, George Spencer, William Lee and John Porteous, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Poulter, sang "Brightly Beams Our Father's Mercy," and "When The Roll Is Called Up Yonder." The congregation joining in the chorus.

Vocal duet, "Moonlight and Roses" by Mrs. Poulter and Verna Belle Lee, accompanied by Miss Helen Patton at the piano.

After this Mr. Poulter introduced Rev. A. J. Terrill of Pontypool, who had come prepared to make an address. Mr. Terrill was listened to with careful attention while he spoke on "Loyalty" and "Unity" both of which, he said, were so vitally important in the religious and political life of the present day with its turmoil of quick living and quicker travelling. Mr. Terrill said that to have a successful church as well as a great country, people must be loyal and true to the cause of each and be united.

RIVERA DECLINES COVETED HONOR

Asks King To Postpone Decorating Him With Golden Fleece.

MADRID, May 19 (Canadian Press).—General Primo De Rivera, Spanish Premier, had declined the greatest honor which King Alfonso could bestow upon one of his subjects, the Order of the Golden Fleece, it became known to-day. An official announcement explained that the honor was "postponed" in compliance with the wishes of the Premier until his political endeavors have an appropriate ending.

MEN ENTERTAINED.

Officers of B Company, Peterborough Rangers, Act as Hosts.

After parade on Tuesday night the N.C.O.'s and men of B Company, Peterborough Rangers, were entertained in the recreation room of the Armories. Coffee, sandwiches, and cake were handed out by Captain Monkman and Lieutenant Dunkerley and were enjoyed by all ranks. Addressing the men, Mr. Monkman reminded them of the good showing made by the company in previous years and urged them to try and maintain the honor of being the best company in the regiment. The officers and N.C.O.'s, he said, would be pleased to help the recruits along so that they might come up to the standard set by the older members.

Mr. Dunkerley, who acted as song leader, also said a few words reiterating Mr. Monkman's statements.

"You will be as enthusiastic as I am when you try Quaker Cake Flour"

WHO does not enjoy good cake? Who is not proud to make good cake? Who does not exclaim delight when cake is especially good?

Cake-baking is an art. Every good cake-baker takes delight in it. Never have I had more pleasure in cake-baking than with Quaker Cake Flour.

You will be as enthusiastic as I am when you try this new Cake Flour. You will find it easy and simple to use. You will have no fear of baking failures. You may use it with your own recipes or with those printed on the package. Your cakes will be at once the delight and envy of your friends.

Made from the hearts of the best ONTARIO winter wheat, Quaker Cake Flour is ground to surprising fineness and sifted many times through silken cloth. With it is mixed a portion of high-grade potato flour.

Thus it makes cakes of surprising lightness and fine texture, which keep fresh for days and days. Its very delicacy is a background for the fine flavours of the other ingredients. It is not a self-rising flour. Use it the same as ordinary flour, only use less for each cake.

Try Quaker Cake Flour. Then you will be just as enthusiastic about it as I am.

Many of my friends have baked with Quaker Cake Flour. All are unanimous in this verdict—"at last we have a cake flour superior to all others, which is made by a Canadian miller and, best of all, from Canadian wheat."

An Ex-Buck Private Goes Back to France

The Glory Dies Not, and the Grief is Past

Dear Mac:

Ten years ago on the hills and plains of Artois one sought in vain for peace. In the last two days, I have travelled from Neuville-St. Vaast, whose brand-new church dominates the countryside for miles, out to Arleux and Oppy, thence south to Fampoux and Feuchy, and Monchy and Tilloy, zig-zagging here and there to visit intervening villages. And I sought for signs of war almost as fruitlessly as one might have sought peace in 1917.

One of the things that has impressed me most in this trip is the way distances have shrunk. It used to seem a long way from Vimy to Arras, but today we run in for lunch and back again in the hour-and-a-half the union allows back home. The whole circuit of this battlefield can be made in a few hours by those who have no memories of 1917 to keep them lingering here and there, looking for the tunnels and the defences on the "Pimple" and all the other landmarks that were so great a part of our lives.

It is up on the ridge, towards Souchez and the Wood of the Swallows, that one finds the most familiar signs of the great conflict. Motor tractors and armies of laborers have here tried in vain to straighten out the tumbled earth, and the task has been abandoned. Old wire, still clinging to the short wooden stakes that were not used after 1915, is to be found in abundance among the rank grass and tall weeds. Shell holes full of water, bits of telephone wire, nose caps of shells, rusty mess tins, and fragments of decayed rifle stocks are to be found in a short walk over the holes and hummocks of this breezy and desolate upland. Metal pickers, solitary, penurious men with sacks and sticks, still roam hereabouts, seeking odd bits of copper and brass which have escaped the attention of organized salvage parties. But it's quiet. It's different, Mac, from that morning ten years ago when at four seconds before zero hour the guns ceased fire, nearly deafening us with the silence after weeks of bombardment. And then at 5.30 every piece of artillery on a twelve-mile front started firing again. But we'll return to the battle later; just now we are seeing the ridge as it is today.

There are points at which reminders of the achievements of our troops mingle with those of earlier defenders. On the crest of the ridge, within sight of the wonderful lighthouse-memorial which the French have built on the heights of Notre Dame de Lorette, is a great slab of stone and bronze which bears no Christian symbol. It is a monument to the French African troops, inscribed in French and Arabic. These dark soldiers of the Republic are commended as being "Without fear and without pity," and truly did they justify that description. The reverse side of this memorial reveals the cosmopolitan nature of the war, for here are plaques to the memory of the Swedes, Swiss, Slavs and other foreigners who fought in the ranks of the French Army, though they did not necessarily fight here, at Vimy.

France paid heavily in the defense of Vimy, and again in the two glorious and futile attempts to capture the ridge, in May and September, 1915, but to Canada belongs the honor of taking this commanding point from the enemy. (It was a thrill when we topped the ridge that Easter Monday and looked as far out over the Douai plain as the fog would let us!) The memorials and cemeteries about Vimy tell of nearly every country that makes up the British Commonwealth of Nations. South Africans did wonderful work near Bailleul and Fampoux; Scotland was represented by more men than ever fought under Robert the Bruce; England had 3 corps there, with many famous regiments; Welsh troops attacked formidable positions about Feuchy and Tilloy; Ireland was represented by a division; Australians held the southern flank of the battle, about Bullecourt.

Villages with historic names, places which, ten years ago, were heaps of rubble, doomed to fill holes in the roads for the transport of advancing troops, are now completely rebuilt. Nearly every one has its church, an edifice more eloquent of the religious zeal of the villagers than of the ability of French architects. Some of them are built almost entirely of concrete. Others combine irreconcilable materials in designs astonishingly unorthodox.

The village of Vimy (it is almost a town) possesses a handsome Palais de Justice and Hotel de Ville. There is a restaurant here in which I procured an excellent four-course lunch, with a half-bottle of wine, for the equivalent of thirty cents. A little rough and ready, perhaps, but such a meal as was only a dream to the men who fought their way down to the red ruin that was the old Vimy. Those were different days. I have seen the brief but eloquent description of life on the upward slope of Vimy Ridge ten years ago, where once deep tunnels and wonderful earthworks made victory the reward only of the lion-hearted. It is the record of a platoon commander, who wrote: "Awful march into line. Took battalion ten hours to struggle from Roclincourt—a distance of one and a half miles; mud awful; snowing hard; pitch dark. Stumbled over chasms of old Bosche line. Men arrived so exhausted they fell down and slept in the snow, or wanted to. Had to make them dig. Arrived at four and were attacked at 11 the same morning." Well, Mac, we all went through the same experience that night. Those were the conditions in which was captured and held most of the territory that makes the Vimy battlefield.

The village of Arleux (captured by the Canadians in the attack that started at 4.25 on the morning of April 28), is prolific in reminders of the devastation of those days. Outside the recently-completed red and white Marie, on what might be the village green, is the stump of a tree, almost four feet in height, dead and blackened. It is a more impressive and appropriate monument than the village memorial usually found upon such a site.

At the cross-roads where one turns from Arleux towards Oppy, the remains of an old factory stand untouched. On the way to Oppy, here and there are seen broken cellars and garden walls, and partly demolished pill-boxes. Occasionally one encounters a peasant's holding fenced about with barbed wire, held by our old corkscrew posts.

Oppy is in much the same condition of incomplete reconstruction as Arleux and Fresnoy. The wood of hateful memory is now a patch of brushwood with an occasional decapitated tree standing a few feet above the surrounding bushes. I learned locally that the wood has been surveyed with a view to purchase by some citizens of Hull, England, who wish to lay out part of it on which to erect a memorial to the sturdy Yorkshire troops who, like so many others, found Oppy Wood a death-trap. Gavrelle yields little of interest, save the inevitable new church, and Bailleul, occupied by Canadians on April 13 and 14, claims distinction only because of an old war sign, "Lorries," still adhering to a battered wall.

This letter is getting kind of long, Mac, and there is still a lot of Vimy to cover. If we can't find Tiffin, Tadpole, Famine and Bleary trenches, taken by the 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th Divisions ,we can at least follow the corps over the ridge and pick up such landmarks as remain. It doesn't seem right, somehow, to be going back to the Hotel du Commerce in Arras for the night. It would be more natural on Vimy Ridge to curl up in a damp blanket in some musty sap or funkhole.

But it's me for Arras! Le guerre fini.

PAUL ADAMS.

Dollar bills showered girl shoppers in Boston recently when they were walking past the offices of an insurance company. No one appeared to claim the money.

Interesting! A Letter From Mrs. H. Peyton of Peterboro'

"I am so happy, for now washday never bothers me. No more exhaustion. No more backaches from washboard rubbing. No more red, swollen hands. Rinso makes my week's wash whiter than ever. All I do is soak my clothes in Rinso suds overnight. In the morning all the dirt is soaked out so that all I need to do is just rinse them. Even the most soiled spots need only a few rubs to make them nice and white."

MRS. H. PEYTON,
67 Lansdowne,
Peterborough, Ont.

You can't rub clothes as white as this soap soaks them

The new way is easy. No weary toil over the washboard—no more hard rubbing.

Just soak—rinse—and your week's wash is whiter than you've ever seen it! And out on the line hours earlier.

Use Rinso next wash. You need no other soap or chips—or water softener. Rinso softens the hardest water.

Rinso alone, does the work

Nothing else is needed on washday but Rinso. No bar soaps, no chips or powders; for Rinso is rich, gentle soap—granulated.

It contains no acids, harsh chemicals or bleaches. Is easy on the hands and safe for the clothes.

Soak the wash in these creamy suds . . . . and the dirt and stains quickly loosen and float off in the water.

Clothes last longer, for they aren't rubbed threadbare against the washboard. Try Rinso next washday and say goodbye to all hard rubbing.

Your grocer will supply you. He has many customers for Rinso.

Splendid for Washing Machines

Rinso works wonders in washing machines. The clothes are washed quicker and whiter. An hour or so and a whole week's washing is finished.

WORK WORN PEOPLE.

Find Renewed Health By Improving Their Blood.

If you feel run down, it means that your blood is thin and watery, that your vitality is low. Your feet are easily chilled. You do not sleep well and you are tired when you rise in the morning. You find no pleasure in your meals and are listless and dispirited at your work. You have no energy to enjoy yourself.

Thousands of men are run down by anxieties of work. Thousands of women are broken down by their household toil, with tired limbs and aching backs; thousands of girls are pale, listless and without attraction. It all means the same thing—thin and watery blood, vitality run-down, anaemia, poor appetite, palpitating heart, short breath.

Do not submit to this. Get new blood and with it new vitality. There is no difficulty in doing this. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills build up and enrich the blood, which brings with it new health and vitality. The man, woman or girl who takes Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is never run down. They're better men in every way,
When "Kruschen" starts the live-long day.

That "Kruschen" Feeling!

You can't keep it out!

It's not merely that you get up in the morning feeling life to be the best thing that ever happened; that you tackle breakfast with the appetite of a cowboy; that you set out for the office chirruping like a skylark; that after you've got through a full day's work you still feel as fresh as paint.

It's not merely this. "That Kruschen feeling" bobs up at odd moments while you're actually engaged on the serious work of the day — and enables you to do it better, too!

And it's so easy to acquire it! No bothersome rules and regulations, no monotonous exercise, no special dieting. All you do is to tip a tiny, tasteless pinch of Kruschen Salts every morning into your breakfast cup of coffee or tea.

Because Kruschen is a combination of just the vital salts that Nature ordains for the body's perfect health, it does for you what no other salts can do. Not only does it cleanse the body of all clogging waste matter; not only does it purify and refresh the blood; it also has a most remarkable tonic influence over the whole system, filling you with that unconquerable feeling of fitness, energy and cheeriness which is known all the world over as "that Kruschen feeling."

Remember — it's the "little daily dimeful" that does it! Buy a 75c bottle of Kruschen Salts to-day and start a new chapter in your life to-morrow.

Tasteless in Coffee or Tea

DOCTOR FACES TWO CHARGES

Serious Accusations Are Made Against Dr. B. Cohen.

REMANDED ON BAIL.

TORONTO, May 19 (Canadian Press).—Facing two charges of abortion, Dr. Benjamin Cohen was remanded until Friday when he appeared before Magistrate Patterson in the Women's Police Court to-day. Bail of $15,000 was renewed.

Entering Dr. Cohen's office yesterday to execute a warrant in connection with the charge almost a year old, the detectives found a young woman on the operating table. The physician was placed under arrest on the charge of having performed an illegal operation and the young woman was sent to a local hospital for examination.

The formal charge against Dr. Cohen gives July, 1926, as the date of the alleged operation and Gladys Moss as the woman upon whom it was alleged to be performed.

CANADA'S PEAL OF BIG BELLS CROSSING SEA

Fifty-three Bells For Mighty Carillon Weigh 53 Tons.

LARGEST IN WORLD.

Bells Will Ring Out Message of Jubilee To Whole World on July 1.

MONTREAL, Que., May 19 (Special to The Examiner).—The famous bells, which on July 1st will announce to a listening world that Canada is celebrating her sixtieth year of Confederation have left the foundry at Croydon, have left the port of London, are nearing the Dominion of Canada, and will be in Montreal this week-end.

The ship which is bringing this mighty load, the carillon that will boom from the majestic victory tower of the Parliament Buildings at Ottawa, is the Canadian Pacific steamship "Balfour," and it is fitting that a vessel flying the flag of a Canadian enterprise should have the honor of sailing into Canadian waters with the bells that will ring forth the name of Canada across the wide world.

The bells of the carillon are 53 in number and weigh 53 tons, the bourdon alone accounting for 10 tons, but with the framework and fittings, the total weight of the consignment from Croydon's world-famous foundry is as much as 75 tons. When the bells are installed, the Canadian capital will have the largest carillon in the world and one which also is acclaimed as the most beautiful in tone and sonority.

Many applications for the position of carilloneur have been received by the Civil Service Commission at Ottawa, most of them coming from organists. It is, however, pointed out that operating the keyboard of a carillon requires special qualifications possessed by few organists.

The applications are to be considered by Professor J. W. Bearder, head of the Canadian College of Organists, and Mr. William Gorham Rice, of the New York State Civil Service Commission, who is a recognized authority on the subject.

It is announced that on Dominion Day the broadcasting of "the carillon of Ottawa" will be in the hands of the Dominion Government, which will "have the air" for Canada on that day and it is further understood that the bells will be effectively relayed so that their sound may be heard in any part of the British Empire and throughout the world.

Walker Trading Heavy At Listless Session

TORONTO, May 19 (Canadian Press).—Hiram Walker was the only issue on the Toronto Stock Exchange today which was heavily dealt in, the issue having more than six thousand shares turned over and gaining ¾ at 52¾. The market was listless with but little interest being shown. Gains and losses were equally distributed over the list. Page Hersey Common gained ¾; at 72¾, Kelvinator was ½ higher at 14½, and British American Oil gained ⅛ at 26¼. On the weaker side, Davies "A" declined ¾ at 43. International Nickel was down ⅛ at 58⅝, and Central Manitoba Mines declined 4 at 160.

Mine Trading Light With Prices Steady

TORONTO, May 19 (Canadian Press).—Trading was light on the Standard Mining Exchange today and the market was featureless. Prices were steady, gains and losses being equally divided over the list. Argonaut Consolidated was 1½ higher at 53½, while Castle Trethewey was up 4 at 85. Duprat gained 1 at 11, and Goldale was up 1 at 26. Of the weaker issues, Barry Hollinger declined 1 at 30, while Kirkland Hunton was down ¾ at 22¼, and Potter Doal dropped 1 at 28. Total sales amounted to 377,240 shares.

Irregular Movement On New York Market

NE YORK, May 19 (Canadian Press).—A series of bullish demonstations in the high priced industrials, several of which, including Baldwin, General Motors, American Smelting, and United States Cast Iron Pipe touched new record high prices, contrasted with the weakness of the oils, textiles, and New York tractions in today's irregular stock market. Trading was again in unusually heavy volume. Easy money rates, the renewal charge on call loans being fixed at 4 per cent, was again the leading "bull" factor. Some uneasiness developed, however, as the result of the decline in steel production. The Kansas City Southern, the first railroad to report its April earnings, showed a drop of $134,646 in net income compared with the same month of last year.

General Motors crossed 200, and Baldwin sold above 216, but heavy profit taking developed at those levels and both issues had cancelled all their gains by early afternoon. This failed, however, to check the bullish demonstrations in the other so-called "blue chip" stocks, United States Cast Iron Pipe touching 245, American Smelting 158, People's Gas 144¾, and Mack Trucks 1[illegible], or within ⅛ of the year's top.

Wheat and Corn Rise When Yield Threatened

CHICAGO, May 19 (Canadian Press).—Storms in the corn belt hoisted the corn market today to new high price records for the season. Wheat also went up owing largely to curtailed estimates of domestic Winter crop yields. Opening at ½c to 1⅝c advance, corn continued to climb. Wheat started unchanged to ⅝c higher and subsequently rose all around, developed firmer. Provisions also developed strength.

Opening prices were: Wheat, May 143⅝, July 138¼. Corn, May unquoted, July 91. Oats, May 49¼, July 50.

Eighty persons were killed and more than 100 injured in a tornado which swept through the business section of Poplar Bluff, Mo., on May 6. The heart of the city was devastated. The tornado hit like a bullet. Buildings of large size were crumpled as though they were paper and trees were pulled from the earth and hurled into the air. One photo shows wreckage on the principal street following the tornado. Hundreds of automobiles were demolished. The other shows the approach of another tornado at Oklahoma City.

FRENCH RULERS GO BACK HOME

Doumergue and Briand Cheered By Crowds As Train Pulls Out.

KING SEES THEM OFF.

LONDON, May 19 (Canadian Press)—President Doumergue of France today concluded his visit of state to England, where he has been the busy recipient of numerous honors during the last three days.

Accompanied by Foreign Minister Briand, he entrained for Dover after cordial farewells from the King, the Prince of Wales, Prince Henry, the Duke of Connaught, and others at the railway station.

M. Briand and the Foreign Secretary, Sir Austen Chamberlain, conversed earnestly for some moments before the Presidential party went aboard. The train steamed out to the accompaniment of cheers from the crowd on the platform and parting salutations from the royal group. President Doumergue remained at the window, waving farewell and seemingly moved by the demonstration.

CANADA TO HEAR WATER ARGUMENT

Representative To Be Present at Hearing of Chicago Case.

OTTAWA, May 19. — (Canadian Press.)— Canada will have a representative holding "watching brief" at the hearing of the oral argument in the Chicago water diversion case to take place before special master Hughes at Washington May 31, it was learned to-day.

Mr. Hughes, who was appointed by the Supreme Court of the United States to hear evidence in the matter will, on completion of oral argument for the contending parties, present his finding to the court.

On the presentation of the special master's findings, the Supreme Court will, it is understood, set a date for the hearing of final argument before that judicial body. Expectations were that argument before the United States' Supreme Court may take place about January next.

Township Loses Suit For 50 Cents

HANOVER, Ont., May 19. — The Township of Egremont was the defendant in an interesting court action which came up in Division Court at Durham yesterday before Judge Sutherland, of Owen Sound. The action was brought against the township by Alvin Robb of the 12th Concession for one hour's wages, the amount in dispute being fifty cents. Judgment was given in favor of the plaintiff for the full amount of his claim with costs.

The plaintiff was engaged in township road work and the trial was the result of a dispute of time. Robb claimed ten hours' pay, while the township foreman turned it in at nine hours. This was accepted by the other men who were employed at the same time, but Robb refused to accept nine hours' pay and immediately issued a writ against the township to recover the full amount.

DOCTORS STUDY FLIGHT EFFECT

Wish To Know What Rarer Air Does To Fliers.

ACTS SAME AS ETHER.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Medical science is focussing its glasses on venturesome aviators who seek altitude records high above the clouds. The effects of the lighter air on the hearts and the consciousness of the athletic young men who qualify as stunt flyers are being studied.

Medical men of eminence are struggling to fathom the sleep-producing properties of anaesthetics which exert an injurious effect on the patient.

Discussions here by some of the outstanding anaesthetists of the country, attending the American Medical Association sessions, reveal that the physical mechanism of sleep, natural or induced, remains one of nature's deepest mysteries. To the solution of that mystery many theories have been offered. Time has caused most of them to be discarded.

Dr. John L. Lampson, of San Francisco, has advanced the theory that improved methods to amplify heart beats — radio amplification rather than the earphones of the stethoscope—will go far toward reducing the possibility of deaths on operating tables by persons with bad or weak hearts.

Among the greatest aids has been the science of aeronautics, the relationship of which to anaesthesis was described by Dr. Robert W. Clarke, of Bellevue Hospital Medical School, New York City. The patient put under the effects of ether, it was explained, undergoes precisely the same reactions as a patient taken to an altitude of five miles in an airplane. The aviator, as he goes into thinner air, gradually loses control of various senses until finally, if he goes high enough he loses consciousness altogether and probably crashed to death. The average person under the effects of ether goes as high as the record altitude flyers.

PINEDO IS UNABLE TO CONTINUE HOP

Fog Forces Italian Aviator To Come Down in Rimouski Harbor.

Father Point, Quebec, May 19. — Canadian Press. — Commander De Pinedo, attempting to fly from Quebec to Shippegan, N. B., en route to Newfoundland, alighted in Rimouski Harbor at 1.20 this afternoon. It is thought he was compelled to come down because of the foggy weather.

The noted Italian flier left Quebec in his big plane, "Santa Maria," at 11.32 this morning for Shippegan Island, N.B., en route to Newfoundland, from where he will start on his long last loup for Italy via the Azores.

At one o'clock this afternoon it was reported that De Pinedo had passed Riviere Du Loup at 12.43 p.m.

Previous to starting the Italian aviator stated that if he encountered fog he would make a landing at Tadousac. He regarded the flight to Newfoundland as one of the most dangerous jumps in his trip. This, he said, was on account of climatic conditions peculiar to that section of the Atlantic seaboard. Once safely away from Newfoundland he considered the flight something in the light of plain sailing to the Azores, although he admitted that the first few hundred miles of that stretch also contained dangers.

"Ask Me Another" Costs Man His Wife

LOS ANGELES, Calif., May 19. — (United Press). — Cornelius Deasy was without a wife today because of the "ask me another" question and answer craze. Deasy, his wife Monta told the court, was bitten by the question bug and after that her life was one round of "Who is the Queen of Roumania?" and "How high is up, if any?" she said.

"I stood it as long as I could," she testified, "and one day in self defence, I hid his question book. He whipped me when I wouldn't tell him where it was". Mrs. Deasy was granted a divorce.

C. E. Sisson, a former resident of this city has been elected chairman of the Toronto section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. When a resident of this city, Mr. Sisson was a member of the Peterborough Utilities Commission, and also a member of the local branch of the Engineering Institute.

WHAT A DIFFERENCE A CIPHER MAKES

Comstocks Selling Their $85,000 Stock of Furniture.

The printer yesterday, in the advertisement that appeared as the opening announcement of A. Comstock & Sons' huge furniture sale, certainly must have looked upon the occasion as an international event instead of the supreme event it is to this city and district.

The sale covers everything in the furniture line in the Comstock establishment and is for the purpose of turning over this $85,000 stock. The printer added a cipher and made it an $85,000,000 stock, which of course was an outlandish mistake on his part. However, it served to show just what a difference a cipher makes and also it proved to the advertiser that many people read advertisements very closely, as evidenced by the number of citizens who commented on it.

PICKFORDS SEEK DIVORCE IN PARIS

Film Actor and Musical Comedy Star Decide To Separate.

LOS ANGELES, May 19.— (Canadian Press.)—Marilyn Miller, musical comedy star, and her husband, Jack Pickford, film actor, will seek a divorce in Paris next month, Pickford disclosed to-day.

The Royal Canadian Air Force is extending its operations into the sub-Arctic, where it will commence a survey this fall of ice conditions in Hudson Strait. Six Fokker planes of the type shown will be used, in addition to one Moth. The Fokkers can use wheels for hopping off on land or floats for water work, as illustrated. In winter, skis may be attached. The work comes under the Department of Marines and Fisheries, of which Hon. P. J. A. Cardin is the Minister. The sketch map shows the approximate location of the three proposed bases at Port Burwell in Northern Labrador; at Lake Harbor, in the general neighborhood of Big Island, and at Nottingham Island, near the entrance to Hudson Bay.

LEAFS LOSE SECOND GAME

Eissonette's Eighth Homer For Season Cinches Game For Bisons.

SKEETERS LOSE 5-3.

NEW YORK, May 19 (Canadian Press).—The Stars defeated Rochester at Syracuse yesterday, 7 to 1. Poetz held the Colts to seven hits.

The Buffalo Bisons made it two in a row over the visiting Leafs, taking the second game of the series, 5 to 2. A long home run by Bissonette cinched the game for the Bisons. It was Bissonette's eighth of the season. Toronto worried along without Billy Webb as he was still suffering from injuries received in Tuesday's fracas.

Newark defeated Jersey City, 5 to 3. Swaney was invincible with men on base, although he was touched for 11 hits.

Reading's scheduled double-header at Baltimore was postponed because of rain.

BOSTON HEAVIES READY TO BATTLE

Maloney and Sharkey To Meet in the First Bout To-night.

NEW YORK, May 19.—(U.P.).—Tex Rickard's genius in manufacturing million dollar gates will get its first real application of the year in the Yankee Stadium tonight when the two Boston heavyweights, Jim Maloney and Jack Sharkey, meet in the first of two bouts intended to lead to a world's heavyweight championship match.

The winner will meet Jack Dempsey provided the latter can make the grade and the survivor will go into the ring early in the fall against the champion, Gene Tunney.

Right here the opinion might be expressed that the championship match will be fought by the same principals who fought the Sesqui record-breaker, Dempsey and Tunney.

Calls Maloney.

Maloney looks like the winner tomorrow night, and Dempsey ought to beat him when they meet. If Sharkey wins from Maloney, Dempsey ought to beat him.

Rickard expects the gate tomorrow night to be between $400,000 and and $500,000, and if the winner should make a sensational showing—something that is not to be expected—he would make a million dollar attraction with Dempsey. Then Dempsey as the winner would pack any stadium in the country.

It has been suggested that the public would not fall for another match between Dempsey and Tunney because of suspicions that the first match was not contested on its merits. There might have been some mild protests, that would have injured the gate if Dempsey had been tossed back into the ring without any preliminary trials.

Sharkey and Maloney aren't national heroes and their records are none too impressive. Without some more steaming up neither would be an attraction against Tunney, who is not the appealing type of killing fighter that takes the fancy of the public against weak opponents.

But with Dempsey involved the eliminations are almost certain to develop in the survivor the necessary popularity.

Malone probably will weigh about 203 pounds tonight and Sharkey says he will be around 188.

For all their bulk, neither is a deadly puncher, Maloney is 7 to 5 favorite.

COMPETE IN FINAL FOR GOLF HONORS

Young French Star and Miss Dorothy Pearson Meet To-day.

NEWCASTLE, County Down, Ireland, May 19 (Canadian Press).—Mlle. Simone Thion de la Chaume, petite 19-year-old French golfer, and Miss Dorothy Pearson, young Kentish player, will meet to-day in the final of the British women's open golf championship tournament.

The young French star, who defeated Miss Pearson in 1924 in the final of the British girls' championship, is the favorite for the 36-hole competition.

By her brilliant play yesterday Miss Pearson prevented the possibility of an all-French final, defeating Mlle. Leblan of France, who had reached the semi-finals, four up and three to play. Miss Pearson, whose home is in Tunbridge Wells, Kent, came through her elimination matches brilliantly, defeating such noted players as Mrs. Gavin and Miss Molly Gourlay, the present English champion, who was one of the leading favorites for the open title.

Mlle. De La Chaume, who has been favored to win ever since beginning of the tournament, played great golf yesterday, being at her best during the semi-final match which developed into a 7 and 6 defeat for Miss Enid Wilson, the schoolgirl golfer who has been playing in great form.

TAKE OPENER FROM GIANTS

Pittsburgh Pirates Pile Up an Early Lead For 13-6 Victory.

ROBINS DEFEATED.

NEW YORK, May 19 (Canadian Press).—The Pittsburgh Pirates piled up eleven runs against the Giants in the first three innings at the Polo Grounds and won the opener of a series by 13 to 6. Henry was sent to the showers in the opening inning before he could retire a man, and Fitzsimmons, who followed him, was also hit freely. Every player on the Pittsburgh team with the exception of Spencer got at least one hit. Wright hit a home run with two on in the second inning, and Pie Traynor hit for the circuit with none on in the eighth. Doc Farrell of the Giants hit a homer with Harper on base.

Loose Fielding.

Loose Robin fielding enabled the Chicago Cubs to triumph at Brooklyn, 7 to 4. Charley Root held Brooklyn to six hits while Chicago made eight off the combined deliveries of Bill Doak and Rube Ehrhardt. The Cubs tucked the game away in the fifth when the Robin defence collapsed and four unearned runs crossed the plate. Henline made three of Brooklyn's five errors.

The Braves humbled the world's champion St. Louis Cardinals, 8 to 1, in the first game of the series at Boston yesterday. The Warriors fell on Sherdel for five runs in the sixth and drove him from the game with two more in the seventh. Littlejohn relieved, and the only hit made off his delivery was an exceedingly irregular home run which came in the eighth when Richbourg's single to left got away from Hafey and went to the fence.

Cincinnati at Philadelphia postponed, threatening weather.

IMPORTANT PART OF GOLF—THE CLOTHES

BY CURTIS WOOD

Discriminating golfers who like comfort and style as well as low scores should not thoughtlessly prove duffers when selecting sartorial turnouts for the links. A man may feel more comfortable in an outfit that apparently hails from an attic or a rummage sale, but golfers who know the dollar and cents value of personal appearance will always be mindful of attire.

Knickers Less Full.

This year knickers will be slightly less full. Some models will have pleats at the waist. Jackets are to be featured by straight backs; pinch-backs and half-belts. Its quite likely that the four-piece combination suits in light-colored shetlands, cheviots, crashes and flannels will be as popular as heretofore. There's snap, too, in the many pleasing patterns of figured and part herring-bone effects. For the golfer who likes lightness of material and extreme simplicity there are neat models of plain and fancy linen.

Ties and Shirts.

Plain flannel and broadcloth, collar-attached shirts in blues, tans, grays and white will again find a place in the experienced golfer's wardrobe. Ties should be of solid color and of shades that do not upset the harmony of the other apparel. Then ther are attractive patterns of red, blue, gray and brown with club insignia of golfers or symbols of sport embroidered in harmonizing colors. Players from the same club or course are more and more adopting similar costumes, creating the possibility that golf, like baseball, football and other sports, may soon have its uniforms.

Imported Swiss shetlands will predominate among slip-over sweaters this year. The smartest colors are green, corn, brown and white. Stripes are taboo and it is probable that the small figured models with hose to match will meet with the fancy of many patrons of the tee.

Quieter Hose.

There seem to be a tendency among golfers who show a better caste in selecting their hose to prefer those of less brilliant color combinations and in some cases solid colors, but nevertheless, golf hose of bright Scotch plaids, figured and diamond effects continue to win favor.

If fashion does more than merely dictate, many are the greens that will be trampled upon by brogues this summer. The brown grain leatehr oxfords with metal spikes are becoming more common. However, this popularity is not without competition, the crepe-rubber and cotton-fibre-and-rubber sole being keen rivals. Two-color models will continue in the niche they have occupied so long, but the colors will be tan and white, instead of black and white.

Changes of weather that come so unexpectedly may be met with equanimity when one is armed with a balloon cloth featherweight raincoat. Navy and deep sea green are the most popular colors for these coats.

Among the most desirable accesories are the English wire spring belt and garters, so constructed that they are always form-fitting and very comfortable. Anoter belt that will be very useful to a golfer is of leather with cartridge loops for wooden tees.

An uppermost, lightweight brown felt snap-brim hats, Yeddo straw helmest, natural color linen sun hats, linen and light colored tweed caps will supply all over-head needs.

Ice Cream Cones For School Pupils

Ice cream cones were distributed yesterday at the close of the school day among the pupils of Queen Alexandra School by the Home and School Association in recognition of the success of their efforts in collecting old newspapers for sale to aid the funds of the Association. Five collections are usually made each year in the school. The one before the latest yielded twenty dollars in hard cash. The latest effort promises to exceed this sum—Hence the cones.

TIGERS DEFEAT SENATORS 5-3

Make Their Hits in the Opening Game of the Series.

BROWNS WIN FIRST.

NEW YORK, May 19. — Canadian Press. — The Tigers made their hits count yesterday and defeated Washington in the opening game of the series at Detroit 5 to 3. Marty McManus, with two doubles, drove in three of the Tiger runs. Bassler, a Detroit catcher, was put out of the game in the 7th innings for disputing a decision of Umpire Hallin on a called ball. An inning later Umpire Dineen chased Jack Onslow, coach of the Washington pitchers, from the dugout, after Goslin had been called out at first on a close play.

Paced by Bing Miller, who boosted his average to .446, and went into the major league batting leadership, the Browns outslugged the Boston Red Sox at St. Louis and won the first game of the series, 8 to 6. The Brown right fielder got four hits, including a home run, in five times at bat.

Philadelphia at Chicago; New York at Cleveland postponed, rain.

CLERKS BEAT HYDRO 9 TO 8

Win Close Game By Scoring Three Runs in Last Inning.

BUNCHED HITS COUNT.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 19.—The Clerks were lucky to win last night's association softball game at the Agricultural Grounds from the clever Hydro team by a 9 to 8 score, three runs in the ninth turning a two-run deficit into a one run victory. The Hydro boys played better ball in their field and outhit the champions but failed to bunch their bingles in all but the seventh inning, while the Clerks generally came through with a safe blow when a team-mate was on the sacks. As usual when these two teams clash, it was a snappy game, with the result in doubt till the last out.

MONTREAL FOR INTERNATIONAL

Rumored Canada's Metropolis Will Enter Team Next Year.

PROVIDE GROUNDS.

MONTREAL, May 19—Rumors are persistept that this city will be represented in the International Baseball League next year. The regular run of citizen would like to see Montreal in one of the major leagues, but as there is no vacancy there and little likelihood of one, and further, as the International League has at least two franchises that would be far better here than where they are—Reading, certainly, and one other, probably—the chances seem bright to transfer one of them to this city.

The local end of it could easily be financed, and men are already prepared to do so, but it would be impossible to get grounds and stands for this year, so that nothing can be done before next year.

NEWSBOYS LOSE TO ELECTRICS

C.G.E. Pitcher Receives Better Support in the Field Than Dormer.

C.G.E. defeated The Examiner by score 10 to 1 in City League softball fixture played last night at Central Park. Nichols, pitching for the Electrics, received better support in the field than Dormer. Both teams have promising material and with a little more practice should provide better ball. Joe Dunkerley made his debut as league umpire, acting well at plate, while Bill Jackson officiated at the bases.

WATCH THE KIDNEYS

Fatigue and that tired feeling is the result of poison in the blood. When the kidneys fail to remove this poison from the system it leads to backache, rheumatic pains and sometimes to that fatal ailment known as Bright's disease. When this condition exists, don't delay, go to your druggist and get a box of Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills and they will quickly correct the cause of your trouble.

Mr. Arthur Pinch of Smith Township states that Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills give him more speedy relief than any other preparation that he had tried.

BERTAUD OUT SAYS BACKER

Definitely Decided That He Will Not Navigate Bellanca Plane.

SUCCESSOR NOT NAMED.

NEW YORK, May 19. Canadian Press. — Lloyd Bertaud definitely is not going to make the Paris flight in the Bellanca monoplane with Clarence Chamberlin, and his successor has been selected, but his identity will not be revealed until the plane is ready to hop off, Chas. A Levine, head of the company backing thef light, told the Associated Press this afternoon.

Early to-day Bertaud stated that the difficulties had been ironed out, and that he would go on the flight as originally planned, and that the injunction proceedings against Charles Levine, the backer of the flight, to prevent the "Columbia," from starting on its trip without him, would be withdrawn.

Adverse weather reports further delayed the Bellanca flight. Stormy seas between here and the Newfoundland coast also held to earth Commander Richard Byrd's giant monoplane, "America," and Captain Charles Lindeburgh's Ryan monoplane, "Spirit of St. Louis."

The weather reports said that the mid-Atlantic was clear, but favorable skies over the entire extent of the route probably would not appear before to-morrow.

ACADIANS HERE FOR THE HOLIDAY

Fast Toronto Team To Meet the Peterborough Seniors.

The Peterborough senior ball club will play its first game of the season on the morning of Victoria Day, when the fast Acadians team of Toronto will clash with Manager Swanston's outfit at Riverside Park. The fixture has been billed for the morning so as not to interfere with the horse races in the afternoon.

The Acadians will bring down their full line-up and have the advantage of having played league ball for some weeks. The Petes have been practising as faithfully, however, as the weather conditions would permit and should be in good shape for the battle with the Toronto squad. With Charlie Ansaldo back at his old position at shortstop and a new pitcher added to the firing corps in the person of Osterland, the Petes expect to field a well-balanced team.

Alex. Kay and Edgar Lebarr will umpire the fixture, which will get under way at 10.15 sharp.

NAMED MEMBER.

Yoshiro Ota, Third Member of Japanese Davis Cup Team.

TOKIO, May 19 (Canadian Press) —Yoshiro Ota, winner of last year's all-Japan tennis championship, has been named third member of the Japanese Davis Cup team. OTHER FRENCH FLIERS READY TO MAKE TRIP

Company Which Built White Bird Has Many Offers.

NO ATTEMPT AT PRESENT.

Officials Have Not Given Up Hope For Safety of Aviators.

PARIS, May 19. — Canadian Press. — The gallant attempt of Captains Nungesser and Coli, has fired other French fliers with the ambition to make the Paris - New York flight. Officials of the company which built the White Bird say they have been approached during the week by several well known French pilots anxious for financial support in order to brave the Atlantic. But until the fate of Nungesser and Coli is known it is not likely the construction company will plan any further transatlantic expeditions.

"It is hardly probable that any more flights from Paris to New York will be attempted for the present," an official informed the Associated Press yesterday. "The chances of success are considerably better flying eastward—from New York to Paris. Not only would the first part of the course be along the coast but if the ocean were crossed the fliers would reach a thickly inhabited country, with no danger of being lost, as Nungesser and Coli may be.

"Even if they swung off their route they could hardly go farther north than Scotland or farther south than Spain, and in either case they would certainly be seen. Flying westward one is almost certain to encounter fogs and bad weather off Newfoundland—after many hours at the steering wheel, when fatigue had already set in."

The company officials declared that they would not give Nungesser and Coli up for lost until at least another week, on the assumption that they reached the American coast. If they fell at sea, it is not considered possible that the plane would remain afloat for any time but the places where witnesses said they heard the motor of an aeroplane on May 9th, it is pointed out, were very close to Nungesser's proposed route, and this is a factor tending to buoy hopes which otherwise would have been abandoned before now.

Storms Sweeping Two States Do Most Harm In Big Cities.

PEORIA HARDEST HIT.

CHICAGO, May 19 (Canadian Press).—Hardest hit in the latest of the series of spring storms, causing loss of life and damage estimated at close to $4,000,000, which lashed through portions of Indiana and Illinois late yesterday were Peoria, Ills., and Indianapolis, Ind.

Several persons were believed to have been drowned at Peoria, where six inches of rain fell within a few hours, flooding the downtown streets and basements, tieing up railroad, automobile, and street car traffic and sending Farm Creek on a rampage.

Government boats were sent to the lowlands of East Peoria to rescue 300 families driven from their homes by the rising creek. Newspaper reporters who toured the Peoria district today estimated a possible death list of five to fifteeen, while police checked up a number of missing persons. The damage in Peoria was estimated at $750000.

More than 100 persons were injured in Indianapolis, when an 80-mile an hour wind struck the city, flattening houses and crippling telephone and telegraph wires. The storm damage was estimated at $3,000,000.

SCHOOL CADET PARADE TO BE BIGGEST EVER

Annual Inspection Set for June 2, With 500 Boys in Line

HIGH STANDARD

Public Invited to Witness Drill of Peterborough Battalion.

More than 500 Cadets of the Peterborough Public Schools Cadet Battalion will parade for annual inspection at Central Park on Thursday, June 2. The inspection, which promises to be the most pretentious in recent years, will commence at 3 o'clock.

Q. M. S. Instructor T. Thomas, of the Royal Canadian Regiment, Instructor for this district, has the efficieicy of the six companies at a high standard, and the individual company commanders believe that never has there been a keener interest in the training than this year. The notice from Headquarters of Military District No. 3 does not state who will be the inspecting officer, but Captain V. W. S. Heron, District Cadet Officer, will be present.

The programme for the inspection indicates that the event will be well worth seeing, and citizens are invited to be present. Special invitations are extended to the Mayor and members of the City Council, the Board of Education ,the Home and School Associations, and the Ministerial Association.

After the general salute, and inspection in line, the Battalion will march past in column of platoons. There will then be individual drill and physical training for the Denne cup, won for the past two years by E company, Queen Alexandra school. The Battalion will then advance in review order, and the general salute will be given, after which addresses will be made by the inspecting officer, the chairman of the Board of Education and others. The cadets will again be inspected as they march past in column of route to their private parades for dismissal.

The Personnel.

A Company, H. Rye, Prince of Wales
B Company, D. Woods, King Edward.
C Company, G. Doukas, Queen Mary.
D Company, G. Millen, Central.
E Company, D. Fraser, Queen Alexandra.
F Company, J. Merritt, King George.
Color Party—J. Smith, Prince of Wales.

The instructors at the several schools, to whom goes much of the credit for the high standard of efficiency attained by the Peterborough Cadets are:

F. E. Kerr, Prince of Wales.
H. H. Langford,fi King Edward.
W. G. Wager, Queen Mary.
O. M. Steer ,Central.
F. H. Dearborn, Queen Alexandra.
T. Miller, King George.

All drills and manoeuvres are carried out under the officers of the companies, who necessarily spend much time in study of the movements and technique.

Musketry has been carried on with good results by all the schools during the winter, a very good showing being made in the competition for the Laura Secord prize.

CHARGES NOT RECEIVED YET

Department Has Heard Nothing About Signals Being Ignored.

MADE BY U. S. VESSEL.

OTTAWA, May 20 (Canadian Press).—The reported charges of William H. Barber, of Niagara Falls, N.Y., that lake craft and persons along the Canadian shore near Cobourg, Oshawa, and Whitby had ignored distress signals of the United States coastguard cruiser C G 2364, have not been communicated to the Department of Marine and Fisheries, it was officially stated this morning.

The C G 2364 was towed into port at the Fort Niagara, N.Y., life-saving station last night, according to press despatches, after having been disabled for many hours in Lake Ontario through a broken crankshaft. At the time of the accident, the coastguard cruiser was making search for a trace of Harry Porteous, Niagara Falls, N.Y., and William Collins, Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., missing since May 9, when they sailed from the American side for Belleville.

Will File Charges.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., May 20.—(Canadian Press).—William H. Barber, when told to-day that his charges that lake craft and persons along the Canadian shore near Whitby and Cobourg, Ont., had disregarded signals of distress from the United States coastguard cruiser 2364, were not communicated to the Department of Marine and Fisheries at Ottawa, Ont., declared he would immediately get in touch with the Department and file formal charges.

City's Road Roller Breaks Into Sewer

The city's steam roller dropped into a hole at the corner of Reid and Sherbrooke street this morning, and remained there for several hours.

The holes in the street at that corner were being patched, and the roller was rolling the fine crushed stone down. The roadbed gave away over an old sewer, and one of the large wheels dropped into the hole.

A team of horses was called to help the roller out, but they could not move it, even with the power of the roller. The large wheel was jacked and blocked up with timbers, and the roller was got out by that means.

SCHOOL PUPILS TO CELEBRATE DOUBLE EVENT

Empire Day and Canada's Jubilee Will Be Commemorated on Monday.

PATRIOTIC CHORUSES.

Addresses on Canada and on the Empire Will Be Given.

Preparations for the Empire Day celebrations to be held on Monday afternoon, have been on a somewhat more elaborate scale than in former years. This year the idea of Confederation is being placed before the pupils. When the official celebrations fall due in July, all the schools will be closed for the holidays; consequently the schools will have a partial Jubilee celebration on Monday in addition to the usual Empire Day programme. The teachers have been describing the political events which led up to the unification of the four provinces and in many cases the geograph of the Dominion has been reviewed. To assist the principals in creating a Confederation atmosphere two booklets have been issued—one from the Department of Education and one from the Jubilee Committee at Ottawa—containing valuable information regarding Canadian history, natural resources and biographies of eminent men.

With the exception of the Collegiate Institute, where the event will be confined to pupils of the school and the programme carried out in entirety by the scholars, parents and friends of the children are invited to attend the celebration. At the Collegiate there will be a programme of patriotic songs, recitations and pageants.

King Edward School

The first event of the day at King Edward school will be the parade of the Cadet corps and the saluting of the colors. "God Save the King" will be sung by the school. Addresses will be given by J. F. Strick-

PRIZE WINNING POSTERS

First Prize, Boys—Drawn by Claire Sullivan, (13 years), 468 Gilmour Street, Peterborough, Ontario, in the Poster Contest, for the Clean-up Campaign.

POSTER PRIZES WON BY PUPILS OF ST PETER'S

FOR CLEAN-UP CAMPAIGN.

Many Splendid Drawings Submitted By Children of City.

Pupils from St. Peter's High School carried off both first prizes in the poster contest for the clean-up campaign sponsored by the Kiwanis Club.

Not only did the St. Peter's School carry off both first prizes for boy and girl, but the pupils entered very whole-heartedly into the contest by submitting several very fine drawings, and it was with difficulty that the judges made their decisions.

Among these drawings from the various contestants were a number which were evidently copied from previous pictures and which, while of the prize variety of drawings, were not the sole ideas of the boys and girls participating, which was one of the points to be taken into consideration together with other regular features.

Special mention — Miss Grace Shaughnessy, aged 13, 8 Haggart Street.

Very special mention is awarded Miss Madeline Gibson, aged 13, Hastings, Ont.

The drawing submitted by Miss Gibson of Hastings was a very fine piece of work, but was not the idea of the contest, having been taken from "The Pied Piper of Hamelin." Altogether this contest has been very popular among the scholars of the city and country, and, as stated in the item which appeared in The Examiner at the opening of this contest, the winning pictures are appearing in this issue, and all the posters will be displayed in store windows.

The Central Committee of the Kiwanis Club clean-up campaign wish to thank very sincerely all those who entered in this contest and made it such a success.

One of the few areas containing extensive lithium deposits of possible commercial value known within the British Empire is located in southeastern Manitoba.

Mr. Gilles has been pilot of an air service between Sydney and Adelaide during the past three years and is an experienced airman.

The proposed trans-Pacific flight will be from Vancouver to Sydney by way of Honolulu, Suva, Fanning Island and New Orleans.

First Prize, Girls—Drawn by Bernadette Galvin, (14 years), 461 Murray Street, Peterborough, Ontario, to advertise the Clean-up Campaign.

23 PATIENTS GET INSULIN

Free Distribution Made To Sufferers From Diabetes.

RELIEF, NOT CURE.

Records of insulin supplied last month to citizens of Peterborough and persons in the surrounding district, were issued to-day by Dr. Murray Fraser ,of the Peterborough Laboratory.

He stated that at present twenty-three patients are being supplied with free insulin for the treatment of diabetes, and that last month 23,400 units were given to the public.

Dr. Fraser remarked that insulin was not a cure for diabetes, but only a relief, which meant a great deal in acute cases.

THE TWENTY-FOURTH IN PETERBOROUGH

Fine Racing Programme Has Been Arranged for the Holiday.

Many Peterborough people have complained in past years that there was no amusement to be had in the city on the 24th of May. This year the Peterborough Turf Club has undertaken to provide a bill of high class racing at the Exhibition grounds that should appeal to everybody and guarantee a first-class afternoon's sport.

The Exhibition Board has put the track in wonderful shape and it is safe to say it is the best half mile track in Canada.

The horses are already here and the Turf Club is guaranteeing a day of real racing. Don't let it be said that with a holiday event arranged such as this the citizens of the city and district did not appreciate it.

Jurors Empanelled For Moore Trial

VANCOUVER, B.C., May 20. (Canadian Press.)— Four jurors who found Angus Nicholson guilty of manslaughter, were empanelled yesterday in Assize court on a jury with two women and six other jurors for the trial of Robert Moore, arraigned like Nicholson on a charge of murdering Marshall Douglas, advertising man, in a local hotel here on April 5. The trial is expected to continue until late to-day.

JULY 2ND MADE PUBLIC HOLIDAY

Proclamation Formally Issued By Ottawa—Three-Day Holiday.

CELEBRATE JUBILEE.

OTTAWA, May 20—Saturday, July 2, is made a public holiday throughout Canada in a proclamation issued yesterday.

While this was an intention announced in the parliamentary discussion, a formal order-in-council has been found necessary on account of the banks and the financial institutions, where maturing commercial transactions are affected by a legal holiday.

Dominion day coming on a Friday, there will be three holidays in succession, a fact lending itself to a fitting observance of the jubilee.

THE WEATHER

The temperature changes during the past ten days have been remarkably small, one day following another with almost the same figures. Yesterday's highest was 62 degrees, and the lowest last night 41. The rainfall was .26, or a trifle over ¼ inch. —W. P.

MANY SEIZURES ALONG BORDERS

Port Officers Report 150 at Six Ports—126 By Preventive Service.

WITHIN FEW MONTHS.

OTTAWA, May 20 (Canadian Press).—Canada's' efforts to curtail smuggling by the tightening of the Customs barriers at the chief border points of entry in Ontario and Quebec is evidenced by statistics pertaining to seizures available to-day. For the first four months of the present calendar year, the Department of National Revenue reports 150 seizures made by port officers at Windsor, Niagara Falls, and Bridgeburg, in Ontario, and St. John's, Coaticook and Beebe Junction in Quebec.

The result of the increased vigilance of the preventive service officers at Ontario border points is shown in the number of seizures made at Windsor, Niagara Falls, and Bridgeburg. In addition to those made by port officers, preventive service seizures totalled 126 at these points alone, covering the past seven months' period.

Mother Shops; Infant Wails Outside Store; Maiden Lady Intervenes ;Snap Box To Rescue

There are as many ways of bringing up children as there are mothers, but one of the latest came to light yesterday in a George street incident.

There was a sale on, and three baby carriages were parked outside the store. In one a baby was crying.

An obviously maiden lady came along, took pity on the child, and opened the store door so that mother could hear. Probably she was afraid that if she tried to comfort the baby herself she might be had up for kidnapping.

Somebody inside closed the door.

The lady opened it again.

Finally mother heard the wails. She sent out another child of about 5 years; onlookers wondered what this infant could do to comfort another. They watched.

Child number two dug a "Snap" box out of the depths of the carriage. A new baby comfort, thought the spectators.

Then from some other hiding place the alias mother produced a comfort, one of the rubber thing-a-ma-bobs that scientific persons declare spoils the shape of the baby's mouth and causes adenoids.

The cover was removed from the "Snap" box, the comforter was dipped inside, given a test suck by the 5-year-old, and thrust into the wide-open mouth of the yelling infant. The onlookers gasped.

Then someone investigated, and found that the box contained honey.

Proving again that all is not gold that is labelled so.

Canada's national parks exist to preserve, for the benefit and enjoyment of Canadians, some of the most beautiful examples of her natural scenery. They also include animal and bird sanctuaries and places associated with her history.

LINDBERGH OFF ON LONG FLIGHT IN MONOPLANE

Missourian Starts From New York For Paris Early To-day.

BRITISH PLANES START.

Aviators Seek To Establish New Non-Stop Flight Record.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N.Y., May 20. — Canadian Press. — Charles A. Lindbergh, captain in the Missouri guards, but "slim" to his buddies, set out to-day on an unmarked air trail for Paris. The Missourian, who plays a lone hand, had no one to show him the way as he hurled his Ryan monoplane, "the Spirit of St. Louis," into the muggy air above the Roosevelt field at two minutes before eight o'clock this morning.

Five times in the long run-way over which he sped in, making his take off, "the Flying Fool," as he is affectionately termed by his friends, was close to disaster.

At the very last as he was climbing before straightening out for the start of his course leading north, his plane, weighted by a load of 5150 pounds, barely cleared a string of telegraph wires. A few seconds before it had almost struck a road scraper as he was attempting to rise from the ground. Three times the plane struck soft spots and bounded in the air, always coming back to earth, and finally straightening out after seconds of hesitation which seemed minutes to the anxious spectators fringing the flying field.

The plane carried 448 gallons of gasoline and Lindbergh expected to land in Paris within 36 hours. His departure was an eleventh hour decision, for last night night he had no thought that the weather would permit him to essay the long jump across the Atlantic to-night. The weather at midnight was hopeful and at 3.30 a.m. he was at his hangar. After a careful study of the weather report he decided to go. At 7.30 he donned his flying suit and took his seat in the cabin of the plane. The cabin holds only one man sitting in a wicker chair, with the "stick" between his legs and little opportunity to move about.

Before boarding he remarked to Chief Abraham Skidmore, of the Nassau County Police, "When I enter the cockpit it's like going into a death chamber. When I get to Paris it will be like getting pardon from the Governor."

Beacons Ordered Lighted

PARIS, May 20 (Canadian Press).—All air beacons from the coast to Paris have been ordered lighted tomorrow to show Captain Lindbergh his way to the French capital. The world's greatest searchlight, atop Mount Valerian, just outside Paris, will flash a beam that on clear nights is visible for 200 miles. Ambassador Myron Herrick is active in arranging a welcome for the lone aviator.

Bellanca Won't Start

NEW YORK, May 20 (Canadian Press).—The Bellanca plane "Columbia" will not hop off on its New York to Paris flight while Captain Lindbergh is in the air, and if the "Flying Fool" is successful there will be no Bellanaca flight, Charles Levine, its backer, announced today.

Although the "America" is not ready to go Lindbergh's departure to-day postpones it definitely until next week. Commander Byrd said to-day he would not think of taking the air until Captain Lindbergh had his opportunity of reaching the goal both seek.

LOCAL Y'S MEN GIVEN CHARTER AT BIG MEETING

Members of Belleville Club Attend Inauguration Ceremonies.

PROVIDE PROGRAM

Formal Induction of Peterborough Members Impressively Carried Out.

Peterborough's Y's Men's Club formally entered the ranks of the International Y's Men's Clubs last night when Lieutenant-Governor Newt Thompson of the Eastern District of Ontario, accompanied by twenty-two other members of the Belleville club, presented the charter and formally inducted the members of the Peterborough club. The meeting was held in the dining room of the Y.M.C.A. and was preceded by supper catered for in splendid style by Hoopers.

A. W. "Army" Armstrong, president of the Belleville club, acted as chairman for the evening, the whole meeting being conducted as a regular session of that club. Newt Thompson acted as song leader and Harry Post as sergeant-at-arms. The experience gained by the Belleville fellows in their three years as a club was revealed in the smooth way in which affairs were conducted and by the pep manifested in the lighter part of the evening's program.

The formal ceremony was conducted by Y's Men Armstrong and Thompson, assisted by Secretary Paulie of the Belleville club. The first name explained the motto of the Y's Men, "To acknowledge the duty that accompanies every right," asking the Peterborough members to repeat it after him. The secretary read the objects of the association, and the members of the Peterborough Club were asked to raise their right hands and answer in the affirmative when asked if they would carry out these purposes.

The badge of the club was explained by the Lieut.-Governor, who called on his fellow members of the Belleville club to clasp the hands of their partners of the Peterborough club and welcome them into the association. The charter was then presented amid the cheers of the visitors.

Greetings Received.

Greetings from the other service clubs of the city were conveyed by Tom Dutton of the Rotary Club and Harry Dickin of the Kiwanis Club. Both welcomed the Y's Men into the ranks of service organizations and congratulated them on the splendid type of young men interested, predicting great growth.

Advice of great value to the members was given by Steve Licence, first president of the Belleville club. He reminded them that they had a better start than other service clubs in that they had the Y.M.C.A. as a permanent home. There would be hard work and sometimes discouragement ahead of them, but when the growing pains were past the club would flourish.

G. H. Roper, General Secretary of the local Y.M.C.A., expressed his pleasure at the formation of the club and spoke of the work already accomplished around the building by the members.

A Presentation.

One member of the Belleville club might well have repeated Briggs' famous line "It's comedy for some folks but it's tragedy to me", when, after a presentation was made, Al. Stilwell gave a long and allegedly veracious account of the struggles of some fellow member to get a girl, finally resulting in his buying a diamond and becoming engaged, and said that the club had decided to help him in the next step. He then called on Withrow Read to come forward and presented him with a wedding ring, to his great embarrassment.

The musical part of the evening's programme was presented by the orchestra of the Belleville club, with a vocal solo by Jack Andrews and a violin solo by Mel Blanchard.

The thanks of the Peterborough club to the Belleville Y's men for their entertainment and advice and to the representatives of the other service clubs of the city was expressed by Joe Beuclerc and Bill Giles and conveyed by President Roy White.

The Belleville party travelled to Peterborough by bus. After a short time spent in friendly visiting among the members of the two clubs they pulled out for home with invitations for a speedy return showered on them.

TO FLY OVER ATLANTIC.

BERLIN, May 20.—An airship that will fly between Spain and South America and carry 40 passengers is being built by the Zeppelin Company. The ship is not as large as one being built for London-Bombay travel, but it will have a dance hall and luxurious lounging rooms, a large dining salon and 20 cabins.

The training of Indian children in Canada is one of the important activities of the Department of Indian Affairs. There are nearly 15,000 Indian boys and girls enrolled in the 344 Indian schools under the direction of the Department.

FINAL SESSION AT QUEEN CITY

Close-up of Ontario Sittings of Royal Commission Opens To-day.

MONTREAL NEXT.

TORONTO, Ont., May 20 (Canadian Press).—The process of closing up the Ontario sittings of the Royal Customs Commission begins here this morning. It is anticipated that the Commission will sit here at least two days, before the work in Ontario is concluded. Sittings in the province of Quebec, which open in Montreal, will probably not commence until the beginning of June. The hearing in Montreal will be followed by one in Quebec City.

The sittings which open here today are of particular importance because of findings and recommendations which counsel will ask the Commission to make, based on evidence taken during the Ontario sittings. In addition to any commercial smuggling which could be discovered, the Commission looked carefully into the operations of breweries and distilleries throughout this part of Ontario. It is expected that discoveries in connection with the operation of some of these institutions will form the basis for certain findings and recommendations which will be asked. Also, it is probable that the beer and liquor export business conducted on a very large scale through the port of Windsor, will come in for some attention.

Complete Evidence.

It is not likely that the Commission counsel will be able to offer their findings and recommendations at the sitting to-day. These will be reserved until Monday. To-day there are certain loose threads to be drawn together before the evidence in Ontario is complete. Particular attention will be devoted to closing up the investigation into some Ontario breweries with special regard to their payments, or non-payments, of sales and gallonage taxes. There will be examination of officers of the Ontario Brewers' Association and the Export Brewing Association in reference to sales and gallonage taxes, as well as further evidence by brewery officers themselves. H. F. Kuntz, of the Kuntz Brewing Company of Waterloo, Ont., has been notified to attend and give evidence.

Four Points Visited.

Four points in Ontario have been visited by the Commission covering a period of about six weeks. The cities at which sittings took place are Toronto, Hamilton Windsor and Niagara Falls. The investigation will conclude with sittings at Ottawa. These will not take place, however, until Quebec and the Maritime Provinces have been visited.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

ALL ROADS LEAD TO CAMPBELLFORD, MAY 24th

Mr. Editor.

Dear Sir,—We extend an invitation to one and all to attend our celebration to be held in Campbellford on the Agricultural grounds on May 24th under the management of the Seymour Agricultural Society. This is another way you can help to put our 1927 fair over the top by attending our celebration, as we need the funds to make a bigger and better fair. Our committees are working hard to give you a real good time; so every body come to swell

Do YouKnow Your O-N-I-O-N-S ?

The succulent and odoriferous onion holds a large place in popular regard just at the moment. Time was, not so long ago, when the onion was looked upon as an outlaw. All sorts of measures were taken to disguise it as much as possible, and anyone caught in the act of absorbing one of these lowly vegetables adopted a very apologetic attitude. A social error of the worst type was to appear at any social gathering exhaling the odor of an onion. In fact, it was distinctly taboo. Now, fickle fancy has change all this. The man or woman who "knows his onions", or "her onions", as the case may be, is distinguee to a degree. One of the jokes of the day is the query as to the difference between a white and pink onion? The proper answer to this gag is the retort: "You have to know your onions."

So the gentleman in the sketch is following the fashion when he plants onions. He is doing it in a haphazard way. We hope he won't be disappointed later on, if asters or nasturtiums spring up in the same rows. We knew a girl once who planted what she thought were onions, and she had a fine crop of gladioli later in the season. She said she thought the bulbs were rather high-priced when she purchased them.

DELAYED IN MAILS.

BROCKTON, Mass., May 20. — A postcard from a friend of boyhood days recently was received by Charles Swift. The sender was inquiring if Swift knew the whereabout of other schoolday chums. Surprised, Swift glanced at the postmark, discovered that the card had been mailed March 21, 1883. It had been in the mails 44 years.

OLD MASTERS

What of the darkness? Is it very fair?
Are there great calms? and find we silence there?
Like soft-shut lilies, all your faces glow
With some strange peace our faces never know,
With some strange faith our faces never dare—
Dwells it in Darkness? Do you find it there?

Is it a Bosom where tired heads may lie?
Is it a Mouth to kiss our weeping dry?
Is it a Hand to still the pulse's leap?
Is it a Voice that holds the runes of sleep?
Day shows us not such comfort anywhere—
Dwells it in Darkness? Do you find it there?

Out of the Day's deceiving light we call—
Day that shows man so great, and God so small,
That hides the stars, and magnifies the grass—
O is the Darkness too a lying glass?
Or undistracted, do you find truth there?
What of the Darkness? Is it very fair?
—Richard Le Gallienne: "To the Happy Dead People."

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

THE GRAVE THAT I NEVER HAVE SEEN

There's a little green mound in an acre of ground,
And the ground is far over the sea.
There's a wee bit of green that I never have seen,
That is more than your city, to me.
For the letter it said that the mother was dead,
On the hill they had laid her away.
There's a little green grave, and it's over the wave,
But I see it as plain as the day.

Well, I never will go o'er the waters, I know,
And I never will climb to the spot,
Yet all through the years I shall see through my tears
That place, if I see it or not.
I know ev'ry blade on the mound they have made,
Though I can't find the reason in books.
There's a wee bit of green with the ocean between,
But I know just the way that it looks.

Oh, the ocean may part, but the world's in your heart,
There is never a place in your mind,
Be it high, be it low, that the soul cannot go,
There is never a spot you can't find.
Though the world may be wide, though the vales may divide,
Though an ocean be rolling between,
Still I know and I feel there are nights when I kneel
By the grave that I never have seen.

New Car For Fall Is Planned By Ford; 4-Cylinder, Shift Gear, Replace Model T

DETROIT, May 20.—The Ford Motor Company will discontinue making Model T before June 1 and start production of a new four-cylinder gear-shift car July 1, it was stated before the Council yesterday by Theodore W. Kolbe, Secretary of the Police Department.

This statement was made when Mr. Kolbe and William P. Rutledge, Police Commissioner, came before the Council to ask approval of the purchase of 111 Model T Fords. The information was confirmed by Martin B. Hansz, Vice President and Manager of the Detroit Ford Dealers, and was not denied by E. H. Martin, assistant to the manager of the Detroit branch of the Ford Motor Company, who was present.

Mr. Kolbe told the Council that if the city were to buy more Model T Fords it would have to place the order within a week or so. He continued:

"I understand that the Ford Motor Company will begin production on a new gear-shift four-cylinder car July 1 and that the car will be placed on the market about August 15. However, Ford dealers tell me they cannot fill an order as large as this before November."

Councilman William P. Bradley asked Mr. Hansz whether it was not true that production of the present Model T was not to be suspended May 28. Mr. Hansz replied:

"Yes, we have information that the present model is to be discontinued. We are not seeking to sell these cars to the city to get rid of them because they will give a high mileage and good service at low cost. Th Ford Motor Company will continue to make parts for these cars for five years.

"We will probably have samples of the new car by August, but it would be thirty or sixty days before an order of this size could be filled."

HOME SECRETARY STILL UNABLE TO MAKE STATEMENT OVER RAID

Sets Next Tuesday as Likely Date for His Revelations.

DEBATE NEXT WEEK

Mystery Deepens Over Disappearance of Document From War Office.

LONDON, May 20. — Associated Press. — The mystery of the disappearance of a secret state document from the British war office, which led to Scotland Yard's sensational search of Soviet House, became even greater yesterday with the announcement by the Home Secretary, Sir William Joynson-Hicks that he was still unable to make a statement in the House of Commons regarding the raid.

The crowded chamber was hushed in an atmosphere of excited suspense when the Home Secretary arose, presumably to make a long statement on the raid, the grave consequences of which were admitted in all political and diplomatic quarters. Instead of making the exected statement, Sir William declared: "Information which has come into the possession of the police through the Arcos search is of such a nature that it has not been possible for His Majesty's Government to complete the examination or determine the consequences of it."

The Secretary was immediately bombarded with questions from Laborites seeking to drag information from him, but little new matter was forthcoming.

Next Tuesday is the day now set by Sir William for his revelations, and a full debate over the raid is scheduled in the House for Thursday. Much political manoeuvering occurred between the party leaders on the floor of the House yesterday with regard to the character of the debate. The Laborites were most anxious to learn just what Scotland Yard had found before formally launching a vote of censure against the government.

To Find Document.

The only known facts about the raid are that it was instituted to find a state document which is missing from the war office, and that it was carried out under the official secrets act, thus indicating the high importance of the decision of the Home Secretary to authorize the police to ask a magistrate for a search warrant.

Upon the basis of these known facts, London has been filled with rumors and reports, many of them of a most sensational character, ever since the raid was carried out. Th fact that the missing document belongs to the war office, and alleged ly is of value to the Soviet authorities, gives credence to the report that the document dealt with plans for meeting hypothetical Anglo-Russian military situations.

It is generally understood that the military authorities of all countries prepare detailed plans for military campaigns against any country with which war is even remotely possible. It is impossible to verify in response

WATERS CLAIM NEW TERRITORY

St. Martinsville Warned Waters Would Enter There Around May 25.

NEW ORLEANS, May 20 (Associated Press).—The extent of the flood waters sweeping down the Atchafalaya basin to the Gulf of Mexico was deemed so great last night that the weather bureau at New Orleans issued a warning to the inhabitants of St. Martinsville that the lake would probably enter that town between May 25 and 30. St. Martinsville previously had been regarded as safe from the flood.

The outflow from the crevasses along Bayou des Glaises and at Melville on the Atchafalaya was estimated at 500,000 cubic feet of water a second, which, the weather bureau said, would carry an average depth of eight feet above the rails of the Southern Pacific branch line between the Lafayette highlands and the Atchafalaya River, and overflow the lowlands behind Bayou Teche down to and around St. Martinsville.

Already the flood had spread far down the valley from the crevasses, which are between 130 and 170 miles north-west of New Orleans and on the opposite side of the Mississippi. The spread had carried backwater into Iberville parish. Port Barre, Cortableau and a dozen smaller towns in Avoyelles and St. Landry parishes already had disappeared and the sweep was carrying the flood southward into St. Martin's parish.

Thousands Evacuated.

Thousands already had evacuated their homes, but many clung to their little farms until the water drove them from fields where they had been working. Refugee camps at Lafayette, Marksville, Alexandria and Mansura were crowded. So densely were some of them packed that it became necessary to open another at Eunice and a thousand refugees had been taken there yesterday.

Motor boats, trucks, and special trains continued their work of rescue, boats being used in the upper Atchafalaya basin and trucks aiding in the evacuation of the lower valley. Each returning fleet of trucks, however, told of residents who refused to desert their homes in spite of the urgent warnings.

BREWERS DISPUTE OVER BEER PRICES

Liquor Control Board Called Upon To Act As Conciliators.

TORONTO, May 20—The brewers are scrapping among themselves as to prices to be charged under Government control.

It was only yesterday that Strong Man D. B. Hanna announced that the price lists were in the hands of the printer.

Yesterday afternoon he and his colleagues sat as a board of conciliation listening to the heads of the various Ontario breweries express their views as to appropriate prices.

Some days ago, it was understood that beer prices had been agreed upon among the breweries, but there is a rift in the lute, and Mr. Hanna and his colleagues have been appealed to.

AFTER SUFFERING 15 YEARS RELIEF GAINED BY HUSKY

Wonderful Experience is Related By Mr. Baker, Who Now Enjoys Real Health.

"A medicine that will relieve me of all ailments which afflicted me for 15 years, will certainly help others," declared Mr. Henry Baker, 65 Power St., Toronto, recently in telling of his experience with Husky, the herb preparation now distributed by local drug stores.

In order that others may know of the wonderful merit of Husky Mr. Baker has made a signed statement in regard to his case. His statement follows: "For more than 15 years I didn't see a real well day. My troubles started with a nervous breakdown. My appetite was all right but my food didn't do me any good and I couldn't sleep at night. All my nerves were on edge and I had to put one leg over the other to keep them from jerking. Some mornings I felt that tough I could hardly make myself get up and then during the day a tired, worn out feeling would come all over me. If I walked any distance I would nearly give way.

"My blood was poor and I was in a bad condition generally. I read about Husky doing a lot of good and I decided to try it. I had been in hospitals and tried different kinds of medicine, however, and I didn't have much faith in anything helping me. But now that I am taking the Husky treatment I realize that this medicine really is fine and different from others. I eat fine now and my food digests well and gives me nourishment. The terrible nerve pains in my legs have been relieved and I am able to rest much better. I am feeling better and strengthened in every way.

"Anyone who has suffered as I did and for so long a period knows what this relief means. I am now picking up in every way and have gained several pounds. I am still taking Husky and I recommend it to those who are not in the best of health. A medicine that will do this for me, will certainly help others."

At Good Drug Stores.

Every man and woman suffering in any way Husky is recommended to relieve, owe it to themselves to give the Husky treatment a trial. Husky can be obtained at good drug stores everywhere and when taken regularly and over a reasonable length of time it wil help you just as it is helping thousands of others.

Woman Air Pilot Claims New Record

HAMBLE, England, May 20. — Canadian Press. — Mrs. Elliott Lynn, Great Britain's first woman air pilot, accompanied by Lady Bailey as a passenger, yesterday claimed to have established a world's record for a light plane by reaching an altitude of 16,000 feet, or a little over three miles.

Mrs. Lynn, who only arrived here yesterday for the flight, was in the air, two hours, 33 minutes and 35 seconds.

CO-OPERATION OF COLONIES NEEDED

Says Sir Samuel Hoare, If Would Build Empire Airway.

LONDON, May 20 (Canadian Press Cable).—"If we are to succeed in the attempt to build an Empire airways, and eliminate the time and distance now separating us, we need the help of the colonies and dependencies as much as the co-operation of the Dominions," said Sir Samuel Hoare, Air Minister, addressing the governors of colonies and mandated territories, who are conferring here. The conference devoted yesterday to a discussion of how the colonies could develop civil aviation.

Sir Samuel suggested that costs of civil aviation might be mitigated by using the aeroplanes for many kinds of work. He admitted that substantial subsidies for regular air services were still needed. He suggested that the conference investigate in London the possibilities of aeroplanes, not only for transport, but also in connection with survey work; spraying of insecticides; bringing doctors and teachers within reach of scattered families, and providing sport.

Air training meant light aeroplane clubs, Sir Samuel said, and he paid a tribute to the achievements of the Straits Settlements government in the development of these. He mentioned that only on Wednesday it had been suggested that the aeroplane would prove a quick and economical means of locating oyster beds and pearl fisheries in Ceylon.

Sir Samuel also suggested to the delegates that they consider the urgent need of providing and maintaining landing-grounds; and pointed out the need for adequate systems of weather reports and wireless.

PERCIVAL PRICE AS CARILLONEUR

Toronto Man Has Been Named to Ring Victory Bell.

CANADA'S JUBILEE

OTTAWA, Ont., May 20.—(Canadian Press.)—(Carillon)—Percival Price, Canada's first and foremost Carilloneur, received word in Ottawa to-day of his appointment by the Civil Service Commission as Carilloneur of Victory Tower. Mr. Price, a native of Toronto, is one of a very small company of experienced carilloneurs in the world and was the first Canadian to practice the art, which he learned in Europe. He played the first carillon in Canada, at the Metropolitan Church in Toronto, from the time of its opening in 1922 until eighteen months ago, when he went to the Rockefeller Memorial Church in New York City.

Mr. Price left this evening for Quebec to attend the festival of Canadian folk songs, and he will then return to New York. He will be in Ottawa again before Dominion Day, when the new carillon will ring for the first time in connection with the Jubilee of Confederation.

Studied in Europe.

The offical carilloneur of the Dominion is a young man, unmarried, who has devoted most of his adult years to the music of the bells. He became interested in the Belgian carillons in 1920, and took up serious study of them as a distinctive branch of music. Since his appointment as a professional carilloneur in Toronto two years later he has studied and practiced on carillons in Europe and America, and he is considered to be one of the best of his profession.

"The Victory Tower Carillon," said Mr. Price in an interview yesterday, "is the largest in the world in weight, it has a wider range than any other such instrument in the world, and it should be the finest in the world. One or two carillons have more bells, but that is because they have two bells to one note. It is important, also, that its location is the finest in the world. Victory Tower is in the centre of the city, and yet is surrounded by a large open space and the music should be heard to the best possible advantage.

In the Rockefeller church in New York people sit inside the church to listen to the music as conveyed through a microphone and loud speakers because of the noise of traffic outside."

Four in Canada.

There are now four carillons in Canada, all of them in Ontario, at Toronto, Guelph, Simcoe and the new one here, Mr. Price said. They are all smaller than the Victory carillon, which is very similar to the set in the New York church, but with a somewhat greater weight of metal. Carillons on this continent, said Mr. Price, are increasing at the rate of four or five each year, and throughout the world there had been, he added, a renaissance of the carillon art since the war. The art of casting bells so that the overtones would be retained was born in Belgium, but was lost a couple of centuries ago and only re-discovered by British bell-founders in recent years.

"The range of a carillon such as this is to be,' said Mr. Price, "is practically that of the ocean. It is a dignified instrument, capable of magnificent effects, and it is not used for jazz music. No carilloneur attempts jazz."

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for atomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

BIBLE SOCIETY HOLDS MEETING

STORY OF BIBLE TOLD

MARMORA, May 20.—"How We Got Our Bible" was the subject of an illustrated lecture delivered in fascinating style at St. Paul's church on Thursday evening by A. H. Davis of Toronto representative of the Upper Canada Bible Society. The attendance was one of the best seen at a meeting of its class. The lecture was preceeded by a shortened form of Evensong taken by the rector, Rev. A. B. Caldwell. Following the lecture G. B. Airhart, president of the local branch presided at its business meeting.

Subsequent to reading of minutes and treasurer's report, the following were elected as officers for the comi.g year:

President—G. B. Airhart.
1st Vice President—Rev. C. J. Beckley.
2nd Vice President—Rev. A. B. Caldwell.
Secretary—F. S. Pearce.
Treasurer—W. J. Cottrell.

Collectors will be appointed at a later meeting of the executive.

SPLENDID ADDRESS IS GIVEN ON H.N.S.

Rev. J. V. McAulay of Ennismore Gives Lecture in Lakefield.

LAKEFIELD, May 20.—Rev. J. V. McAulay, of Ennismore, gave a very informing and interesting lecture in the Queen Street Theatre, under the auspices of the Holy Name Society of St. Paul's Church, on the origin, the history and the purpose of the Holy Name Society.

Dr. M. P. Kennedy was in the chair and introduced the speaker, and announced the various numbers on the programme.

Mrs. Osborne sang a solo in splendid voice, receiving a well merited round of applause. Miss Gwen Simpson was the accompanist.

Father McAulay referred laughingly to the fact that on his visits to Lakefield it usually rained, which led him to infer that Lakefield had never gone dry.

"The church," said Father McAulay, "has always made use of religious associations for the salvation of souls." Confraternities and sodalities have existed for years. They have been favorably looked upon by the church and many indulgences granted to the members. Pope Leo XIII. and Pope Pius IX. were favorably disposed toward the confraternities, and the latter referred to them as an army set in battle array, not with clash of arms, but with the more powerful weapon, silent prayer. They are a protection to their members against the temptations of the world, and have for their object making people better and setting a good example to others. It is a thrilling thing to see a large number of men receiving holy communion in a body, and it makes a profound impression on the observer. None would absent themselves if they realized the effect of their example on others. It is a wonderful help to the pastor in the discharge of his numerous and onerous duties.

The Holy Name Society is one of the greatest of the confraternities, and its object is to beget love and reverence for the holy name of Jesus and to promote the belief in His divinity and to prevent profanity and obscene speech. No other society has such noble ends and objects as the Society of the Holy Name. It dates back to 1274, and some years ago the six hundredth anniversary of its foundation was celebrated in Washington. Father McAulay traced its history from its inception at a great conference of the church held in Lyons in the 13th century to the present time.

Pope Pius V. gave full charge of this movement to the Dominican Order, and the local branch got its charter from the Dominican headquarters in New York, and they are members of the 3rd Order of the Dominicans.

In the United States there are two million members, and in Canada five hundred thousand. It is not to be wondered at that a society with objects so lofty should flourish. The commandment of God enjoins the protection of the Holy Name, and none can gainsay the fact that more honor and glory is given to God because of the spread of this society.

The diocese of Toronto celebrates its twenty-fifth anniversary in June, and there will be a monster demonstration, which will be attended by many from other dioceses.

Dr. Kennedy thanked Father McAulay for his excellent address, which was a pleasure and benefit to all present.

Father Garvey spoke briefly, speaking of the inspiration the lecture had been to him. It gave him courage to carry on with a small society, for it is well worth the effort even for half a dozen.

Father McAulay is returning on the night of the 24th with his Dramatic Society, who are putting on their play, "The Monk of Derry Veraugh," in the Memorial Hall, when it is expected there will be a large audience.

Ceremony Delayed To Rescue Kitten

PERTH, West Australia, May 19 (Canadian Press). — The Duke and Duchess of York had a great reception from an enormous crowd as they drove the fifteen miles to Government House yesterday. Both looked fresh and well after after their sea voyage from Melbourne on the battle-cruiser Renown.

The Renown's mascot, a kitten, held up the stately ceremony of dressing ship on the arrival here. The kitten, which had been sleeping on some bunting, was hauled aloft with the pennants, and dangled in midair until the Captain ordered the line of flags lowered.

The frightened mascot was then rescued, to the cheers of the crowd on the wharf.

FRIDAY, MAY 20, 1927.

PETERBOROUGH'S CELEBRATION.

The sixtieth birthday of Confederation should be celebrated nowhere in Canada with more enthusiasm than in Peterborough, judging from the fine spirit that is being shown by the Celebration Committee and by different local organizations.

Much, of course, in the way of preparation and planning remains to be done, but it is safe to predict that if the public generally enters into the celebration with the same zeal as has been displayed by members of the various committees the event will be outstanding in the history of this community.

The individual citizen has his responsibilities in connection with this great occasion; he is expected to decide to remain in Peterborough for the celebration, decorate his home, and lend a helping hand wherever it may be needed.

While some smaller centres in the district are planning a celebration programme on their own account, it is undoubtedly the case that many citizens from the surrounding countryside will be here on Dominion Day to help swell the crowds to record proportions.

Plan to spend Dominion Day in Peterborough.

FLYING THE FLAG.

The plan of decorating the city's business section by flags flying from poles set at the edge of the sidewalk, which was so successfully launched last year, is being continued by the Canadian Legion, and it is hoped that any gaps along business streets will be filled, while the scheme is being extended to residential sections where the flags are set up on lawns.

Peterborough citizens will be called upon to do an unusual amount of decorating this summer, and the Canadian Legion plan should therefore be of splendid service.

To begin with, there should, of course, be a liberal display of flags on Victoria Day.

Then will come the three days' convention of the Provincial convention of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League, an event that should be marked by appropriate decorations.

The visit of the Governor-General and Lady Willingdon on June 20th will be another occasion upon which flags will be in demand, and soon after will be the celebration of Canada's sixtieth birthday, which should see Peterborough decorated as never before.

THE DRUNKEN DRIVER.

A controversy has developed between the Police Magistrate at Belleville and one of that city's newspapers over the question of sentencing individuals convicted of driving a motor car while under the influence of liquor, and while The Examiner has no desire to project itself into a private fight, we are forced to declare our opinion, that there should only be one policy in regard to such offenders, and that is to take away from them the privilege of handling an automobile.

With traffic conditions as they are, it is too dangerous a risk to take to allow a man who has tried to drive a car while drunk to sit at the wheel again.

That may seem too drastic a punishment, but it must be remembered that it would be safer to arm a drunken man with a loaded rifle and start him out on the street for target practice than to trust such a man with an automobile.

A driver must be on the alert and have all his wits about him to avoid accidents under the present traffic conditions; an intoxicated driver is a menace to every other motorist and to every pedestrian on the street.

If the public is to be protected those who try to mix gasoline and liquor will have to be prevented from repeating the experiment.

CANADIAN HISTORY.

Sir Robert Borden, who is delivering a series of lectures at Oxford University on the subject of Canadian constitutional history, made a significant statement in the course of his first lecture when he declared that Canadians themselves are not well informed on the history of their own country, and that only one Canadian university has a chair devoted to Canadian history.

Unfortunately, the ex-Premier's remarks are all too true.

Of the romance and interest of the early days of Canada we as a people know little or nothing, yet nothing in fiction surpasses in sheer thrill a recital of the hardships and adventures of Canada's pioneers.

The story of the Selkirk settlements, for example, should be full of interest to Canadians, yet how many even in Manitoba know anything of the suffering and tragedy that marked the first days in this country of those sturdy immigrants?

The Diamond Jubilee has already created an appetite among the people of this country for a better knowledge of the Dominion's history, and it would be indeed a pity if this awakening were not developed to the fullest extent.

Premier Ferguson's promise of a Canadian history that will bring out all the fascinating romance of early years in this country, it is hoped, will be fullfilled.

Such a work is very sadly needed.

PARTY ORGANS GONE.

The day of the political organ is gone forever, never to return. Owing to the increased costs of production, newspaper men have been forced to realize that the publishing of a newspaper is a highly specialized manufacturing business, employing nothing except skilled labor, and that unless it is treated as such it is simply inviting failure. The newspapers of today have to aim to serve all the people and not one particular section.

It is easy to pass resolutions regarding another morning paper in Toronto, but nothing less than two million dollars would begin to establish one in competition with those already in the field. It is far more likely that the two Toronto morning papers will amalgamate than that another one will start. Large and influential newspapers are amalgamating in New York, Chicago, Detroit and many other American cities. The same thing has happened in Canada. It is reported that a quarter of a million dollars was spent trying to establish The Windsor Telegram as a political organ in opposition to The Border Cities Star. Whatever the immense sum was it was all wasted. There was no need for a second paper. The Star was serving the field, and the advertisers were not inclined to add to their selling expense just to have the luxury of another paper that was not needed. The same story can be told of nearly every city in Ontario.

One cannot help, however, having a good deal of sympathy for the Ontario Women's Liberal Association. It longs for a paper that will champion its cause in season and out. Nor is this desire confined to Liberals. Many Conservatives miss the party newspapers of other days and have visions of their return. But their return is not at all probable. Papers may spring up here and there, and appear to flourish for a few short months, but unless there is a very clearly defined need for such papers they are doomed to failure before they start. The reasons are hard to explain, but one is that it is usually "other people's money" that is at stake. The practical, experienced newspaper man refuses to put his money into "second papers" unless he is dead sure that they are profitable ventures.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

CANADA'S PROBLEM.

Some interesting figures on Canada's population and national wealth have been published lately. The Bureau of Statistics, a Federal Government department, estimates the population, as at June 1 last, to be 9,389,300, or 600,817 more than on the same date in 1921—in other words, a gain of 100,000 a year for six years.

Our national wealth is now placed at $22,195,302,443 or $2,525 per capita, or approximately 14 times the figure of 60 years ago when the Confederation agreement was put through and Canada officially constituted as a nation.

The population increase, one must admit, is not all that could be desired, when one considers that it includes the natural birth rate plus immigration. The figures mean, of course, that a very large number of our people have gone to the United States, also that our immigration efforts have been far from adequate.

There are indications now, however, of a definite trend in a more satisfactory direction. Immigration from Europe has been materially speeded up during the last year and the reports have it that 1927 will see by far the largest influx of people in any twelve-month since the war. Furthermore—and this point is exceedingly important—a great many of our people are returning from the United States. Ottawa figures the other day gave convincing evidence of this. And it goes without saying, of course, that no person coming into Canada is as welcome as the returning Canadian. He is one of us. He knows our laws, our habits, our customs and our methods. This is his home. We do not have to assimilate him. We do not have to worry whether or not he will become a desirable citizen.

Canada could support with ease a population of a hundred millions or more. We have fewer than ten millions at the moment. The fact that our population is so comparatively small makes the business of life more complicated and more of a problem than it would be if our population were much larger. It carries the same principle that one finds in a manufacturing industry. The secret of Mr. Henry Ford's success in the automobile world has been the ability to make and sell cars in large numbers. The greater the production, the smaller the production cost per machine. It is a basic principle. Applying the same idea to the task of running a nation, think what it would mean to individual Canadians if their present costs of government could be spread over 20,000,000 taxpayers instead of 10,000,000 or over 100,000,000 instead of 10,000,000.

Our small population, also, is the chief obstacle to the setting up of a high tariff policy such as the United States uses. Across the line the people are so many and the market is so great that manufacturers are able to use mass production and thus sell their goods at a low figure and still make a handsome profit. Here the situation is different. Our domestic market is small and our factory productions are, for the most part, limited. This makes the unit cost higher and consequently results in a stiffer price to the consumer. This is just where the tariff difficulty comes in. The United States is able to protect its manufacturers through the tariff and at the same time keep selling prices low. When we impose heavy tariffs, the result, in many cases, is to make the consumers pay a higher price for the article in question. This is the point that produces most of the Canadian tariff argument. The average man wants to see Canadian industry encouraged and protected, but does not fancy the idea of having such protection cost come out of his own pocketbook.

It follows, then, that the sooner we materially increase our population the sooner we shall be able to give adequate protection to deserving manufacturers and at the same time make it possible for our manufacturers to make and sell enough of their products to keep costs down. There are many cases now, of course, in which Canadian manufacturers are turning out goods in price competition with American companies in similar lines, but there are others in which the Canadian public is paying an excessive additional figure in order to permit an industry to be protected by tariff. This is a condition of affairs that naturally creates a great deal of dissatisfaction. Yet the only way out, apparently, is the attraction of enough additional population to create more extensive domestic markets and thus to lower production costs. This, of course, in addition to the extension, as rapidly as possible, of all opportunities for selling Canadian goods abroad.

Canada has a wonderful future. We have everything here that is required for national greatness except sufficient population. And there is no reason why we should not secure the extra people our country needs. —Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

It is announced that the Federal immigration service is being re-organized. And from the obscurity in which Mr. Meighen has disappeared there seems to come the query, "Again?"

The Government stores are not to be opened until after the Woodbine, thereby depriving the winners of a chance to celebrate and the losers of an opportunity to join their sorrows.

Somebody should do a little quiet missionary work among the Toronto papers. The spirit of unity so desirable in this year of jubilee seems to have taken wing.

Monday's election in Quebec was one disaster that cannot be blamed upon Mr. Meighen.

There was no wild rush for permits yesterday, even in Toronto. And there is no logical reason why a rush should have been expected.

FRUIT DIETS AND FASTING.

In this column, I tell you so much about the benefits of fasting; but, what I usually recommend is really the fruit fast and not total abstinence from food.

In many cases in my office practise I put patients on fasts of thirty days and more, at which time they use nothing but large quantities of water. No food, of any kind, is given in these cases, and such a fast sometimes is necessary to bring about the cure of some deep-seated organic or functional disease.

When I first heard of the fasting cure, over twenty years ago, it was through the pages of the Physical Culture Magazine, and, at that time, most every doctor who advocated fasting prescribed the plain water fast. It is true, in some cases, they even prohibited water, and the patient was put on a dry fast.

As soon as the patient starts on a plain water or dry fast, the body is literally flooded with poisons, and an acute toxemia develops, which, however, disappears in a few days, but reoccurs at irregular times if a long fast is taken. For instance, the patient will feel good for two or three days, or perhaps even a week, and will then have a "crisis," when the tongue will become more coated, headaches develop, and a depressed lassitude overcomes the patient. As I observed these "crises," it seemed to me that they were caused by the fact that the poisons of the body were not eliminated with a steady regularity, and I believed that some means could be devised for avoiding these "crises."

Accordingly, I started to experiment with the fruit fasting and found if the patient took orange juice, apple juice, grape juice, even the fruit from which these juices are extracted, that the value of the fast was not interfered with, and most of the unpleasant symptoms were also eliminated. I found this especially true in cases of extreme toxemia where the liver was heavily laden with accumulated bile. The fruit regime seems to keep up a steady flow of bile and other digestive juices which are all made from bodily wastes.

Many who advocate the fasting cure at the present time, still recommend the plain water fast, but I am sure it is because they have not experimented sufficiently with the fruit fast and fruit diets. My experience has shown me that the elimination of toxins is just as rapid while the patient is taking a small amount of fruit as when only plain water is used. The fruit regime is also more pleasing to the patient and they are satisfied to continue on it for a longer period of time than with the plain water fast.

Of course, fasting is not a cure-all, but is indicated in every disorder in the beginning of treatment. Those who might otherwise be afraid of fasting are always willing to take the fruit fast, and,even in such cases as anemia and tuberculosis, the patient always starts to improve when placed on an exclusive fruit diet.

The diet, after the fast, may vary in different diseases, but if you are going to try to cure yourself by dieting, you will save much time and get better results if you start out with a few days on fruit juice.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

HEALTH AND LUXURY

By Dr. Frank Crane.

A German scientist who conducted autopsies on 30,000 mumies dating from 4000 B.C., to the dawn of the Christian Era, says he found abundant evidence that human ailments grow with luxury.

Mummies of an earlier age showed signs of few of the diseases that appeared in those of a later, richer time. Gravel on the kidneys, tuberculosis, gout, cancer and smallpox came with the ages of luxury.

Early Egyptians had hard, white teeth. Later ones, who by their costly burial robes showed they had lived in a time of greater wealth, had decayed molars.

The whole trend, according to this scientist, has always been to an increase in human ailments when there was an increase in luxury.

However, the point is that it was not the luxury that brought on the ailments, but a failure of the people to meet the changing conditions.

A change in outward circumstances has to be met with a change in bodily habits. Extinct animals are the ones who could not meet the changes in climate and food, who kept on as they had been going under other circumstances, and paid the penalty.

There is no reason why Grandpa, who got callouses sitting on a hard board wagon-seat should be any healthier than little Eddie, who rides around on springs and shock absorbers.

Luxury, in itself, is a fine thing if it is used rightly.

The trouble with it is that too many people live in luxury as if they were living under the old conditions. They do not alter their habits to meet their new conditions.

They eat the same food grandpa did when he chopped wood and milked the cows, and they exercise as grandpa did when he had a few minutes to rest.

Consequently their aches and pains multiply and they blame it on luxury. The real villain in the piece is not luxury, but a continuation of habits that suited one condition into a sort of life that needs other habits.

Scientists, experimenting with rats, have shown that a life lasts according to the "rate" it is used. Rats using their energy in spinning a wheel fast day after day, died sooner than those which used less energy from day to day. So men living in an age which enables them to conserve their energy should be healthy and long-lived if they change their mode of living to fit their new conditions. In fact the best assurance for long life is the ability to change with things about you, to adapt yourself to altering circumstances. The security for long life is not found in enormous strength or in so-called appliances for safety.

The only thing safe for a man or a nation is to go on. Life is like riding a bicycle. Its safety consists in keeping straight ahead. Whenever anybody stops, all sorts of maladies begin to infest him. There have been mammoth animals dug up from the fossil beds of the past. They seemed to be admirably equipped for long life, but they have become extinct, while animals of less formidable construction with the ability to adapt themselves to changed circumstances still have their descendants with us.

There is a tragedy in evolution. Things that will not continue to evolve must be removed.

CUT IN PREMIUM STEP BACKWARD

U. F. O. Leader Believes It Was Made on Wrong Type of Hog.

BRANTFORD, Ont., May 20.—Believing that the recent fifty per cent. cut in the premium on select hogs will work irreparable harm to the Canadian bacon hog trade Peter Porter, Burford, well known as a leader in the U.F.O., urges that further consideration be given to the question. He points out that during the last five years of hog grading, Canada has secured on the British market a place for Canadian bacon equal to that of Denmark, a place we did not have before hog grading came into effect in Canada, and with the same advances during the next five years that we made in the past five years, w will have a place in the English market equal to that of the Irish bacon and equal to any country in the world as producers of bacon. True, the packers have lost some money, but has this come about directly from the premium paid for select hogs, or has this come about directly from the premium paid for select hogs, or has the abnormal condition of the Buffalo market brought about by the tremendous outbreak of hog cholera in the various States that provided the Buffalo market with finished hogs, thus causing Buffalo markets to bid higher for Canadian hogs, a condition that may not occur again in the next fifty years. Mr. Porter believes that instead of taking a backward step and undoing the improvements made in the last five years in export markets, if it be necessary to make some cut, let it be in the short, thick sloppy hog that has been bringing as high a price as the almost select hog in the thick smooth grade.

BIBLE PRESENTED MEMBER OF CLASS

Fred Houston Leaving Tweed To Take Up Residence in Belleville.

TWEED, May 20. — On Sunday morning at the session of the Sunday school, Fred Houston, who has been identified with the Adult Bible Class for years, and has held various offices in the class, was presented with a bible as a mark of appreciation. Mr. Donnelly made the presentation. Mr. Houston leaves shortly for Belleville, where he is opening a branch factory of the Houston Co. of Tweed.

The following address was read to him:

Dear Fred,—It is with sincerest regret that we contemplate your removal to Belleville. In many ways your place will be hard to fill because you have been so closely identified with the church of which you are a member. This is particularly true to your relations with the Men's Adult Bible Class. In this organization you have held various offices and have always discharged the duties pertaining thereto in a very efficient way; your faithful attendance and your kindly, unassuming manner have won you many friends who deeply regret your going.

Your fellow members of the Adult Bible Class ask you to accept this bible as a mark of their appreciation of your sterling qualities and loyal service. Signed on behalf of the Men's Adult Bible Class.

W. A. Donnelly, Pres.

JOHN BARRYMORE IN "THE BELOVED ROGUE"

John Barrymore brings a new conception of silent acting to the silver sheet. His is not the stereotyped presentation, but a vivid, whimsical creation, full of quips and fantastic episodes. His gestures and facial expression convey meanings that add immensely to the art of his work, that has all the charm attached to the Barrymore tradition in the speaking drama. "The Beloved Rogue," with Barrymore in the title role, is one of those out-of-the-ordinary productions that must be seen to be appreciated. It is a one-man picture, although the balance of the cast is superb, with special emphasis on the weird, twisted figure of King Louis, the half-cracked monarch with whom the "beloved rogue" made merry. But Francois Villon of the title role, the poet and madcap vagabond, occupies the centre of the stage, giving an absorbing Peter Pan type of portrayal that keeps the audience on its toes from the first to the last minute of the big picture.

There was a filled house at the Capitol last night for the first evening presentation of "The Beloved Rogue," which commences on a sombre, deep note of tragedy, in the burning at the stake of Villon's father, a martyr to France, and ends of a light, whimsical bit of raillery, when Francois and his boyishly-clad sweetheart, Charlotte de Vaucelles, bid farewell to the surprised monarch and go out into the world to seek their fortunes.

It is the art of Barrymore that makes this picture live and move. He is the beloved poet of Paris, the "king of Fools," miming and capering through the snow-filled streets with his ragged band of followers. Daring and fearless, he insults the arrogant Duke of Burgundy and is banished by Louis from Paris.

Later, in the Inn of the Lame Flea, he befriends Charlotte, the King's ward, betrothed to Count Thibault, friend of Charles of Burgundy, whom Louis, working under the influence of the astrologer and the stars that he fears to offend, seeks to propitiate. Again Villon comes under the King's displeasure, and is sentenced to hang, but, in a moment of inspiration, he appeals to the King's superstitious feelings and saves his neck, to become a virtual prisoner in the Palace. Follows another madcap escapade, and a torture scene in Charles' den, with Villon's ragged vagabonds from the gutters of Paris arriving to help him in his need. A strange touch is the presence here also, as a beggar, of Louis himself, the half-mad monarch, appearing at the proper moment to save the day for Villon and his lady.

The streets and houses and customs of Paris of 1432 form the setting for this picture, with its medieval atmosphere and tang of a time when manners were savage and people brutal. The ugly executioner, L'Hermite, has a place in most of the episodes, and death stalks on the heels of the merry quipster who capers and dances often in the face of Death. Old-world in its essence, fantastic and charming, "The Beloved Rogue" is a romantic whirlwind of adventure and swift movement.

There is another of the popular "Collegian" series with the big feature, with Benson once more outwitting Trent, his rival.—Jeanette.

ORCHESTRA COMING.

Columbians Will Be at Chemong Park Next Week.

The Columbia Orchestra, direct from the Prince of Wales Club, Niagara's smartest cabaret, is coming to Chemong next week. The Columbia Orchestra recently completed a five months tour through the United States as part of the famous Mason-Dixon Orchestra, which was featured for eight weeks on Loew's Vaudeville Circuit, ten consecutive weeks at the Arcadia, Buffalo's finest ball room, besides doing dance engagements at dance halls in all the larger cities, and broadcasting programmes from many of the leading American radio stations.

The Columbia Orchestra features particularly Stan Henshaw, an 18-year old musician, who was a leading attraction with the Mason-Dixon Band on their American tour.

This high class musical organization will be at Chemong pavilion on May 24 and for possibly three weeks after, until the band which has been engaged for the season, arrives.

Messrs. Kimmel and Forler will also operate Long Beach Pavilion at Lindsay this season and plan on a constant interchange of orchestras between the two pavilions so that something new will be supplied to their patrons regularly.

BELIEF IN DISEASE HAS BAD EFFECTS

Often Causes Actual Changes in Personality, Says Doctor.

Washington, D. C., May 20. — Isolation of the germ which causes trachoma, the eye disease, has been announced to the American Medical Association convention by Dr. Hideyo Noguchi, Japanese member of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research.

Sinus, a disease which speakers declared recently has become more common, was believed by Dr. Frederick E. Hasty of Nashville, Tenn., to be often due to swimming in city pools filled with unsterlized water.

The role that mind plays in disease was considered. Dr. Nellis B. Foster, New York, asserted that definite changes in one's personality may result from a belief that an organic disease is present, and Dr. Charles Hugh Neilson of St. Louis, declared that an emotional disorder often forecasts goitre months before definite physiological symptoms appear.

CONFIRMATION AT WARSAW CHURCH

Class of Twelve Presented By the Rev. T. J. O'Conor-Fenton.

WARSAW, May 19.—There will be a preaching service in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday evening, May 22, at half-past eight o'clock. Rev. Wm. M. Clarry will conduct the service. The regular Sunday school will be held at ten in the morning.

The beautiful and solemnly impressive confirmation service of the Anglican Church was held in St. Mark's Church, Warsaw, on Monday afternoon. Twelve candidates were presented for confirmation; four young women and eight young men. Bishop Sweeny officiated, assisted by Rev. T. J. O'Connor-Fenton, Rev. Mr. Hughes and Rev. Mr. Bousfield. Mr. A. F. Choate was organist.

The church, which was prettily decorated with branches, lilies and potted plants, was quite well-filled, and the people listened with marked attention to the earnest words of the bishop. He explained why certain passages of Scripture were studied at certain times and seasons, and the reason for the laying on of hands. He warned the class to attend the preparation services conducted by the Rural Dean, and he prepared to partake of the Holy Communion.

After the service the members of the congregation had an opportunity to shake hands with the Bishop and have a few words. He regretted very much that the size of his diocese, over ten thousand square miles, made it impossible for him to be in Warsaw very often.

Before leaving for Norwood he gave the Sacrament to some shut-ins.

DELORO BOY SCOUT NEWS.

The troop meeting was held at the headquarters last Tuesday night, and for a while the troop cleaned up the grounds and shined the windows, until the mosquitoes drove everybody inside.

Attendance honors were even, and the Bull patrol carried off the point for general appearance.

The signalling contest is becoming harder to judge each week and the points earned by the Bull patrol will soon be cancelled if the activities of the signallers of the Ram patrol, under the direction of Second L. Paquet, is any sign. The results of the signalling contest, in detail, were: Ram Patrol—L. Paquet, G. O'Neill, G. Stewart vs. Bull Patrol—G. Mantle, F. Callery, S. Smith (tie).

The Ram patrol were again the winners in the games, which consisted of observation and memory tests.

A chapter of "Boys of the Otter Patrol" was next on the programme, and then half an hour's sing-song round the council fire, at which the Bull patrol crept ahead in the race, gaining one more point, and the Ram patrol lost its chance to tie the score.

Patrol Contest Record.

Ram Patrol—Attendance, 7; games, 4; total for evening, 11; total to date, 23

Bull Patrol—Attendance, 7; inspection, 1; signalling, 2; games, 3; council fire, 1; total for evening, 14; total to date, 25.

Announcement was made of a week-end camp, to be held, weather permitting, on May 21, and seven scouts picked to attend. They hope to have the camp in good shape when they return, ready for a hike by the whole troop during June.

A signal fire will be lit on Saturday night to let the parents and scouts know all is well, and to show the location of the camp.

According to the Dolbear formula, if one subtracts 40 from the number of cricket chirps a minute, divides the remainder by 4 and adds 50 to the result, he will be able to tell the temperature without a thermometer.

Hart Massey, the youngest son of Canada's minister to Washington, is shown ABOVE to be 100 per cent Canadian. He is posing with his special chum, "Peter", the favorite of a menagerie of pets, of which the latest to join the flock is a ferret. The photograph was taken at Massey farm, near Port Hope, Ont.

Miss Lancaster, Matron of the Home, thanked the choir in a few well chosen words, and all the old folk expressed their desire to have the choir come back soon.

This choir was organized last February and although it is not large in numbers, is making rapid strides under the conductorship of Mr. Clark and the singing is of a very fine quality.

A very hearty invitation is extended to all lovers of singing in the city to link up with this choir. Scotch nationality is not necessary for membership in this organization; all will be made welcome at the W.O.W. Hall every Wednesday night at 8 o'clock.

Citizens will have an opportunity to hear this choir later in the summer, as it is expected that a concert will be given in the park by the Caledonian Pips Band and Choir.

MURDERS? $10 A HEAD.

SHANGHAI, May 20.—The market on the common alley variety of murders in Shanghai is quoted at $10 a head. Evidence that gunmen or knife experts could be obtained for this price was brought out in the trial of a Chinese who killed a loyal mill-worker at the instigation of a labor leader.

A.Y.P.A. BANQUET IS GREAT SUCCESS

Men Hosts at Annual Social of Lakefield Branch.

LAKEFIELD, May 20.—The men of the A.Y.P.A. were hosts at the annual banquet which was held in the Parish Hall on Tuesday evening, May 17th. Twenty-five members and three visitors were present, the latter being Mrs. O. A. Langley, Dr. F. H. Linswood and Mr. Charles Thomson, who acted in the capacity of judges in the recent dramatic contest. The banquet was one of the best ever held by the Association and all the credit belongs to the men who did the decorating, set the tables, provided the food, cleared up and washed the dishes.

When the ladies and visitors arrived at the appointed hour, 7 p.m., the committee received them giving each a ticket to find the place and partner assigned to them. The tables were very attractive, being decorated with bouquets of trilliums, the A.Y.P.A. colors in evidence in table streamers and lamp shades.

When all were seated Rev. W. J. Creighton said grace, after which the meal began, Messrs. W. Chappell and W. S. Remnant serving the tea and later pie a la mode and fruit which constituted the last course. The meal was delicious and was much appreciated. After supper Mrs. Trude Waldon moved a hearty vote of thanks to the men for the delightful banquet which they had prepared for the occasion and the capable manner in which it had been served. Banquets used to be considered the ladies part but the men had come up to the best the ladies had ever accomplished, and in many ways surpassed it. The committee were: Messrs. C. C. Stenner, W. Chapell, W. Remnant, B. Blewett, T. Simpson, E. Robertshaw, L. Charlton, W. Robinson, M. Hampton. Others present included besides the judges, Rev. W. J. Creighton, Mrs. T. Waldon, Mrs. Chappell, Mrs. Stenner, Mrs. B. Blewett, Misses A. Watson, G. Watson, M. Mahood, Hampton, Summers, W. Payne, O. Watson, Graham, Cutter, and Messrs. E. Waldon and R. Alford.

The remainder of the evening was spent in progressive euchre, the prizes being won by Miss Dell Watson and Mr. Remnant, while Miss Cutler and Mr. Blewett won the consolation trophies. The evening was very successful and will remain always as one of the red letter nights in the society's history.

BEEKEEPERS HOLD GOOD FIELD DAY

Hastings County Men Meet at Apiary Near Tweed.

TWEED, May 20.—A very largely attended field day meeting for Hastings County beekeepers was held in the apiary of Roy Marsh, Tweed, on Tuesday, May 17. About fifty beekeepers from different parts of the county attended. The meeting was addressed by B. O. Lott of Stirling, president of the County Beekeepers' Association; G. L. Jarvis of the O.A.C., Guelph; T. Shields, Peterboro; Mrs. Atking, Stirling, and Mr. Halstead, manager of the Ontario Honey Producers Co-operative Ltd. Beekeeping was discussed from its many angles.

Mr. Shields gave a demonstration of examining colonies for disease and united two weak colonies. Mr. Halstead discussed marketing problems.

Mr. Jarvis discussed apiary inspection which is about to start. There is still some American foul brood in Hastings County, to be eradicated and the co-operation of every beekeepr is needed.

Clare Allen, Marlbank, and Roy Marsh, Tweed, were appointed intors for this district.

Mr. Marsh's apiary is situated about a mile and a half south of the village.

BASKET SOCIAL.

Held Under Auspices of Athletic Club at Welcome.

WELCOME, May 20. — A basket social, under the auspices of the boys' baseball team and the girls' softball team of Welcome was held in the Morish School House on Friday, May 13th.

The school was well filled with young people, eager to show their loyalty to the ball teams.

The programme was very interesting. The chairman, Mr. James Reynolds, made a fitting address, asking for the support of those present for the ball teams, both by attending practices and also attending the games when the schedule is arranged. He said the members of the ball teams appreciate their presence at the social. Mr. Pearce of Newcastle gave several recitation, which were heartily applauded.

Miss Lancaster of Port Granby, sang "In a Little Spanish Town. Miss Ida Clare recited, "A Morning Call." Miss Hazel Bamsey and Mr. Ernest Bamsey sang "I Never See Maggie Alone," and as encore gave a breezy dialogue, made up of puns on the names of the ball team.

Miss Elsie Beighton gave several recitations.

Mr. Doney of Port Hope, with the mandolin, and Mr. Hawthorne, with the violin, accompanied by Mrs. Lingard of Port Hope at the organ, provided the instrumental music for the programme.

Mr. Wilson was the auctioneer for the baskets. The proceeds amounted to $46.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Payne, Mr. Carman Payne, and Mrs. McMillan of Lakefield were the guests of Rev and Mrs. Clare on Sunday.

Miss Helen Lewis spent the week-end with her friend, Miss Vida Osborne.

Miss Lancaster of Port Granby was the guest of Miss Elva Pearce over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. James Seymour and Mr. and Mrs. Percy Seymour and daughter were visitors at the Parsonage on Monday

"Just pat on a few drops of Sloan's Liniment. Don't rub. It's the liniment—not the rubbing—that helps. You'll get relief right away. I've tried all sorts of other things, but nothing gets results like Sloan's."

Letters like this from hundreds of users of Sloan's tell of the wonderful relief that Sloan's gives to every kind of muscular pain.

Sloan's gives real and lasting help because it doesn't just deaden pain, it gets at the cause. Right to the place that hurts it brings a healing stream of fresh, new blood. Quickly and surely it carries off the "fatigue-poisons," takes out stiffness and drives away the aches and pains.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, May 20.—Except for a few odd lots of stale cattle from the weeks hold over supplies, the market was cleaned up at good steady prices. Any slight price recessions that may be made on stale heavy coarse steers, will probably have no effect on prices next week, especially on anything of good butcher killing quality. Cattle in this latter class showed no sign of weakening in Wednesdays closing market. Several choice lots of finished handyweight butcher steers, sold up to $9.25. A couple of extra prime quality heavy steers, 1525 lbs., topped the market for the week at $9.75. A general average of from $9.75 to $9.25 was well maintained for anything of good to choice quality butcher steers and heifers.

Only in the case of the coarse heavy steers, and half warmed up steers and heifers, stale left overs from Monday's heavy run, was there any easing off in the general run of prices.

Choice handyweight butcher steers and heifers firmer at $9.75 to $9.25; fair to good butcher, $7.75 to $8.25.

Cows, good to choice, $6.50 to $7.50; medium, $5.50 to $6.50.

Bulls steady, $6.50 to $7.25.

Calves a shade firmer at $10 to $11.50 tops.

Hogs, market steady at $10.50 selects, weighed off cars; $9.60, selects, f.o.b., $9.10, thic, smooth, f.o.b. Light shop hogs, $2 off selects per head. Heavies, $3 off per head. Extra heavy 2c per lb. off.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, May 20 (Canadian Press).—All grain went skyrocketing yesterday, especially corn. Cloudbursts and floods together with a forecast of more rain that meant further serious delay to corn planting gave a big stimulus to buying and whirled the corn market to highest prices yet this season. Heavy profit taking ensued and corn closed unsettled at 1 cent to 2 cents net advance; wheat ⅛ to ¾c up; oats at ⅜t to ¾c gain, and provisions varying from 5c decline to a rise of 20c.

Oats were strengthened by estimates that farm reserves in six leading states are 52 per cent smaller, compared with a year ago.

Provisions reflected advances both in hog values and in grain.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, May 20 (Canadian Press).—There was no improvement in the export trade in grain in Montreal yesterday owing to the continued indifferent demand from English importers.

Late on Wednesday there was some demand from local exporters for Canadian Western oats and sales of 100,000 bushels of Tough No. 2 feed were made at ½c per bushel over the Winnipeg May option, c.i.f. Montreal.

On account of the continued strength in the Chicago future market for corn, local prices for the cash article were again advanced 1 cent per bushel. The market for Canadian Western oats was quiet but firm.

Owing to the steady advance in wheat prices of late and the small deliveries from farmers to Ontario millers, a stronger feeling developed in the local market for Winter wheat flour and prices were advanced 20 cents per barrel.

The local and export demand for Spring wheat grades of flour continued quiet, but values were firm.

The trade in millfeed was inactive, but the tone was steady. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was steady with a small trade passing.

Further strength developed in the potato market and prices were again advanced 10 cents per bag. This was attributed to the steady increasing demand and the somewhat limited supplies available. Sales of odd cars of Quebec grade were made at $2.10 to $2.20 per bag of 90 pounds in bulk, ex-track.

Prices for all grades of butter were well maintained under a quiet demand. The receipts were 1,721 packages.

The cheese trade continued quiet but prices were firm. The receipts were 1,439 boxes.

A moderate amount of business was transacted in eggs and prices were unchanged. The receipts were 3,477 cases.

sible British military quarters any of the reports which have been circulated here in the last few days relative to the exact nature of the missing document. It is even stated by some of the officials that if the document in question is as sighly important as indicated its contents may never be revealed.

Many Rumors.

The first reports circulated in London just after the raid was that a Scotland Yard secret agent in Arcos, Ltd., tipped his superiors that the secret state document was in the Arcos building. The raid was executed, but the reports have it Arcos Ltd was also tipped that it was coming and managed to slip the document through to Moscow in a sealed pouch which privilege is permitted Soviet agents under the Anglo-Russian trade agreement.

Another story widely circulated is that the document deals with the Imperial defence committee's plans. This seems plausible but cannot be verified. The imperial defence committee's functions are so broad that any important document of the war office would have a bearing on the committee's work in one way or another.

Another report is that the document deals with the military situation in China and Russia's participation therein.

"This is a likely guess," says the Evening Standard, which, however, is inclined to believe that the "missing paper had nothing to do with any current military operations or movements."

FRENCH GIRL WINS BRITISH GOLF HONORS

Dorothy Pearson of England Defeated 5 and 4 in Women's Open.

GAINS EARLY LEAD

First Time in History That Title Has Gone Abroad.

NEWCASTLE, County Down, Ireland, May 20. Canadian Press. — Mlle. Simone Thion de la Chaune, 19 year old French golfer, yesterday captured the British women's open golf championship by a 5 and 4 victory over Miss Dorothy Pearson of Tunbridge Wells, Kent, England.

Mlle. de la Chaume is the first foreigner ever to take the trophy out of Great Britain, just as her compatriot, Arnaud Massy, was the first foreigner ever to win the British open by his victory at Hoylake in 1907.

Yesterday's 26 hole final match was a great fight. The two girls, both still in their 'teens, waged a steady battle over the County Down fairway. Mlle. de la Chaume laid the foundation for her victory with a five hole lead during the first round this morning, but the young Briton came back bravely and regained four holes during the first seven played in the afternoon. For a few moments Miss Pearson looked like a winner, but the terrific odds of the French girl's perfect iron shots to the greens and her deft putting were too great.

Mlle. de la Chaume played such excellent golf throughout the tournament that no one here detracts from her victory because Joyce Wethered, Cecil Leitch and Glenna Collett are not participating in the tournament. In fact the experts expect even greater things from the French player as a newly arrived golfing star of the first magnitude, whose style of play compares favorably with that of Joyce Wethered than whom, the British say no greater exponent of the game ever lived.

NEW YORK, May 20 (Canadian Press) — The bonds that held to earth three aeroplanes straining to be off on a flight for France yesterday were composed of no stronger substance than paper and tenuous mist, yet they proved as great a restraint as if they had been iron chains.

All three planes were fettered to America by mist, the weather bureau reporting late yesterday that dense fog existed all the way to Newfoundland and, to the best of available knowledge ,extended well out beyond the Grand Banks.

The plane that was bound by paper chains as well as fog was the Bellanca monoplane financed by a company headed by Charles A. Levine. And the paper was a summons served on Levine by Lloyd Bertaud, appointed as navigator of the plane, informing him that the plane must not fly without Bertand for the present and calling on him to appear in court to show cause why the injunction should not be made permanent to-day.

Only One Test

The only one of the three planes to get into the air yesterday was the Fokker three-engined monoplane manned by Byrd., Neville and Acosta, and that was only a 15 minute speed and instrument test. The Bellanca lay in its hangar while the crew slept off an almost all night conference and Lindsbergh's Ryan was idle because there is nothing more to be done to it before it hops off on the great adventure.

The day was marked by diverse statements from members of the Bellanca camp. At four o'clock yesterday morning Bertaud issued from a conference with Levine to announce that all was well, that all dissension had been "talked out" amicably, and that he was to continue as navigator.

Then he went to bed and while he slept Levine issued a statement saying that nothing had been settled amicably or otherwise; that Bertaud was definitely out and that his successor had been selected. He said that the identity of this new member of the crew would not be made public until just before the hop off.

When Bertaud awoke and learned of the Levine statement he said he was greatly shocked and surprised. He stated that he was beginning to believe Levine had never intended the flight to take place. He also said that he would press his action for a permanent injunction vigorously.

BELLEVILLE PLANT SOLD

BELLEVILLE, May 20. — A deal was completed yesterday by which the Marsh Engineering Works plant was sold to the Stephens-Adamson Manufacturing Company of Aurora, Illinois, large manufacturers of conveying machinery. This company will manufacture the line made by the Marsh Company as well as its own lines.

The Stephens-Adamson Company has applied for Canadian incorporation, and will take over the Marsh plant on Monday next. Negotiations have been under way for some time, and Belleville won out against keenest competition with other Ontario cities. The company is coming here without bonus or concession of any kind.

HARD TO ENFORCE LAW

MONTREAL, May 20.—Chief of Police Pierre Belanger of Montreal stated before the Royal Commission investigating the theatrical situation in the Province of Quebec, following the Laurier Palace fire-panic of last winter, that, although all his officers were charged to see that civic by-laws were observed in the theatres, none was assigned to this duty specially. He emphasized the difficulty of apprehending managers who admitted children under age and unaccompanied by an adult. A young boy had been used as an informer at one time, the Chief said, but this practice had been discontinued by the police.

TAX RATE, 41 MILLS

PORT CREDIT, May 20.—A tax rate for 1927 of 41 mills was struck by the Port Credit Council. This rate is the same as that of last year, and is viewed with satisfaction generally, considering that school requisitions were several thousand dollars in advance of 1926, and that a large program of roadwork has already been mapped out.

Owing to press of municipal business, the Council will meet twice a month in future.

Plans for the local Jubilee celebration of Confederation will be worked out next Monday night, when the Council will meet with representatives of the various churches and societies.

REDUCE SPEED LIMIT

TORONTO, May 20.—Waiting on Hon. George S. Henry, Minister of Highways, yesterday, Reeve R. M. Leslie and members of the East York Council urged the department to take steps to bring about a reduction of the speed limit in their township. The deputation claimed that the district in question is almost as thickly populated as a town, and that, under the circumstances, the recognized speed limit of 35 miles per hour is too high for public safety.

35 PERMITS SOLD

BELLEVILLE, May 20—Thirty-five permits for the purchase of liquor were all that were sold yesterday in this city when the temporary office for the purchase of permits was opened by B. L. Hyman, who is to be the vendor. H. Bateman will be assistant vendor, and H. Naylor will be issuer of permits. At no time was there any rush, but a number of those sold yesterday were for persons who reside outside the city.

HE HAS EARNED IT

TILLSONBURG, May. 20.—George H. Hollier, President of the South Oxford Conservative Association, has been appointed issuer of liquor permits for Tillsonburg and district. He is an ex-Warden of the county and ex-Mayor of the town, and has served Oxford County in municipal affairs for many years with great success.

KENORA HARD HIT.

Floods May Cause Shut-down of Two Machines.

KENORA, May 20.—Little hopes for immediate relief from the flood conditions on the Winnipeg River were held out to the Council of the Kenora Board of Trade by Major Crawford, United States engineering representative on the International Joint Commission, and District Engineer Attwood of Winnipeg, who represented the Canadian engineer on the Commission.

On the contrary, the visiting experts stated that the number of cubic feet per second now being spilt through the Norman dam would have to be gradually increased until some 50,000 cubic feet per second was being spilt. This was necessary, they said, on account of the steadily rising waters of the Lake of the Woods, which has already inflicted some damage at the south end of the lake.

The visiting engineers stated that they were most sympathetic to the pressing need for local relief, but that they were bound by the treaty and at present they had no other alternative than to spill more water until conditions on the Lake of the Woods became more normal.

The exceptional snow and rainfall this season has brought about serious conditions locally, and there is a big probability that the Kenora Pulp and Paper Mills will have to shut down one or maybe both machines, throwing 600 men out of work, and that the Lake of the Woods Milling Company at Keewatin will have to cease operations entirely.

CO-ORDINATION NEEDED.

TORONTO, May 20.—An official expression of appreciation and goodwill on the part of the Ontario Government and the Provincial Department of Public Health was expressed to the Canadian and Ontario Dental Associations at their luncheon in the King Edward Hotel yesterday, by Dr. W. J. Bell, Deputy Minister of Public Health for Ontario. Dr. Bell told the dentists that he had been authorized to do so. The Department of Public Health, he said, were keenly alive to the values of the closer alliance formed between the department and the dental profession in the last two years.

The paramount importance of the most complete co-ordination possible of public health, medical practice and dental work was again stressed before the associations yesterday by Dr. Oscar Klotz, professor of pathology and bacteriology in the Faculty of Medicine, University of Toronto, who was the special speaker at the Oral Hygiene luncheon. "While we remain apart," he said, "it would take many years to accomplish the work which we might accomplish by co-ordinating."

Referring to the better ideals and standards of the dental schools of today, Dr. Klotz emphasized the importance of oral hygiene in connection with the diseases of the oral cavity which so often led to disability in later life. The trouble was, he stated, that they got to the doctor too late. The dentist was in at the beginning. "There is great opportunity," the doctor said, "in the study of dental diseases and in dental research." Dr. Klotz said he was always impressing this need on the members of the Dental Faculty at the University of Toronto. He declared that the men in medicine had not yet touched that field sufficiently. Sounding a word of warning, he told the dentists that they must not grasp at straws, before they had the facts before them. Pyorrhea, he said, had existed very commonly amongst ancient Egyptians, long before the Christian era. "The diseases are not new," he said; "it's only because we of the commonplace have overlooked them."

As to Research Work.

Research, he said, had been rather misunderstood by the laity. They looked upon it as something mysterious, that went on behind closed doors, and thought it was necessary for the research workers to wear green coats, etc. People were getting away from that idea of research today. Research meant, mainly, close observation and the making of good records.

At the head table were: Drs. F. C. Husband, S. W. Woollatt, E. A. Grant, A. E. Webster, R. J. Reade, of Toronto; A. W. Ellis, chairman of the Oral Hygiene Committee; Dr. Oscar Klotz, Dr. Chas. J. Hastings, Col. Nasmith, W. C. Trotter, J. E. Atkinson, Dr. F. C. Burke, director medical services, Toronto Department of Public Health; Dr. William Robertson, of the Canadian Red Cross; Dr. J. T. Phair, director medical services, Provincial Red Cross; Dr. W. E. Willmott, Dr. J. A. Bothwell, Dr. W. Seccombe, Dr. J. W. Clay, of Alberta; Dr. E. Dubeau, Montreal, and Dr. J. S. Bagnalls, Halifax.

Following the luncheon, Dr. Russell W. Tench, of New York, read a paper on "Full Dentures." He was followed by Dr. W. D. N. Moore, of Chicago, whose subject was, "A Broader Vision of Bridge Work," and Andrew J. McDonagh, "A Study of Bacteria in Living Pulps."

The delegates were entertained to afternoon tea and a social hour at the Granite Club, yesterday afternoon. Fraternity and class reunions preceded the Toronto Garrison Military Tournament, which closed yesterday's program. This afternoon the Canadian and Ontario Dental Associations' golf championship tournament will be held at the Thornhill Golf Club. A dinner and the presentation of prizes will terminate the program of the Diamond Jubilee convention.

CONFEDERATION AND AFTER —SIXTY YEARS OF PROGRESS

IDEA OF CONFEDERATION

Who first conceived the idea of linking together in a strong and permanent union the scattered colonies of British North America, it would be difficult to say. Probably, like a good many other important movements, this idea of Confederation was a gradual growth, simmering in the minds of a few men of vision until the time was ripe to make it a reality. Most people are inclined to associate it with the Fathers of Confederation, but the idea is much earlier that their day. They, however, took hold of it and trimmed and fashioned it into a practicable scheme.

Of the thirty-three Fathers of Confederation, perhaps seven may be regarded as the governing minds. These were the actual Fathers of Confederation— Macdonald, Cartier, Galt, Tupper, Brown, McGee, Tilley, and it is probable that Galt, although little is heard of him today, should rank high even among these. Without the influence and enthusiasm of Cartier it would have been impossible to persuade French Canada to consent to the union; Brown ensured the support of the influential Reformers of Upper Canada; Tupper and Tilley won the Maritimes; McGee by his eloquence swayed the Irish vote; and Macdonald's inimitable leadership piloted Confederation through countless difficulties; but it remains true that without the far-sightedness and enthusiasm and contructive mind of Alexander Galt it is very unlikely if the Dominion would now be celebrating its Diamond Jubilee.

Galt saw, years before its associates, that a union of all the provinces was the only solution of the problem, the only way out of the political tangle which every year was becoming more hopeless. He took the idea of Confederation and with infinite care, built it up into a complete and practicable scheme. The practical politicians of his day were inclined at first to laugh at him and to brush his plan aside as an impossible dream, but in the end they were forced to admit that it was not only practicable but the only possible road to peace and security. Galt not only developed the scheme of Confederation, but he, more than any other man, prepared the public mind to accept it. In season and out of season he talked Confederation, and, although no spell-binder, his clear, logical mind, his complete faith in the idea, and the confidence that people had in his integrity, won the support of thousands of citizens who otherwise might have regarded the union of the provinces as a mad and dangerous experiment.

Without questioning for a moment the debt that Canada owes to the genius of Macdonald, in steering the ship of state through the rocks and whirlpools of party, racial and provincial jealousies and misunderstandings into the harbour of Confederation it is only just to Alexander Galt to remember that he, above all others, sowed the field that Macdonald reaped. Macdonald was a shrewd and cautious statesman. He had no faith in rash experiments. He knew that the wise and successful politician led the people the way they were already inclined to go. Macdonald was indeed the captain of Confederation, but Galt was its prophet.

Altogether, before and after Confederation, Alexander Tilloch Galt gave nearly sixty years to the service of his country. He lived to see its weak and scattered provinces welded into a powerful and ambitious Dominion. A man of rare personal charm, modest and unassuming but with a quiet dignity that commanded respect, he had the genius of his family for finance and colonization, and was a master of diplomacy. It is only right that Canadians should remind themselves that they owe a debt of gratitude to this man whose constructive vision and untiring efforts were devoted so largely to the creation and upbuilding of the Dominion.

PICKEREL FRY FOR HIAWATHA

SENT FROM HATCHERY.

HIAWATHA, May 20.—On Wednesday, May 18, the Department of Game and Fisheries of Ontario had an extra car on the passenger train running from Belleville and Peterboro which was loaded with cans of pickerel fry for distribution along Trent River system.

At 7.34, George Paudash received two ten-gallon cans at Keene Station and in less than an hour he and Madden Howard, Sr., had them safely in the water, along the shore nearly a mile long in front of this reserve.

When interviewed on Wednesday evening, Mr. Paudash said that he made application for them last year. Along with his request for pickerel fry, he asked for fry of small-mouthed bass and 'lunge. The Department, in replying stated that as yet no facilities were available for the successful hatching of 'lunge but they hoped in a few years to have 'lunge fry for different lakes and rivers. Bass were not mentioned at all.

This spring, William Coulter of the Ontario Hatchery at Glenora, near Picton, Prince Edward County, sent word to Mr. Paudash that he was to receive two cans.

Twenty-four hours' notice was given Mr. Paudash of the arrival of the fish car at Keene.

Mr. Paudash judged that perhaps there were several hundred thousand young pickerel in the two cans. Very few were dead. Each can had ice in it.

The fry are about three-sixteenths of an inch long, with large heads which seem to be all eye. They are something like wigglers that are sometimes found in rain barrels.

In four or five years' time, if these small pickerel mature, there will certainly be good fishing along the Hiawatha side of Rice Lake.

Do you get a sensation of pressure on the heart? Don't be frightened it's not heart trouble—it's indigestion. Seigel's Syrup will fix it. Any drug store.

NO CELEBRATION ON JUBILEE DAY

Havelock People Show Little Interest When Public Meeting is Held.

ATTENDANCE SMALL.

HAVELOCK, May 20.—Havelock is to have no celebration for Canada's Diamond Jubilee on July 1st. A meeting was held in the Town Hall on Thursday evening to make arrangements and appoint committees but the attendance was even smaller than at the meeting a week previous. Reeve Curtis announced that owing to the fact that so little interest had been shown, the Council did not feel like going on with a celebration, and as far as they were concerned the matter would be dropped.

COLUMBUS, Ind., May 20.—After locking the doors of the Citizens National Bank, the president placed the key on the porch of the custodian. 1100 Miles Through the Rockies in a 1923 Ford Without a Change of Oil

ON a motor trip through the Canadian Rockies last summer, Mr. A. F. Menzies of Fillmore, Sask., driving a 1923 model Ford Sedan and using Marvelube "F" exclusively, established some real records.

"We noticed a very marked improvement in the performance of the car," writes Mr. Menzies. "The motor had a softer and smoother tone and a very elusive knock completely disappeared. We drove eleven hundred miles before changing the oil, and the oil was the best in every respect that I have ever seen taken out of a car.

"Our car has never had new rings, or any other attention worth mentioning. It had never distinguished itself as a gas-saver, but after we started using Marvelube we got almost phenomenal mileage.

"On the Banff-Windermere highway between Cranbrook and Windermere we made 27 miles to the gallon, which came within a mile of beating the mileage record over this road.

"This was the lowest gas mileage we made. The best mileage made was between Medicine Hat and Lethbridge—34 miles to the gallon. As the old Ford never performed this way before, it is manifest that a good share of the credit is due to Marvelube".

The record made in this instance with Marvelube "F"—while not to be set up as a pattern for the average motorist—is an indication of Marvelube's remarkable stamina.

Even with such wonderful lubricating qualities as are possessed by Marvelube, it is well to change oil every 500 miles.

Using Marvelube and changing regularly you can be sure of the most satisfactory lubrication it is possible to obtain.

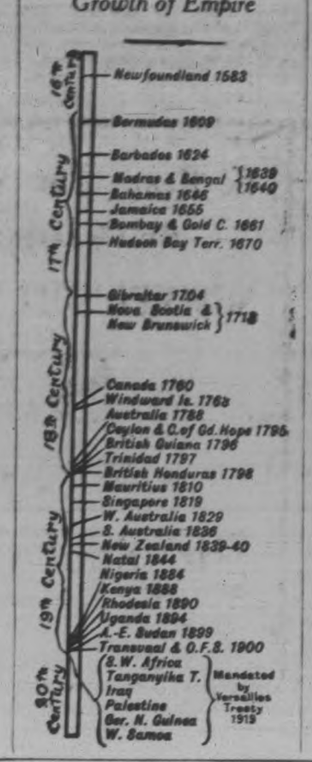
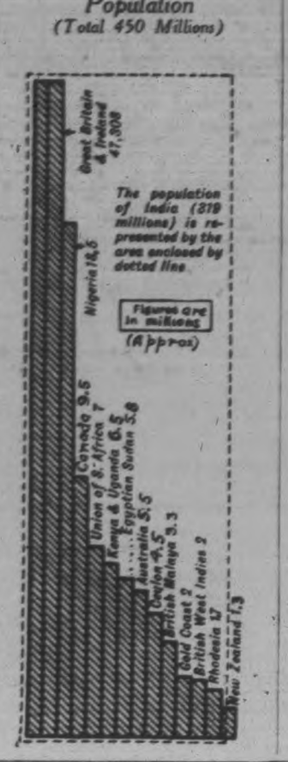
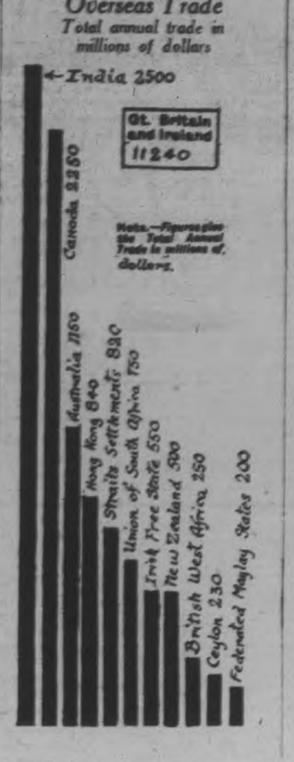
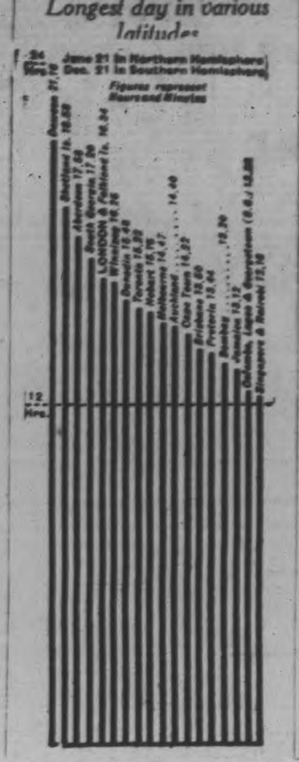
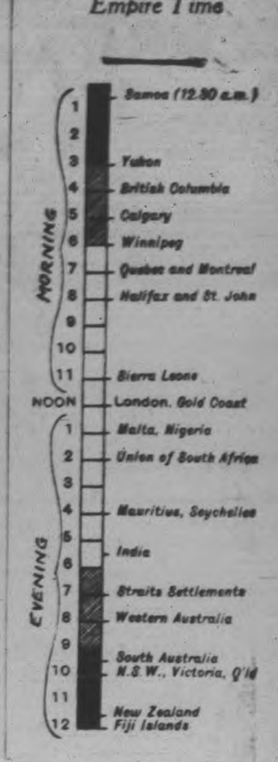
British Empire Story Charted In Graphic Form











Variety of Statistics in Form of Charts Gives Vivid Glimpse of British Empire's Greatness

IT has been said that the Roman Empire was the creation of Force, the British Empire was the creation of Freedom.

The British Empire is a fact, the largest fact of our Age. Its anatomy is now plainly discernible. The heart is industrial Britain, the face British civilization, the body the Empire as a whole, the limbs British Dominions and territories overseas, the veins sea and air communications and the blood economic power.

The charts featured on this page will assist the reader to understand the extent and variety of our Empire which functions noiselessly and grows steadily from year to year in wealth and population. The importance of Canada's position will also be more readily appreciated. The chart dealing with Trade of the Empire reveals the progress being made by this Dominion and indicates that efforts of the different parts of the Empire to put business in each other's way have borne good fruit. The general information which may be extracted from the other charts covers a wide range of statistics taken from the latest government publications and other reliable sources.

CLIMATES COMPARED.

So much has been written about Canada's climate since Kipling coined the slogan "Lady of the Snows" that the records of rainfall and sunshine as well as average temperatures throughout the Empire, portrayed in this graphic form, place the Canadian climate in something like its true light as invigorating and altogether superior. Even the soft refreshing rain so dear to the heart of the dwellers on the Pacific slope loses much of its dampness when compared with the precipitation in some other parts of the Empire. The most southern part of Canada is in the same latitude as Rome, Italy. Toronto is in the same latitude as Florence; Montreal is over 200 miles further south than Paris and Winnipeg is 100 miles south of London. All the peninsula of Ontario and South-western Nova Scotia lies nearer to the Equator than to the Pole.

That part of Canada which lies more southerly than the North point of England is enormously vast and includes the agricultural land of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

The charts enable fair comparisons to be made and certainly show that there is no good reason back of the idea that Canada is a semi-Arctic country.

SOWING AND REAPING.

The variety applying to climatic conditions within the British Empire applies equally to industry and agriculture. While seed is being sown in Canada this month the farmers of Cyprus and Iraq are engaged in harvesting operations. At the same time anther important basic industry is in full swing off the coast of Newfoundland where hardy fishermen ply their arduous calling on the Grand Banks and gather their harvest in the face of dangers of fog and the heavy traffic in the shipping lanes of the Atlantic.

In South Africa orange growers are making ready to take off their crop of fruit which is destined to replenish supplies in European markets just when the yield of the Northern Hemisphere begins to fail.

This month in New Zealand the mercury is falling as autumn advances. Deer-stalking is coming to an end with the approach of winter, having reached its height in April. In many of the forested sections of the North Island and the mountains of the South Islands splendid sport is provided by the fed and fallow deer, descendants of those imported originally from Great Britain, which they have considerably outgrown in size and weight as have the wapiti and moose introduced from Canada.

HISTORICAL DEVELOPMENT.

Empire History is a subject too little studied by the majority of people who dwell under the Union Jack. The chart showing the the historical growth of the British Empire is probably the most concise chronology of important events in its development possible to condense in such small space.

The days of Drake, Frobisher and Raleigh are brought to mind readily as the founders of British world trade in the Sixteenth Century which marked the change from the Middle Ages to our Modern world.

Explorers and navigators from France played an important part in the early history of Canada and the contributions of Jacques Cartier and Champlain are now part of the warp and woof of our national story.

Turning to a consideration of the Empire's population a glance at the racial chart shows that out of a total of 450,000,000 only 65,000,000 are of European stock, while the adjoining chart shows that of these latter 47,000,000 approximately are squeezed into the British Isles.

Not one Dominion of the Empire, excepting Canada, holds a population equal to that of greater London, and even in Canada there is little to spare in excess of the London total. Outside Great Britain there are not in the Empire 20,000,000 of our own race. These figures inevitably lead thoughtful readers to the paramount problem of the day not only in Canada but throughout the Empire—that of Population.

On this point Right Hon. C. A. McCurdy sets forth an interesting view in concluding a recent contribution to the Contemporary Review:—

"We must be prepared to migrate industries as well as to migrate men. Other nations are setting up their factories near the sources of markets and raw materials. The Dominions themselves are determined to encourage the development of industry within their own borders and to diminish imported commodities to the utmost possible extent. Great Britain is the present base of Empire, and her welfare is therefore of immediate concern, but in the future the Empire, let us hope, will contain not merely one but many rich and well-populated nations. In what part of the British Empire citizens multiply and prosper is immaterial, the important point is that they should multiply and prosper somewhere within its frontiers."

CANADA'S TRADE EXPANSION.

Business men will probably be most interested in the chart which deals with economic relations which shows the prominent position occupied by this Dominion commercially. Canada's trade within the Empire now exceeds $1,000,000 a year. Also in the tremendous expansion of external trade which has marked the past 30 years, particularly in exports, resulting in giving Canada second place among the world's peoples in per capita exports and fifth place in absolute amount, surpassed only by Great Britain, United States, France and India, inter-Imperial trade has played a notable part. Here it may be remarked that there are 319 million people in the Indian Empire as compared with nine and a half millions in Canada.

Great Britain in 1926 was Canada's best customer, taking over eight times as much as on the eve of the war. In four years out of eight since the war Great Britain has led. The rest of the Empire takes some $90,000,000 of our products, or nearly four times as much as in 1914. It is true that relatively our Empire exports do not show the same advance; 30 years ago Great Britain and the rest of the Empire took 65 per cent of our exports; just before the war, 55 per cent, and in 1925, 45 per cent. This decline is not due to the growth of our exports to the United States notable though that has been, so much as to the growth of exports to foreign countries overseas.

INTER-EMPIRE TRADE.

Preferential trade arrangements have played a part in inter-Empire trade development but how great would be difficult to determine. Great Britain grants a preference to Empire products on a limited number of imports which were subject to duty; sugar and motor cars are the only Canadian products so assisted in any notable measure. Canada's pioneer example of granting a preference to British goods has been followed by all the other Dominions except Newfoundland; India grants no preference. A recent British official survey states that Canada with the highest tariff in the Empire granted in 1924 a smaller average preference on British goods than Australia and New Zealand; since that year Australia has increased its tariff and Australia and New Zealand have imposed more rigorous tests of British origin. South Africa during the past year has remodelled its tariff so as to limit preference to a special list in the case of each part of the Empire and of foreign countries, with Great Britain alone thus far receiving most favored nation terms. The conclusion of Canadian Trade agreements with Australia and with the British West Indies in 1925 indicate continuance of the established policy of exploring all avenues of inter-Empire trade.

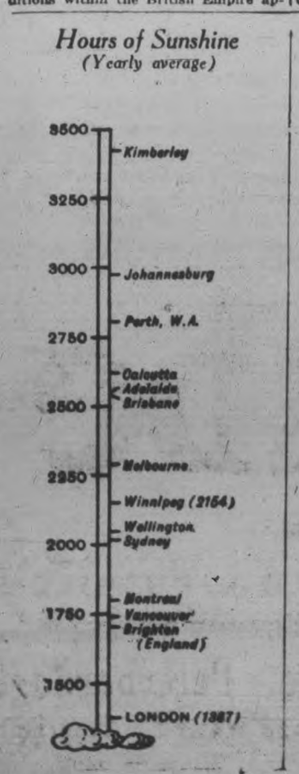
The Term Dominion.

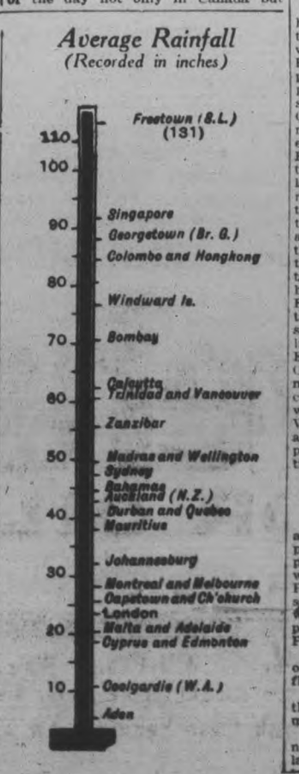
Canada was designated a Dominion as a result of the chance reading of a passage in the Church of England prayer book by Sir Leonard Tilley. He was in the habit of reading from the Psalms every morning and while the selection of a term to apply to Canada was under discussion in 1864 he happened to read the seventy-second Psalm:

"His dominion shall be also from one sea to the other and from the flood to the world's end."

He suggested to the conference that the term Dominion be selected and it met with instant approval.

It is interesting to note that the new Canadian motto, which translated, reads, "From sea to sea," is [illegible] the same Psalm.





HER MAJESTY THE LATE QUEEN VICTORIA.

Canada's Diamond Jubilee of Confederation recalls to mind another great Diamond Jubilee, when Victoria celebrated the 60th year of her reign in 1897. The "Queen's Birthday," May 24, is still one of the Dominion's most popular holidays.

"Status Equal, Functions Different," Lord Balfour's Definition of Imperial Relationship Today

LONDON — As the discussions of Empire Premiers at the last Imperial Conference recede further into history it is generally agreed that the relations of the various Dominions and the Mother country remain essentially unchanged.

In a discussion at Edinburgh University recently the Earl of Balfour summed up the position succinctly in these words:—"While for all time the status of these autonomous members of the British Empire is identical, there is and must be a differential function. It must be that no one of these Dominions should be entrusted a leading part, let us say, in diplomacy, a leading part in the organization of defence.

"All the Dominions are brought into council; all the Dominions are kept informed as far as conditions of time and space permit of what is going on, what is passing in the minds of those who are conducting our affairs here, of their views or their policy, and of course any opinion from any Dominion receives the full weight to which it is entitled. But some differentiation of function there always has been, and I think there always must be. It is not merely that to Great Britain has been entrusted a leading part in diplomacy and in defence."

PROFESSOR KEITH'S VIEW.

Another interesting view is that expressed by Professor Berriedale Keith a well-known authority on Constitutional questions who winds up a survey of present Empire relations by stating that the report of the Imperial Conference "points to a slow evolution and make no substantial breach with the present."

Professor Keith states his opinions in The Outlook as follows:—

"We are told that the Dominions are equal in status to the United Kingdom and in no way subordinate to it, though united by a common allegiance and freely associated as members of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

"The Conference, when it came to deal with the issues involved showed itself unable to arrive at any conclusions extending the autonomy of the Dominions beyond that already achieved.

"The essential features of Imperial supremacy are (1) the power of the British Government to secure that legislation attempted by the Dominions shall not become effective, a power now only exercised through the device of securing reservation by the Governor-General of any seriously objectionable Bill passed by the two houses of the Dominion Parliament; (2) the supremacy of Imperial legislation over Dominion legislation repugnant to it which is ensured by the Colonial Laws Validity Act, 1865; and (3) the right of the Privy Council to hear appeals from Dominion Courts a right which cannot be taken away by anything short of Imperial legislation except in the case of appeals from the High Court of the Commonwealth of Australia and the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of the Union of South Africa.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE.

"Autonomy, it is clear, means the disappearance of these effective signs of Dominion subordination but the Conference, however, readily it approached the problem of their removal found itself confronted with difficulties which rendered it impossible to arrive at any immediate solution and necessitated the references of the first two issues to an Expert Committee for further elucidation.

"On the questions at issue, that of Privy Council Appeals is theoretically simple. It is obviously absurd to declare that Canada is autonomous and an equal member of the British Commonwealth of Nations and at the same time to hold that the courts of the Dominion are unfit to do justice to an unfortunate lady who has an accident while seeking to enter a Canadian railway station, to take one of the issues recently decided by the Privy Council, overruling the Dominion Courts.

"If power were given to each Dominion to limit or abolish appeals at pleasure, Canada would be placed in an invidious position. If she decided to permit appeals to go on she might be held to be deliberately accepting a status of subordination derogatory to her dignity as the premier Dominion in status, resources and population; if she felt bound to stop appeals, Quebec would be deeply resentful, for Quebec sees the Privy Council the final bulwark of her provincial autonomy and her control of her language and religion.

RESULT NOT WANTED.

"If the Appeal could not be sacrificed, it was naturally impossible to sacrifice the legislative supremacy which the appeal serves to enforce. If the Colonial Laws Validity Act were repealed, and the right of requiring reservation of bills were renounced, there would be nothing whatever to prevent the passage of Acts in the Irish Free State and in the Union of South Africa declaring these territories absolved from allegiance to the Crown, and neither the Imperial government nor the government of the other Dominions were prepared to face such a result. The Conference therefore decided on further consideration and delay.

"The actual concessions made were essentially subsidiary, recognition or slight extension being accorded to principles already in normal operation. It was agreed that as a general rule the Imperial government should not tender advice to the Crown in any matter affecting a Dominion save in accordance with the wishes of the government of that Dominion. This of course is the fundamental principle of responsible government and no importance attaches to its reaffirmation, because that step was carefully safeguarded so as not to apply to cases where under the Dominion constitution or other Imperial legislation reservation is required, and these are the only cases in which the principle is ever now neglected.

"If the Report left any possibility of misunderstanding, it was promptly removed on November 25, 1926, by Mr. Baldwin who asserted in the House of Commons that, whatever changes might be made in the position of the Governor-General it was not intended to interfere with his duty of representing the Imperial government in the matter of reserving bills.

GOVERNOR'S POSITION.

"The position of the Governor-General was considered from two quite different points of view. Lord Byng's refusal of dissolution to Mr. Mackenzie King in June 1926 was not merely a complete breach of Canadian precedent, but it asserted for the Governor-General a personal initiative which was naturally resented by the people of the Dominion.

"It was therefore necessary to prevent the recurrence of such an incident, and the Conference had no difficulty in accepting the doctrine that in regard to the administration of a Dominion the position of a Governor-General is essentially the same as that of the King in respect of the administration of the United Kingdom. This, of course, is a matter which in no way affects Imperial relations, and the decision is one which has always been acted on in the Union of South Africa and has been adopted since 1914 in the Commonwealth.

"But it was also agreed as desired by Canada and the Irish Free State, that it might be held that the Governor-General should no longer serve as a channel of correspondence between the Dominion and the Imperial Governments or act generally as a representative of the Imperial Government.

RETAINS POWER.

"This decision does not apply to matters affecting the reservation of bills, as regards which the Governor-General must retain all his present authority and duty.

"The arrangement is purely facultative and it merely extends the doctrine agreed on in 1918 according to which the Prime Minister of a Dominion is always entitled to correspond direct with the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom. It is now open for the External Affairs department of each Dominion to deal direct with the Dominions Office; but the value of the concession is detracted from by the agreement that the Governor-General in recompense is to be supplied with copies of all communications and to be given full information on Cabinet decisions, which is far from being the case at present. In this as in all else the Report points to a slow evolution and makes no substantial breach with the present."

Opportunity

They do me wrong who say I come no more
When once I knock and fail to find you in;
For every day I stand outside your door,
And bid you wake and rise to fight and win.

Wail not for precious chances passed away
Weep not for golden ages on the wane;
Each night I burn the records of the day,
At sunrise every soul is born again.

Laugh like a boy at splendors that have sped,
To vanished joys be blind and deaf and dumb;
My judgments seal the dead past with its dead,
But never bind a moment yet to come.

Though in mire, wring not your hands and weep,
I lend my arm to all who say: "I can"..
No shamefaced outcast ever sank so deep
But he might rise and be again a

DRESS
By MARY MARSHALL

The much vaunted theater blouse is shown here in beige lace with buttons and belt buckle of rhinestones. It is worn with a brown satin pleated skirt.

How does the idea of wearing a separate blouse to the theater in the evening strike you? Probably not very favorably at first unless you have seen the new lace or georgette evening blouses specially designed for this purpose. Once it might have seemed a trifle second rate to don a light or elaborate blouse with a separate skirt and feel all dressed up for the theater. The very words "evening blouse" seemed absurdly linked.

A number of dressmakers have been showing blouses of this new genre, either of sleeveless or long-sleeved variety. Theater blouses in name, though in fact used as often for restaurant or informal dancing. The woman who likes to go to the pains of dressing for dinner every night—even in warm weather—finds little costumes of this sort—thin lace or chiffon blouse, with short, light skirt of finely pleated georgette—most convenient.

The sketch shows one of the long-sleeved models—of beige lace with rhinestone buttons and belt buckle. It is worn over a pleated brown crepe skirt, mounted on a low-cut brown bodice. There is something rather distinctive about this brown and beige combination this season when flower-petal shades are used for almost every occasion.

You may prefer the effect of a blouse worn with skirt to match. Then you may have some of the attractive dyed laces or georgette lightly beaded. You may choose orchid, or coral, light, soft green, pastel blue—white or black.

For the woman who must dress well on a small allowance these theater blouses have decided advantages. A blouse with material for a skirt can be bought for much less than the price of a really nice evening frock, and the task of making the skirt, with slip top to match, is not at all difficult. Besides, if you like, one blouse may be made to do double duty—a cream lace blouse may be worn now over matching slip and skirt and now over color.

SAINT and SINNER

When Adolph Bohn left he witness stand, after very successfully combatting Banning's attempt to ridicule him and to make light of his testimony as regards his proposal of marriage to Cherry, he turned toward the counsel table where Cherry was sitting with her sister. Before the judge or the district attorney could interfere, the rich young man who had just declared his love for Cherry and his unsuccessful effort to marry her, stopped before the shining-eyed, smiling little defendent and thrust out a hand. Cherry grasped his hand, clung to it a moment while her eyes misted over with tears, and while Banning shouted his horrified protest at this "brazen attempt to influence the jury."

Churchill, smiling broadly, gave the name of the next witness, Mrs. Mitchell, a next-door neighbor of the Lane family. While he was waiting for Mrs. Mitchell to make her appearance, he leaned toward Bob, who was beckoning him.

"Yes," Churchill whispered in answer to Bob's question, "Brady Hutchinson was one of the ex-convicts that Crowell dug up. But he seems on the square now. Couldn't get a thing on him. Got a business, even though it is a mail order concern that may overstep the postal laws any time. But what's the idea?"

"Oh, I just ran into him today and recognized him," Bob answered evasively. "I just wondered if you had overlooked him as the possible writer of the death threat letter, as the papers call it."

Twice a day during the next two days, while Churchill was examining a small army of character witnesses called to strengthen Cherry's defense, Faith and Bob made pilgrimages to the Lincoln Park corner where they had seen Phil, the beggar. But they learned from the old newsstand proprietor that the begger had not appeared again.

"He's just here off and on," old Kelly told them. "Don't see how he makes a living, working so seldom. But I reckon begging pays better than hard work," he concluded bitterly.

"Does he always take a taxi?" Bob asked.

"Sure he does. He can't walk hardly at all."

"Same taxi every time?" Bob pressed his point with apparent casualness.

"Reckon so. Looks like the same driver. Yes, it is the same, now I come to think of it," Kelly told him. "Reckon he's made some arrangement with him so's he'll haul him at a reduced rate, and this driver seems to know how to lift him in without hurting him much."

"Well, that disposes of my plan to check up on the taxi driver," Bob said to Faith when they were returning to the courthouse. "He's evidently either a close friend of the old beggar or in cahoots with him, and if I questioned him he'd give the whole show away to Schultz."

"Bob, what idiots we are!" Faith exclaimed. "Hasn't it occurred to you that the cab that Sanders, the McClintock's chauffeur, saw in the alley the night of the murder belonged to the same taxi driver that hauls old Phil around? Why, Bob, the case is practically complete against him!"

"Jove, you're right!" Bob cried, his blue eyes shining like diamonds. "Sanders testified that it was a brown and yellow taxi, and it's a brown and yellow that this bird uses to cart Phil around in. Listen! What's that extra the boys are calling? Here, boy!" he leaned out of the car to shout to a running newsboy. As he took the paper he read aloud, "CHERRY TAKES STAND TO-DAY."

The fashion for bobbed and shingled hair will last only two or three years more at the most in the opinion of M. Emile, the foremost ladies' hairdresser in England, and he adds that when long hair again becomes popular longer skirts will be worn.

The Women's and Children's Hospital of Chicago, originally founded at the close of the Civil War to care for widows and orphans of soldiers, is today the only all-women's hospital in the United States. All of the officials, physicians and attendants are women.

The president of the American Women's Club in Shanghai is Miss A. Viola Smith, who had the honor of being the first woman to be appointed a Deputy Trade Commissioner by the United States Government, and who for the past four years has occupied that position in China.

A new fashion craze in Paris ordains that for every month of the year the chic woman must wear the month's "birth-stone"—the diamond during April, the ruby in June, and so on. As the mode was started by a beautiful blonde actress from the Comedie Francaise, whose whims are taken as Fashion's law, quite a number of rich women who can afford to change their jewels as they change their hats have adopted it.

Beauty culture is a very old art. Even in ancient Rome women dieted to "reduce," wore tight corsets, and used false teeth and false hair.

At a recent fashionable society wedding in Melbourne a parish priest refused to permit two bridesmaids, who wore sleeveless dresses, to enter the church.

MUST REGISTER MARRIAGE PACT

Montreal Judge Comments on Safeguarding of Women's Rights.

GIVES A HINT.

MONTREAL, May 20. — A woman's rights under a marriage contract can be safeguarded only if the contract is registered, Mr. Justice Panneton decided in dismissing an appeal entered by Mrs. Thomas L. Muir in an effort to secure recognition for two claims totalling $17,400, against her husband's bankrupt estate.

Incidentally, in his judgment, rendered in the Bankruptcy Division of the Superior Court, His Lordship points out that it is advantageous for the wife to be separate as to property in cases where the husband goes into bankruptcy.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

Saturday, May 21, 1927.
(Copyright, 1927, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Until late in the afternoon of this day the planetary influences are adverse, according to astrology. There is a promising sign toward sunset.

Under this sway the aged may be exacting and troublesome. The rule is unfavorable to domestic harmony.

It is well to beware of entrance to a quarrel with more than usual discretion while the rule continues.

There is aspect read as indicating widespread interest in military training and presaging crowded camps where men are prepared for national defence.

In all parts of the country there is to be a strong impulse toward building and many structures of a public character will be erected, so that the future growth of cities may be assured.

Millions are to be devoted to art, literature and social life as a forerunner of tremendous national events, the seers declare.

America is reaching the apex of luxury and cultural development that is to be menaced with the first half of the twentieth century, astrologers foretell.

Race consciousness is to become stronger than it has been in the past, if the stars are rightly interpreted, and the Caucasian race will require superb stability and power to survive.

The seers foretell that upon unity and world brotherhood must depend the survival of present-day standards of civilization.

Hotelmen should profit marvelously under this direction of the stars which presages a summer season of great patronage.

One of the finer promises for the United States forecasts preeminence in gardening, as well as agriculture.

Persons whose birthdate it is should continue along paths now followed. The coming year should bring fruition to many hopes and reward for past effort.

Children born on this day probably will have a scientific trend of mind. Many physicians and chemists are born under this sign.

Miss Kathleen Hoalving, the twenty-three year old girl, who is the first Chinese woman to qualify as a lawyer in England, has never seen China. She was born in British Guinea, and after being educated in a convent there she went to England some seven years ago. Now she plans to go to China to practice her profession.

What Stylish Young Mister Man Will Wear

Fashion Caters to the Very Young of America.

BY JULIA BLANSHARD

Scanning the social order today and realizing what importance children occupy in the thoughts of educators, one conclusion crystallizes:

This certainly is the Age of Youth. Children's theaters, children's art exhibits, children's scientific playgrounds! And of course, children's clothing have an important place in the realm of style.

Catering Fashion.

For Fashion, usually in the vanguard of the trend of the times, now caters solicitously to the young of America.

"Sonny" is considered a distinct personality, apart from his parents. Suits, caps, sweaters and accessories are fashioned for his perspicacious taste.

The day when father's pants could make a smart new suit for Johnny are gone forever. Johnny now goes with Father and Mother and chooses his own.

English Note.

Paris dictates fashions for women. But the correctly informal note of English sorts wear sounds style again and again in the clothing for "Sonny." For the boy over six the smartest and most sensible wear allows three choices: the sack suit with two buttons and correctly-cut full "shorts"; the single-breasted three-button lounge suit of soft materials, preferably English tweeds; and separate shorts or knickers with pull-over sweater, worn either over a shirt with sports collar or without a shirt, worn over the underwaist.

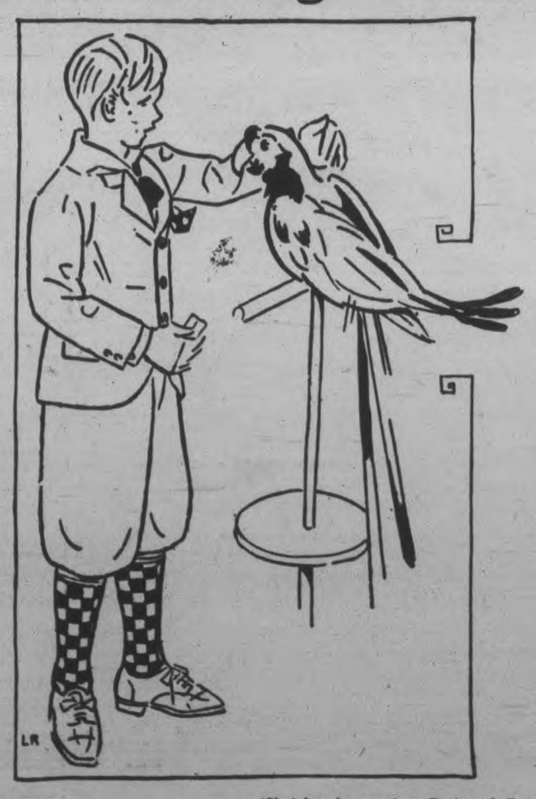
The fad for dressing "Sonny" like a caricature in long trousers waistcoat and coat like father's, has passed, happily.

His clothes, designed for him now, give the insouciant air youth should have and a simplicity that should go with little age.

The Materials.

Materials for the boys' suits are homespuns, kasha, serge and other of the usual suitings and wash flannels which prove very satisfactory. Blues are good this season, grays follow and browns from tan to deep hue are favorites, especially if they are blest with a novelty stripe, fleck, or invisible pattern.

Camp suits are fashioned of English drill material, khaki and Jersey, preferably the two former.



(Sketches by courtesy Best and Co.)

Young Mr. Man loses his self-consciousness in this trim single-breasted, three-button lounge suit of Continental blue worsted. Checked golf hose polka-dotted kerchief and tie and plain black brogues complete this outfit.

Ease and comfort are epitomized in left) and (right) a 'varsity sweater in a "monkey" sack suit of gray flannel tan and vivid collegiate stripes outlining the neck, sleeves and bottom. With it are worn shorts of matching Jersey.

Sweaters and long hose are the smart accessories for play wear.

Sweaters.

Sweaters range from angoras of light but strong colors to heavy woolens in sporty geometrical figures and stripes. The sweater necks vary too. But the "quarter turtle neck" on a pull-over type sweater is best.

The flannel sack suit calls for an Eton cap or a soft panama hat for summer wear. Sailor's berets are good for boys up to 12. Caps, American make, should match the suit in material and be restrained in size. The young boy's clothing should all show an absence of exaggeration.

"Shorts" show a tendency to crowd knickers out of popularity. The baggy plus-fours still are preferred by some. With a stuit of either shorts or knickers, sack coat or three-button, the shirts have collars that end in points or fall away from the neck like tennis shirts. Ties come in figures, stripes, and broken designs, in colors that run the gamut of shades of the spectrum—and then some. It wold seem as if ties with matching handkerchiefs allow a vent for "Sonny's" streak of flashiness.

Topcoats

Top-coats are of cheviot, tweed or camel's hair in light colors. Tans with grays are always good. A coat with raglan sleeves and cut on full roomy lines is correct and comfortable. The English reefer is worn by boys up to nine years, with an English tam of cheviot to match.

Shoes have dozens of designs in one or two kinds of leather. Brogues of course, are always smart on "Sonny." Black shows signs of being the choice of a large number of young men this season. But tans, with variety saddles of alligator and other contrasting leather, are shown too.

Other Accessories.

Gloves, handkerchiefs and shirts all should have some kinship with the rest of the costume. For the well dressed very young man makes as complete a picture when all assembled nowadays as his Mama in her costume. Verisimilitude is the keynote—blending colors and like materials that create general harmony.

Uncle Wiggily

To-day's Bedtime Story.

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S FUNNY SNOW.
Copyright, 1927, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

One Friday afternoon Uncle Wiggily thought he would hop over to the Hollow Stump School in time to hear the animal children recite some of their recitations, which they did the last day of the week.

"Speaking pieces," was what Baby Bunny and the other little rabbit children called these recitations. The girl animals did not mind them so much, in fact they rather liked to "show off," as Jackie Bow Wow used to say. But the boys! Dear me!

"Speaking in school is fierce!" Neddie Stubtail, the little bear boy, used to growl. But he had to do it now and then. Though usually he only learned very short poems, such as:

"The thunder rolled in a lightning's flash!" and everybody thought Neddie was going to speak a wonderful, shivery piece." But he ended with: "And broke Grandmother's teapot all to smash!" That's all there was to Neddie's "piece."

"I'll get to school in time to hear some of the recitations," said Uncle Wiggily to himself, but as he reached the hollow stump school he saw that the flag was down, which meant that school was over for the day. "Miss Mouse must have let the children go home early for a treat, I guess," thought the rabbit gentleman. But as he was hopping up the front steps out of the door ran Johnnie Bushytail, the squirrel boy.

"What's your hurry, Johnnie?" asked Uncle Wiggily. "Has anything happened in school that the flag is down and you are running out?"

"I—I can't tell you now, if you please, Uncle Wiggily!" chattered the squirrel boy. "I'm in a hurry to go to the ball game!" and he was soon lost to sight among the trees.

"There is something queer going on here," declared Mr. Longears. "Can anything have happened to the Lady Mouse Teacher? Is Johnnie running for Dr. Possum? No, he said he was going to a ball game!"

Just then Uncle Wiggily heard a cute little speaking laugh, and, looking up, he saw the Mouse Teacher looking down at him from an upper window. She saw his puzzled face.

"Nothing very much has happened, Uncle Wiggily," squeaked Miss Mouse, "except that I let all the children go home early as a treat, but I had to keep Johnnie Bushytail in for being a bit mischievous."

"What did Johnnie do?" asked the bunny. "I could see that he had been up to some tricks."

"He made a lot of snow and threw it all over Susie Littletail," was the answer.

"Johnnie made snow—now—in the middle of May!" exclaimed the rabbit. "Impossible! Unless he found some in the hidden pile I discovered about two weeks ago."

"No, Johnnie made his own snow," said Miss Mouse. "Come up and I'll show you." And when Mr. Longears was up in the school room the Mouse Teacher pointed to a pile of finely-torn scraps of white paper on her desk. At first it looked like a heap of snow, cold and shivery.

"What happened?" asked Mr. Longears.

"It was while we were having recitations," explained Miss Mouse. Johnnie took a lot of blank, white pages out of his lesson book and tore them into fine scraps like flakes of snow. Then while Jackie Bow Wow was reciting a piece about skating on the ice, all of a sudden Johnnie tossed a double pawful of the torn-up paper all over Susie who sat in front of him. It looked so much like a little snow-storm that Susie began to shiver. But she soon laughed and so did all the other children. So I had to make Johnnie stay in after school and pick up all of his funny paper snow. Here it is."

"Yes," said Uncle Wiggily looking at the pile on the desk of Miss Mouse. "It does look like snow! Of course Johnnie shouldn't have done it, but I guess——" Just then the rat gentleman janitor who had taken the school flag down came creeping into the room.

"Excuse me Uncle Wiggily," whispered the janitor, "but the Wolf is down in the yard and in a minute he'll be coming up here to bite you!"

Mr. Longears looked out of the window and saw the Wolf down in the yard. The Lady Mouse screamed softly as she saw the bad chap.

"I'll play a trick on him!" whispered the rabbit. He took the funny paper snow Johnnie had made and dropped it in sifting flakes down on the Wolf's head. And no sooner did the hungry animal see the white flakes drifting down than he, too, though they were real snow.

"Wow!" he howled. "There's a big storm coming! I'd better run home before I freeze! I'll get that rabbit another time!" So away he ran, not knowing the snow was nothing but bits of paper. So Mr. Longears was saved and he and Miss Mouse had a good laugh.

WAR AIRSHIPS NOT VERY SAFE

New Dirigibles Are Designed To Meet All Weather Conditions.

FOR EMPIRE ROUTES.

OTTAWA, May 20 (Canadian Press).—The development of lighter-than-air commercial transportation has been handicapped by prejudices growing out of the war and the British Government has been working during the past few years to overcome this handicap, Major G. H. Scott, commander of the R-34 on the trans-Atlantic flight, declares. Major Scott, who is in Canada to investigate and advise as to the location of a mooring mast for dirigibles in the Dominion, has stated that the R-34 was flown from England to the United States as part of the plan to overcome the prejudices created during the war.

Major Scott contends that no comparisons can be drawn from the performances of war dirigibles, designed as they were for long distance raiding and to ascend to great heights. These ships, he declares, were built along light, weak lines, whereas the great air liners to be used in the inter-imperial service in the fall of 1928 will be staunch craft, designed to meet all weather conditions.

The two huge airships now nearing completion in England to be used on the inter-Empire routes, are the largest and most up-to-date airships the world has ever known. They have a gas capacity of five million cubic feet, more that double the size of the United States dirigible Los Angeles, or the ill-fated Shenandoah. The ships will provide every comfort for 100 passengers, including two-berth cabins, two promenade decks, dining saloons to seat 50 people, smoking rooms and shower baths. There will be no such discomfort as "sea-sickness" aboard the air liners, Major Scott states, the size of the ships preventing rolling and pitching.

Meteorological stations will furnish advance notices along all the air routes and prevent the ships running into exceptional weather conditions which have caused major accidents such as have occurred in both Great Britain and the United States in the past.

The new mast to be erected in the Dominion will be far in advance of any already in use, according to Major Scott. It will allow for the release of dirigibles in winds as high as 40 miles an hour and for bringing ships to their mooring in winds as high as 30 to 35 miles per hour. The special construction of the ships will enable them to remain at the mast in any wind, he predicts. A crew of from 10 to 15 men will be all that will be required to moor and release the air-craft, as compared with a ground crew of from 300 to 400 men, required if the ships were to be housed in sheds and handled by a ground crew.

Major Scott, who is accompanied by A. R. Gibb, British civil expert, and Canadian air officials, is considering whether the mooring base should be located in the interior of Canada or at the Atlantic seaport. One opinion holds that the latter would be the better plan, passengers to be carried to their ultimate destinations in Canada and the United States by fast passenger aeroplanes and trains. Mail would be landed at the flight terminal and rushed by plane to central points. Major Scott predicts that the two ships to be put into service in 1928 will be but the forerunners of fleet of such craft.

NEW MYSTERY ABOUT PAPERS

War Secretary Says Nature of Document Sought Can't Be Disclosed.

STATEMENT POSTPONED.

LONDON, May 20. — (Canadian Press.) — Sir Laming Worthington Evans, Secretary of State for War, added a new mystery angle to-day to the raid of a week ago on Soviet House Headquarters here of the Soviet trade delegation. Replying to a question by Arthur Ponsonby, Labor member, in the House of Commons to-day, Sir Laming said it would not be in the public interest to discuss the missing state document which caused the raid.

What are to be the future relations between Britain and Soviet Russia as a consequence of the raid was the burning question to-day. Interest was particularly keen because of the postponement until Tuesday of a statement on the raid by the home secretary, Sir William Joynson Hicks, which was to have been made in the Commons yesterday.

OWLS WAR ON RATS.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Cats, traps and poison have failed to end the plague of rats that infest Lord Howe Island in the South Seas. The Australian Government sent an expert to see what could be done to relieve the eleven inhabitants, who threatened to quit the island. The expert sent for two cases of California barn owls, most persistent of all enemies of rats.

ONTARIO SYNOD ENDS SESSION

Will Arrange For Reciprocity in Clergy's Beneficiary Funds.

NEW REGULATIONS.

KINGSTON, May 20 — Ontario Synod, which concluded its session yesterday afternoon, will arrange with the other dioceses of Canada who work under the same principle for measure of reciprocity so far as clergy's beneficiary funds are concerned.

The canon authorizing this action was adopted unanimously and provides for the protection of clergy who may leave one diocese for a charge in another, as far as their service toward superannuation, or for the benefit of their family under the Widows and Orphans' Fund, is concerned.

In discussing this, Canon Bishop Seager pointed out that reciprocity in these matters was already in force in every diocese between Montreal and Calgary with the exception of Quebec and Ontario, and the system would very soon be universal over the whole of the Dominion.

The new canonical law, whereby minimum stipend for deacons shall be not less than $1,200 per annum, and for priests not less than $1,400 per annum, with residence, or allowance in lieu thereof, will go into effect on July 1 of this year.

The Synod unanimously adopted a resolution commending cadet training. There was no discussion on the subject.

Ladies' maids by the hour is the latest idea for the tired business woman, who has not time to look after her clothes herself.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Gifts That Are Better Than Money

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for May 22: Gifts That Are Better Than Money.—Acts 3:1-10; 4:8-10.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D.D.
Editor of The Congregationalist.

It is a truism to say that there are things that are a great deal better than money.

Many of the most precious things money cannot buy, though toward the acquirement of some of them it can very materially help. Money, for instance, cannot buy health; yet there are many whose health might be won back or greatly improved if their poverty did not prevent their securing adequate medical or surgical treatment or a proper rest from toil.

It is no part of religion or good sense to despise money or what money can do; it is the purpose of religion to create the right attitude toward money and common sense and spiritual vision in its use. But money, none the less, cannot always buy us health nor can it secure for us love and joy and the precious inner experiences and relationships of life.

Peter's Miracle.

It is well for us to turn to this lesson with its story of Peter and John going up into the temple to pray when we are disposed to set too high a value on money and especially to think that we cannot accomplish much in the world because we do not happen to have wealth. The incident in our story, the restoration to strength of the beggar who sat asking alms at the beautiful gate at the temple, is, of course, miraculous, and it may be said that we cannot perform miracles.

That may be true, but something very much like miracles would come about in the world if all Christians met the individual needs of their fellowmen and the needs of the world with the spirit of Peter and John.

"Silver and gold have I none," said Peter to the beggar, "but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, walk."

But Peter did more than simply bid the beggar rise up and walk. We are told in the narrative that he took him by the right hand and lifted him up. Perhaps that is quite as significant as Peter's willingness to give what he had.

It is one thing to bid men arise and walk, to feel simply a sort of good will and kindly purpose toward our fellowmen; it is another thing to reach forth the strong right arm and help to lift a brother who is down. Here was Christianity in purpose and likewise Christianity in action.

The late Tom Hughes, author of the famous book, "Tom Brown at Oxford," was an exponent of what he called "muscular Christianity." It was a Christianity that made much of physical strength and athletics, a sort of pioneering in movements that have become more widely identified with religion today. One need not in any way deprecate the new association of religion and athletics.

More Than Muscles.

But muscular Christianity should go beyond emphasis upon physical health and well-being. True muscular Christianity is the use of strength in spiritual service.

There is nothing particularly Christian in having a strong right arm unless it is used for the accomplishment of Christian purposes. In the purpose to give what one has, however little it may be, and in the accompanying fact that puts one's strength and energy back of one's gift, may be found the secret of wonder-working Christian service.

It is surprising, too, what results are attained from seemingly small gifts when they express the spirit of full consecration. Most of the divine achievements of life have been by men who felt their own weakness, and it is appalling to realize how many men of great faculties and possessions have cursed the world instead of blessing it.

Text: Acts 3:1-10 4:8-10

Now Peter and John went up together into the temple at the hour of prayer, being the ninth hour.

And a certain man, lame from his mother's womb was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful, to ask alms of them that entered into the temple;

Who, seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple, asked an alms.

And he gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something of them.

Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee; In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk.

And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up: and immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength.

And he leaping up stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking and leaping and praising God.

And all the people saw him walking and praising God:

And they knew that it was he which sat for alms at the Beautiful gate of the temple: and they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which

CARS COLLIDE DURING STORM

ONE BADLY DAMAGED.

A bad smash-up occurred on the Lakefield road last night when two cars met in a head-on collision about three miles outside of Lakefield.

Apparently the cars were on the same side of the road, for on approaching the top of the hill, neither driver had the presence of mind to swerve to his right side. One automobile, driven by T. G. Aldrich, had one side completely demolished and the fenders and radiator now lie useless in the Duffus garage.

The rain in all probability made it impossible to see well last night. No persons were injured.

BOOK REVIEW

One of the most tragic and pathetic, and yet grandest, results of the Great War has been the creation of The New Poor. The tragedy has consisted in the reduction of so many of the families which, for centuries, had possessed "the stately homes" of Great Britain to comparative poverty. It has gone even farther than this in that, owing to the war taxation, and the increased cost of living, it has reduced the value of the settled incomes upon which so many people could fairly comfortably live to about half or even less. There are thousands of people in Canada who are examples of this latter fact, but you do not hear them grumble about it. Attention should be drawn to a most beautiful book which clearly shows the reasons for this acceptance of their fate by The New Poor, and their spirit. The story centres about Nicole—which is pronounced Nicolay—the charming and delightful daughter of Lady Jane Rutherford, who with a cousin, Barbara, are forced, owing to the Great War, to give up the stately home of their ancestors for centuries past. The tale is exquisitely told; there are humor and pathos in it, but the latter is never carried to the extreme of harrowing the feelings of the reader. The book opens with the scene of a Mrs. Jackson viewing "Rutherford," with the view of purchasing it, as her husband, a rich Glasgow merchant, had determined to have a country house. This is a wonderfully well-drawn scene, forming the contrast between The New Poor and the New Rich. Lady Jane, who has "lost everything, her husband, her home, her position," receiving with courtesy and kindness the rich and prosperous woman, who has lost no one or nothing from the Great War, and Nicole showing her all over the grand old home. Mrs. Jackson is, however, a good specimen of The New Rich. The reader will get quite fond of her, and the manner in which she assumes the position of mistress of the grand old "Rutherford" will be most thoroughly enjoyed.

The spirit of The New Poor is well portrayed in the saying of Nicole in referring to the fact that the leaving of Rutherford is tragic: "Of course it is, and so tragic that the only thing to do is to try and laugh. Mr. Haynes says we can't afford to live in it, and our lawyer ought to know. It's the Jackson's turn now, and we must go down with the lights up and the flag flying." Thoroughly well does she act in this spirit: she accepts the change and makes the best of the new home found in the little seaside village of Kirkmeikle. She carries her cheery laughter, her sunny, hopeful ways, not only into her new home, but into the life of the village, and works wonder in the latter. She meets all kinds of characters, about which nothing will be said here as it is never fair to spoil the freshness of a reader's enjoyment. Nicole is a beautiful character, one which shows how much any one who tries can bring joy and peace and comfort into the lives of others. What is the secret of this? Lady Jane said to her: "You have the gift of taking things as they come, and finding happiness in little things," and Nicole said of Lady Jane: "You never made a fuss, and I can't imagine a nicer thing to have said about one." But it is very difficult in a short view to say how beautiful this book is; its name is "The Proper Place," the authoress is O. Douglas, and its publishers The Musson Book Company, of Toronto. Be wise, buy it: it is the most beautiful book which has been written for many a long day, and one which will be a constant friend, as you can open it at random at any time and enjoy any part of it over and over again.

In these days, when there have been so many industries shut down in Canada, it is very pleasant to receive a letter from Mr. George H. Doran, the president of the well-known publishing company of that name in New York, in which he says that, as a Canadian, he long had the ambition of establishing his business in Canada, and now has done so at 215 Victoria Street, Toronto. Along with the letter has come the first Canadian catalogue of books published by the company, and it is one of which it can well be proud, and shows that many of the most prominent and popular authors in Great Britain, Canada, and the United States, have their books published by this company. The catalogue has 63 pages and covers the whole field of literature, having splendid books on biography, autobiography, belle lettres, history, poetry, plays, fiction, religion, sociology, recreation, and many other interesting subjects. "Fairy Gold" is one of the company's publications, written by that clever author, Compton Mackenzie. It has been universally praised, and well deserves to be. It takes one into the mystery of Celtic lands, which are not generally known, and a story is weaved about some fairy gold, which is entrancing from the first to the last page. "Marcabrun" is another book of great interest: it is not only a splendid novel, but history as well. Every one knows the romance connected with troubadors, and "Marcabrun" was one of the most prominent. Who does not know and love "Tish?" Her proceedings have won their way into the hearts of nations, and the talented, clever, witty, kindly narrator of them, Mary Roberts Rinehart, has still further endeared "Tish" to the public by her new book, "Tish Plays the Game." What game the reader can be left to find out. In the same book are "The Baby Blimp," "Hijack and the Game," "The Treasure Aunt," and "The Gray Goose," all written in the authoress' inimitable style. It has been remarked in these columns that really humorous books are rare, and it should be added that those who can produce them are public benefactors. Life is often very dull and dreary, and these good people come to brighten it up, to turn our thoughts into more cheerful channels, and make us face life more bravely. Tish is one of these rare good people.

"The Sun in Splendor" is another book published by the George H. Doran Company, whose author is Thomas Burke, whose intimate knowledge of London, and the life that goes on there amongst all the classes which go to make up its huge population, has earned him in certain good quarters the title of the "Modern Dickens." The careers of Christopher and Connie, two children, the product of those most unpromising places, the London slums, are traced in this, and bring out the truth of how the author knows his subject. The characterization is particularly good, and as may be expected bring forth figures which are intensely interesting. There are a great many facts about London which may, or rather must, be new to many readers, such as the sad fate which has befallen Islington High Street. "Young Anarchy" is yet another book of recent publication by this company, and when it is said that its author is Philip Gibbs every one will know that a treat is in store for those who are wise enough to get it. Further mention will be made of this book in another of these book reviews. Thus it will be seen that Canada will become a great gainer by this enterprising and experienced firm establishing itself in Toronto.

As remarked above, humorous books are rare, and this may be due in part to what people consider humor. Donald Ogden Stewart has been described as America's Wag Laureate, but it can be here imagined that the majority of readers will not think his "Mr. and Mrs. Haddock in Paris, France," entitles him to this title. It may be that the sense of humor has altered since the days of Mark Twain, George R. Sims, and others. The two mentioned wrote about foreign countries in a vastly pleasing, humorous way, without for a moment depending upon some of such vulgar scenes as are brought before the reader in this book. Objection will be felt to a little girl of eleven who complains about "the damn fish," and says, "Oh, hell," when it appears necessary to her to do so. It may be that there is some kind of intention of mocking the differences of life and thought between France and the United States, but the book might be said to give some indication of why Americans are, at least reported, not to be liked in France. Carlyle said that humor has justly been regarded as the finest perfection of poetic genius. This quality can scarcely be said to exist in this last book by Mr. Stewart, but perhaps the writer of this criticism does not understand modern humor. The publishers are Harpers and Brothers.

"Know Your Own Country" is a very wise saying, and Messrs. McClelland and Stewart are following out the idea by publishing some books about various aspects of Canada, such as, "Before the White Man Came," "Chez Vous," a fine description of Quebec of a past generation; "Canadian Singers and Their Songs," "Canadian Poets," "Winter Studies and Summer Rambles in Canada," and many others along similar lines. The latest addition to these is "More Famous Canadian Stories," retold for boys and girls, though it may be truthfully said that their seniors could learn much from it. It deals with the Indians of Canada, discoverers and explorers, the early settlements, heroism and adventure, the cities, the builders of Canada, and a vast number of other subjects. It covers a wide range, as, starting with the Indians, it speaks of "Jack Miner and the Birds." There are numerous illustrations which make the book still more interesting. The book is well written, simply and concisely, and in such a way as to make it entertaining while teaching history.

"The Understanding Heart," published by the Copp Clark Company of Toronto, is an addition to the fame of the well-known author, Peter B. Kyne. It is a book containing thrills enough, but none of which are overdrawn. Monica is a fine and unusual character. It deals with the fire fighting in North California, introducing the fire-fighters who include the brave and intrepid Monica. There is a most interesting and unusual love story running through it, while there is the finest description of a man's and his horse's escape from a forest-fire which has probably never been equalled. There is much more than merely forest protection and guarding in the book, such as the endeavoring of certain people to obtain lands by means which go as far as murder. Bob Mason, Uncle Charley, with his pet opinion of himself, and Tony Garland are well-drawn characters, full of life and action. The book is well worth reading as, apart from the story, there is a little philosophizing of an excellent kind which will make the reader think, particularly is this the case regarding the status of women nowadays, to be found on page 228. It is a worthy book from cover to cover.

"Fifty Famous Painters," by Henrietta Gerwig, published by Thomas Y. Crowell Company, New York, consists of brief biographies of some of the most famous artists from Giotto to Sargent, covering the period from 1267 to 1925. It is divided into sections, according to countries, these embracing the following: Italy, Germany, Flanders and Holland, Spain, France, England, and America. One of the most valuable features of the book is the series of "introductions" to the sections on the different countries, which briefly "places" the various artists, and another is the "brief reading list" at the end of the book which clearly indicates to the reader how to proceed to gain further knowledge concerning any artists or any "movement" in which he is particularly interested. Twelve color-plates and numerous other illustrations add much to the interest and value of the book.

Much interest has been and always will be taken in the question as to whether or not George IV. was married to Mrs. Fitzherbert. Authorities differ, and the side that she was has been taken up in the form of a most entrancing novel called "The Prince's Love Affair," by A. H. Bennett, and published by Longmans, Green and Company. Though the subject is an historical one, Mr. Bennett has made it into a charming love story, which every one —and who does not?—who delights in a really good love story should get. Mr. Bennett has evidently studied the subject most thoroughly, and not only this, but the manners and customs of those days which he uses most skilfully in the telling of the story. The reader will become attached to Mrs. Fitzherbert, who is described not only as a beautiful and charming, but a good woman, desirous of making the king one not only in name but in character. The reader may or may not agree with the conclusion arrived, but at all events he will agree that the book is an excellent one.—A. K.

Prominent among the Canadian women who will shortly attend their majesties' court is Miss Evelyn Fleming, daughter of the late R. J. Fleming of Donlands Farm, Todmorden, Ont. Others to receive the honor are: Mrs. Raymond Willis, Toronto; Lady Davis, Montreal; Miss Mary Money, Vancouver; Mrs. Stewart McLennan and Miss Victoria Tytus of Sydney, N.S.; Miss Wila Price and Miss eJan Price of Quebec.

CROWN TO LOSE ADVANTAGE IN ENGLISH LAW

If Committee's Recommendation, After Six Years' Work, Be Adopted.

MANY CLAUSES

Report Proposes That Crown Be Liable, Just Like Subject.

LONDON, May 20 (Canadian Press)—The committee which has for six years delved into the intricate subject of the Crown's position in the courts, has at last produced its long-awaited report. This contains little other than outline of proceedings and a draft Bill. The committee were invited to propose such amendments in the law as they might consider desirable and feasible, and embody them in the Bill.

The committee's recommendations, broadly, according to the "Times," are intended to effect that Crown proceedings in the High Court shall be instituted and conducted in the same way as actions between subjects, and that, with certain limitations, they may be taken in County Courts like actions between subjects in these Courts. The Court is empowered to make such orders as it makes between subjects and to give such appropriate relief as may be required, while a series of elaborate provisions as to parties, appearance, savings and other matters follows. This first part of the Bill sweeps away a whole mass of interesting and historically instructive legal antiquities which occasionally work downright injustice to litigants.

The second part of the Bill makes the Crown liable in tort for the wrongful acts, neglects or defaults of its officers to the same extent to which a private individual is so liable; it makes the law relating to salvage tendered to or by His Majesty's ships or aircraft apply in the same manner as to private ships or aircraft, with the necessary exception of proceedings against the King's ships or aircraft, in rem, and it provides for the extension of this part of the proposed Act to the subjects of foreign States which grant corresponding rights to British subjects against the Governments of such States.

Some of the most important clauses of the Bill are included in the Part III as "supplemental and miscellaneous." The Crown is at last put on the same level with other litigants in the matter of costs, which hitherto it has neither paid nor received, a reform that removes a real and indefensible grievance. The portion of the Bill relating to discovery of documents by the Crown is one of those upon which serious differences of opinion are likely to be entertained Rules of Court, it is proposed, may be made authorizing the Court to require the Crown to deliver to the other party in the proceedings a list of relevant documents "not being documents, the existence of which it would be against the public interest to disclose." Documents which the Crown objects to producing are to be set forth in a schedule to the list, as are documents for which privilege is claimed in litigation between subjects, but the Crown is not to be obliged to produce any documents, nor to answer any interrogatories, where the answer would be injurious to the public interest.

Under an agreement with Primo de Rivera King Alfonso has decided that the heir to the throne shall be his third son, the fourteen-year-old infant Juan Carlos (ABOVE). For reasons of state, the reports say, no announcement will be made until Prince Carlos is 17, at which time his two elder brothers, the Prince of the Asturias and Prince Jaime, will abdicate. The ill-health of the two elder princes is said to be the reason for having them give up their rights to the throne.

Wheat Prices Go Up On Adverse Crop Reports

CHICAGO, May 20. Canadian Press. — Fresh upturns in wheat took place to-day after an irregular start. Increasingly adverse crop reports from the southwest were at hand and further rains likely to delay seeding and planting were noted both in Canada and the corn belt. Opening at ¼ cent off to 3-8c up, wheat later showed gains all around. Corn started unchanged to 7-8c higher and subsequently scored a sharp general advance. Oats were firmer. Provisions tended upgrade.

Opening prices were: Wheat, May, 142 3-8, June 138¼; corn, May unquoted; July 91 7-8; oats, May 49¾, July 50.

New York Market Strong With Many Record Highs

NEW YORK, May 20 (Canadian Press).—Except for a brief flurry of selling the Southwestern railroad shares, the stock market today practically disregarded the Inter-State Commerce Commission's rejection of the Kansas City Southern merger plan and moved into new high ground. Violent advances in the high priced industrials and specialties were again the feature, more than two score issues attaining new peak prices for the year or longer, by early afternoon.

Early losses of three to nearly six and a half points in the rails were largely recovered by mid-day. Meanwhile New York Central, Union Pacific, Rock Island, and Gulf, Mobile, and Northern broke through to new peak prices for the year or longer.

Case Threshing soared nearly 10 points, Commercial Solvents "B" 7, Houston Oil 6, and others four to six points higher.

Many Gains Recorded On Toronto Stock Market

TORONTO, May 20 (Canadian Press).—After a flurry of buying on the Toronto Stock Exchange gains were recorded in many issues. Hiram Walkers, with nearly seven thousand shares dealt in, was up 7-8 at 54⅝. Christie Brown gained three at 61, and Davies A 1½ at 43½. Brazilian gained 2 1-8 at 141 7-8. Of the weaker issues, Seagrams declined 1.4 at 27¼, and Twin City was down 1½ at 48¾.

Mine Trading Is Brisk With Prices Very Steady

TORONTO, May 20 (Canadian Press).—Business was brisk on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day and sales approached the half million mark. Prices were steady, declines and gains being evenly distributed over the list. Among the gains were one of ten cents to 22.70 by Noranda and one of 12 cents to 147 by Amulet. Area was up one at 31½, Argonaut Consolidated gained 1.2 at 54, and Atlas was up 1-8 at six. Duprat recorded a gain of 1½ at 11½ in fairly heavy trading. Kirkland Lake declined one at 134, and Potter Doal was down ½ at 27.

SCHOOL PUPILS

land and A. Mowat. The Primary classes will sing two choruses. The school choir will render "The Maple Leaf" and "O Canada" and a pageant will be one of the outstanding features of the programme.

Queen Mary School

At the Queen Mary school there will be, according to the principal, M. N. Clarke, a patriotic programme furnished by the scholars and an address from Rev. W. McDonald. Dr. J. J. Craig, representing the Board of Education, will preside over the gathering which will be held in the school grounds if the weather is fine and within doors if conditions are unfavorable. "Around this part of the year," said Mr. Clarke, we teach the children some of the facts of Empire and this year we are laying stress on the story of Confederation."

South Central School

As in previous years, the Collegiate pupils in South Central School will fall into line with the Collegiate Institute. For the Primary and Auxiliary classes, Misses V. W. Burgess and C. McConnachie have drawn up a programme of songs and patriotic exercises. In the event of the weather conditions outside being unseasonable, the programme will be carried out within the Primary class room; otherwise the children will be massed outside the school. There will be no speaker at this school, but the teachers have been at some pains to impart some simple knowledge of Confederation to their tiny charges.

Prince of Wales School

Two addresses of Confederation—one from Rev. D. Wren and one from E. B. Fowler—will be given at Prince of Wales school. The gathering will be held in the Kindergarten room, the large doors of which will be opened into the corridor thus permitting the massing of the large number of pupils. The classes of Books 2, 3 and 4 will sing Kipling's "Recessional"; those of Books 3 and 4 will render "The Maple Leaf For Ever" preceded by a short account of the life of the author. Miss Richardson's class will sing a chorus and the programme will be closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

Queen Alexandra School

The programme at Queen Alexandra School will also be opened by the Recessional, which will be sung by the whole school. An acrostic "Canada" will be carried out by seven pupils. "Rule Britannia" and "O Canada" will be included on the programme and an introduction to the former song will be spoken by Hilda Phillips. The Union Jack will be given by the Junior class. Historic Canadians is the title of an item which promises to be interesting. Two boys, Marvin Hamilton and Gideon Dearborn, and two girls, Virginia Deyell and Faith Boorman, will be dressed to represent respectively, General Sir Isaac Brock, Robert Service, Laura Secord, and Pauline Johnson. Lloyd Parnell will be responsible for the introduction to the Maple Leaf. Adrian Macdonald of the Normal School will give an address on Confederation and the Rev. J. E. Todd of George Street United Church will speak on Empire. The National Anthem and "God Save Thee, Canada" will close the programme, after which the school cadets will parade on the grounds.

King George School

Only one speech—from F. D. Kerr, K.C.—will be on the programme at King George School. Mr. Munro, the principal thinks that if the interest and enthusiasm of the pupils is to be maintained the programme must not be unduly lengthened. Here the whole school will sing "The Land of the Maple." "Three Little Sisters" will be rendered by the kindergarten; "The Union Jack" by the Primary and the classes of Book 1 and 2; The "Maple Leaf Forever" by the Junior Third; "Men of the North" by the Senior Third; "Rule Brittania" by members of the Senior Fourth. There will be recitations by Andy Chartren and Don Welsh. "O Canada" will be sung by the entire school, winding up with "God Save the King."

Central School

Central School is handicapped by the lack of a suitable assembly room; consequently the pupils will gather on the afternoon of Empire Day in the Canadian Legion Hall. Mayor Holloway and Rev. J. D. Paterson will be the speakers. There will be choruses; "O Canada" sung by the whole school; "The Union Jack" by the Book 3 and Junior Fourth pupils; "The Land of Freedom" by the Junior school; "The Maple Leaf" by the Senior school; recitations "Canadian Born" by Gladys Watson; "The Union Jack" by Dorothy Boorman; pagents: "Heroes from New France" by pupils from Room 3; "Canada—East and West" and "Saluting the Flag" by pupils from Room Four; and a hymn "O God Our Help in Ages Past" by a choir from Rooms one and two. "God Save the King" will conclude the programme.

CONSUL TELLS ABOUT TREATY

Value of Agreement Which Has Preserved Peace On Border is Stressed.

U. S.-CANADA WEEK.

The Rush-Bagot Treaty and 110 Years of Peace, was the topic on which Emile Sauer, the U. S. Consul in Toronto spoke at the Canadian-American luncheon of the Kiwanis Club in the Empress Hotel to-day.

Prefacing his address with an explanation of the reasons which induced the closing of the American Consulate here, Mr. Sauer said that the removal was in no way intended as an unfriendly act toward the city. Working under a limited appropriation for Consular agencies, he said, the authorities in charge came to the conclusion that the work could be done more efficiently by a smaller number of large centrally located offices than by a greater number of smaller agencies ,and in pursuance of this doctrine the office in this city was one of those which were sacrificed. He assured his hearers that the staff in Toronto was thoroughly attentive to the interests of Peterborough citizens.

Passing to the subject of the day, he said that the famous treaty of 1817 was named after the two representatives who negotiated on behalf of their respective countries—Richard Rush for United States and Sir Charles Bagot for Great Britain. The deliberations were commenced in 1817 ,only three years after the conclusion of the war which had broken out in 1812. One of the most important clauses of the treaty was that which limited the armaments of the Lakes to one war vessel on Lake Ontario ,one on Lake Champlain, and two on the other Great Lakes. The treaty, said the speaker, is also associated with the fact that the frontier has been left unguarded from the point of view of military defence, although military defence was not mentioned in the treaty.

That such a treaty should be arranged by mutual agreement between two nations which had been at war was unprecedented. Victors in a war frequently insisted that the conquered should reduce military preparations. This was done by the victors in the Great War. In such cases it was no uncommon thing for the winners to increase their own war-like preparations, but the Rush-Bagot treaty resulted in both nations leaving their frontiers unprotected. Thus these two English speaking nations set a fitting example worthy of being copied by the other nations of the world. It was a fitting climax to the spirit displayed by the victors at Plattsburg, the last naval engagement of the war. When the defeated officers, in accordance with international custom, proffered their swords to the conquerers, the latter bade them sheath their weapons, "Your gallant behaviour," they said, "marks you as worthy to retain possession of your swords." The wounded on both sides were removed to the same hospitals and were given the same treatment, and the dead were buried with military ceremony in the same cemetery.

The Rush-Bagot treaty was terminable at six months' notice, but it had continued in force to the present day. It had always been observed in spirit although at times it had been subject to considerable strain. One of these occasions had been on the increase of British armaments on the Lakes during the rebellion in Canada. Another was towards the end of the Civil War when a Confederate raid was carried out from Canada into Vermont. After the raid the U. S. government gave notice of termination of the treaty, but before the six months expired the Civil War came to a close and the treaty was preserved intact.

The fact that over a hundred years of peace had elapsed, was by no means an indication that no questions of issue had come up between the two powers. Quite the contrary was true, especially during the earlier half of the nineteenth century. In all countries there was a certain amount of literature published which was apt to cause ill-feeling in international relations. During the time under review there was a considerable amount of bitterness engendered by such literature privately issued. This fact while it made the amicable settlement of differences more difficult of accomplishment, rendered the preservation of peace all the more remarkable.

Canada, said the speaker, had played an important part in the relationships between U. S. and Great Britain. This fact was recognized in the States and Canada's attachment to the Mother Country in no way lessened the friendly relationships. The English-speaking people on both sides of the line had the same language, the same social and political institutions, the same traditions, and the same conceptions of law and justice. The growth and development of the two countries, so far from having aroused feelings of hostility, had only served to increase mutual confidence and respect.

In conclusion, the speaker referred to the institution of the International Boundary Commission, composed of three Americans and three Canadians, as a potent factor in the further preservation of good feeling. It had been described as a miniature Hague tribunal and in the words of a distinguished authority it "Made all outside interference unnecessary and all resort to force inconceivable." Although good relationships had been preserved between Governments, this did not render superfluous the work of the Kiwanis Club in helping to promote a fuller understanding between the two countries.

The thanks of the club were voiced by Kiwanian Walter Kidd. Two fine tenor solos were rendered by C. E. Clark of Peterborough. Guests of the day were A. Neil, Toronto, A. D. Greene, New York, G. W. Gillman, Peterborough, J. Bugguons, Chicago, C. H. Delamater and W. H. White, W. Sangster, T. L. Barns, M. J. Kirn, R. A .Brown J. H. Vernor V. S. Foster, W .Saunders and W. R. Breyfogle, all of Peterborough.

MOVEMENT FLOURISHES.

The Boy Scout movement is becoming a decided feature for the boys of this city. A meeting of the Scout Masters of the city was held the other night to determine the number of Scouts in Peterborough. It was found that the total number of Scouts was seventy-five, with twenty-five Wolf Cubs, or five troops of Scouts, and one pack of Cubs. Part of these are in connection with the different churches to which they attend.

Meetings of each troop are held weekly, at which they carry out the Boy Scout programme, or a programme of "a real boy."

A new troop has recently been organized, sponsored by the Knights of Columbus.

PERMIT RUSH FAILS TO COME

16 ISSUED THURSDAY.

The much anticipated rush for liquor permits did not materialize yesterday when the issuing of the much-heralded documents commenced.

Only sixteen permits for purchases of liquor under Premier Ferguson's new Government Control plan were issued yesterday from the office of Col. F. L. Bradburn in the County Buildings. There was no apparent rush to be the first to take out a permit. The fact that liquor sales will not be made here until next month seems to have tended to dampen the enthusiasm of those bent on being among the first to celebrate under the new liquor legislation.

Col. Bradburn announces that the office will be open to-morrow afternoon for the convenience of those unable to get to the office during week days.

WAS MUSIC TEACHER.

TORONTO, May 20. Canadian Press. — The body of the man that was found yesterday in the St. John River, Jacksonville, Fla., is believed to be that of Paul Wells, a well known musician.

It was stated here to-day that he left Toronto some time ago for the south on account of ill health and that he intended making a trip to Europe subsequently.

For the past twelve years he had been on the staff of the Toronto Conservatory of Music as teacher of the piano.

At 6.15 to-night, in Central Park, the De Laval will play the Seven Oaks in a softball fixture. The latter are a new team which are playing their first scheduled game of the season. The De Laval have been practising for weeks and a good game is expected.

POLICE MATRON TELLS OF WORK WITH CHILDREN

Adjutant Amy Wood Gives Interesting Talk To Council of Women.

MANY CASES DEALT WITH.

Five Hundred Young Offenders Counselled By Chief Out of Court.

The regular monthly meeting of the Local Council of Women was held in the green room of the Y.W.C.A yesterday afternoon, with a good attendance from the affiliated societies. The president, Mrs. C. H. Edwards, occupied the chair. The minutes of the previous meeting were read by Mrs. J. Wearing and the correspondence by Mrs. A. Mowat, who also gave the report of the treasurer.

A review of the agenda of the annual meeting of the Provincial Council of Women, which will be held in Toronto on June 3rd, was given by Mrs. Mowat, including resolutions of interest to various Local Councils, with regard to many things, among them a resolution protesting against the continuance of beauty contests, a recommendation supporting the claims of the British Legion with regard to more favorable pensions, and which was referred to the convenor of Soldiers' Pensions and Dependents, Mrs. W. R. Morris, a consideration of the laws regarding cruelty, with special significance to the relations between a husband and wife, and a recommendation that they be brought into line with modern ideas; also a motion regarding the proper methods of showing respect to cenotaphs and war memorials. This last motion brought the information that the Toronto Local Council of Women requested its members to salute the cenotaphs and war memorials as they passed. It was suggested that the laying of flowers on the local cenotaph on stated occasions might be considered a form of respect that would be suitable. Three special occasions: the annual church parade of returned men; the decoration day at the Cemetery, and Armistice Day, were spoken of as worthy of special note, and The Examiner will be requested to co-operate with the Local Council in drawing attention to these dates, so that citizens may respond with floral tributes for the cenotaph.

Financial Statement

Gross receipts from the "Faust" picture shown at the Regent Theatre recently, for which the Local Council sold tickets, were recorded as being $269.20. The theatre received $140, and $16.80 for amusement tax, leaving a net balance of $112.40 from the picture venture. A previous balance of $71.01 and fees of $46 left a bank balance at present of $229.41 to the credit of the Local Council of Women.

The application of St. James' Ladies' Aid Society for affiliation with the Local Council was received and accepted.

Mrs. Wearing read the minutes of an executive meeting which considered the Pageant project of the Local Council in connection with the First of July celebration, and reported the efforts being made in Toronto at present by Mrs. Arthur Stevenson, joint convenor with Dr. J. J. Craig, to secure the services of a pageant master, with special consideration, if possible, to a Canadian rather than an American firm.

Police Matron's Talk.

Police Matron Amy Wood of the Salvation Army, attended the meeting and gave the members an insight into the work done by herself and Chief of Police Newhall, in connection with juvenile offenders against the law. She said that the absence of a Juvenile Court in the city threw a greater responsibility on those entrusted with looking after the morals of youthful offenders, and spoke of the care and consideration given to such cases by the Chief, who proferred good advice and help to juveniles passing through his hands, rather than through the police court. Five hundred children were taken care of by the Chief in this way during the year, while she had looked after nearly one hundred and fifty cases, and had made three hundred and fifty visits to homes during the same period. There were only nine cases in this number that were brought into the police court, while three were placed on proba-

An appeal for sympathetic comprehension of some of the circumstances which led to juvenile and feminine delinquency was made by the speaker, who referred to the constant need of charity and Love in such dealings, rather than an attitude of superiority. A comprehension also of the low type of mental calibre and of indifferent home surroundings was necessary in many instances, and a realization of the fact that many possessing the largest families have the least money to support them with.

The preponderance of venereal disease in many cases made it necessary and wise to have sufferers sent away until they were in a state that would allow them to mingle once more with clean people, and Miss Wood went on to speak of the lack of control of their children manifested by so many parents, who are compelled to seek the aid of outsiders in managing their own children. The danger of influence from bad companions was emphasized.

Dancing a Curse.

"I believe that public dances are a great curse to many of these girls. They go out to these dances, and meet strange young men who cause their downfall. They exhibit very little self control, and seem to be ready to give themselves for little or nothing. Or they will meet a young man, and, knowing nothing about him, go off and get married at once."

"Immorality is rampant in this city among a certain class. There is a great deal of wickedness in Peterborough. But sometimes we have to watch and wait for a very long time before we can do anything to remedy conditions."

At the conclusion of the address, Mrs. Edwards expressed appreciation of Miss Wood's talk, and promised the co-operation of the Local Council in the endeavors of the Police Matron and the Chief.

Mrs. Edwards then went on to refer to the problem of the mentally deficient, which is assuming alarming proportions in many sections, and to the report of a noted American psychiatrist recently engaged to make a survey of Ontario, under governmental orders. His recommendations included the enlargement of the Woodstock Institution for epileptics and the removal there from Orillia of about one hundred patients —also the appointment at Orillia of a medical man and a woman physician. Mrs. Edwards also gave a very concise and comprehensive outline of the addresses given at the recent executive meeting in Ottawa.

Jury Refuses to Indict Haddon Gray; No Perjury in Efforts to Aid Slayer

NEW YORK, May 20.—The Queen's County Grand Jury refused yesterday to return a perjury indictment against Haddon Gray of Syracuse, whom Henry Judd Gray used in an attempt to frame an alibi to cover his part in the murder of Albert Snyder, for which Judd Gray and Mrs. Snyder have been convicted.

The evidence was presented to the Grand Jury by Chief Assistant District Attorney James A. Dayton, who asked the indictment on the ground that the evidence given by Haddon Gray before the Grand Jury prior to the indictment of Judd Gray was at variance with the testimony he gave later at the trial. It was understood that the Grand Jurors held Haddon Gray did not intend to deceive the authorities and that whatever discrepancies occurred in his testimony were due to a natural eagerness to aid his friend.

Mr. Dayton said his apparance before the Grand Jury was merely "a necessary gesture to clear up the last remaining loose ends of the Snyder murder case."

OSSINING, N.Y., May 20.—Warden Lawes of Sing Sing Prison said yesterday that Mrs. Snyder and Judd Gray had adapted themselves to the prison routine in the death house and that they were the "most orderly and unperturbed" prisoners there.

Mrs. Snyder will not be allowed any hair tonic or hair dye, and prison officials believe that lack of these may cause her pronounced blonde hair to become somewhat darker in hue. Warden Lawes said he had not yet determined whether to allow the prison barber to cut the woman's bobbed hair.

Horsley plane and hope to cover the distance of about 4,000 miles in 48 hours.

Plane Goes North

HALIFAX, Mass., May 20 (Canadian Press).—Flying low and seemingly but a few feet above the tops of the trees, an aeroplane was sighted here this morning about 9.40. Dozens of people in this town saw it, headed northwest toward Hanson and Pembroke. They reported seeing the insignia NX 211, the number of Captain Lindbergh's plane.

WELL UP TO SCHEDULE.

HALIFAX, May 20. — Canadian Press. — Captain Charles Lindbergh has progressed satisfactorily in his non-stop flight from New York to Paris so far as last reports, at two p.m., eastern daylight saving time, showed

The liners "Melita" and "Doric" at sea, reported the flier in longitudes indicating he was crossing the Atlantic on schedule.

The flier who started in the grey monoplane, "Spirit of St. Louis," at 7.52 eastern daylight saving time, flew over Nova Scotia at 12.25 eastern daylight saving time.

The weather in this region was clear.

In 1920 the area sown to alfalfa in Canada was 238,000 acres. Six years later it was 858,000 acres. At the beginning of this period Canada imported 15,000 bushels of alfalfa seed per year but by 1926 this trade movement was changed into an export of 60,000 bushels.

MARINES READY TO STOP THEFT FROM HOUSES

Hankow Seething With Excitement as Anti-Radical Forces Approach.

CAPTURE THREATENED.

General Hsia Deserts Chen, Returning To Alliance With Chiang.

LONDON, May 20.—(United Press.)—British and American marines are in readiness to dash ashore at Hankow and prevent plundering by Chinese bands of British and American property, according to a radio despatch to the Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Express.

Hankow, scene of the first anti-foreign outbreak, is once more seething with excited crowds as the city's fall to the anti-radical armies is expected within forty-eight hours. It is reported that General Hsia Touyin, former ally of General Chaing Kai-Shek has come back into Chiang's fold after having renounced him in favour of Eugene Chen, Nationalist foreign minister at Hankow.

General Hsia has thrown his army about the city and threatens to recapture it. A desperate conflict between the forces of Chiang and Chen seems inevitable.

The Japanese ships anchored at Hankow have landed a number of heavy calibre field gun and the Japanese supplies of arms and ammunition ashore have been increased.

Japanese officers in charge at Hankow feel that their troops may be forced to bear the brunt of any attacks which are made.

All foreigners except the Japanese, who are protected by 1,500 marines, have abandoned the house to which they returned when the Hankow situation became easier several weeks ago.

ST. ANDREW'S WIN FROM OUTLAWS

Come From Behind To Victory With Three Runs in Ninth.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 20 — St. Andrew's defeated the Outlaws 13 to 12 in an Association Softball fixture at the Agricultural grounds last night. The Saints played sparkling ball behind good pitching by Irwin up to the sixth when the Outlaws launched a vicious attack, slamming his offerings to all corners of the lot for four runs and continuing the assault in the seventh for five more. The Saints also delivered three of their four errors in these two innings and that aided the Outlaws in their run scoring bee.

The Outlaws were none too steady in the field, some of their errors being on easy chances. Coulter pitched the first five innings and with airtight support would not have been scored on so often. Christie took up the pitching duties in the sixth and had the Saints baffled with his delivery but two errors and a walk scored one run. Only seven men faced him in the next two innings but in the ninth he developed a wild streak and two walks, two hits and an error put across three runs before a man was out. There was more excitement than at any game yet and the crowds are increasing with each game.

Good maps play an important part in assisting tourists and other to enjoy the beauty and grandeur of the scenery in our national parks. Recognizing this fact the Topographical Survey Department of the Interior has recently published a map of Kootenay Park in British Columbia through which park the Banff-Windermere automobile road passes. A new edition of Waterton Lakes Park map has also been printed as the first issue had become exhausted.

According to the Geographic Board of Canada, Grant Pass, across the divide which forms the British Columbia-Alberta boundary, and Grant Brook in the Cariboo district, were so named after the late Principal George M. Grant, D.D., of Queen's University. Dr. Grant was deeply interested in the possibilities of the West, and was one of the earliest pioneers to cross the Rockies. As the author of "Ocean to Ocean" he did much to make that wonderful country known.

Leafs Lose the Third Game of Series to Buffalo

BISONS GAIN EARLY LEAD

Make Three Straight Over Toronto Leafs by Score 6-3.

PASS ROCHESTER

NEW YORK, May 20 (Canadian Press)—A five run rally in the sixth inning gave the Stars their third straight victory over Rochester's Tribesmen at Syracuse yesterday. The visitors made only three hits but Hallahan's wildness and poor support in the first three innings combined with Johnny Jones' home run helped the Tribe to score four runs. Prudhomme walked two in the sixth. Then Williamson tripled, Selph doubled and Peel hit a homer to bag a 7 to 4 decision.

Rake Former Mate

Raking the delivery of Joe Maley, another former team mate, for eight hits and six runs in the three innings he worked on the mound, the Bisons made it three straight over the Toronto Maple Leafs at Buffalo by a score of 6 to 3. Nounan, who succeeded Maley, gave a sterling mound performance and limited the hard-hitting Bisons to one hit in five rounds. The victory allowed the Bisons to pass the Rochester team for third place.

Baltimore won both games of yesterday's doubleheader, 6 to 11, and 2 to 1, giving the Reading Keyes their twenty-first consecutive deefat. The first game was remarkable only because it was played in 1:20. The second game was won in the seventh when Porter's single scored Maisel.

MENIE TEAM LOSE SOFTBALL OPENER

Both Pitchers Lack Control in 19-17 Victory for Hoard's.

BURNBRAE, May 20. — The local softball season opened on Wednesday evening with the Menie team playing at Hoard's. After leading by a good margin all the way through, the local team blew up in the final inning and Hoard's won by 19 runs to 17. Both pitchers lacked control but Eagleson succeeded in keeping the enemy well in check until the final spasm, when his support wobbled and Hoard's shoved thirten counters over the plate.

The Menie heavy batters hammered Hoard's offerings consistently but the combination of veterans and youngsters in the Hoard's field played snappy ball and turned aside many a threat. With a little more experience the local team should make a strong bid for the honors before the season ends. Hoard's play a return game here on Friday, the 27th.

Menie: Eagleson p S. Little c; Shillinglaw 1b; L. Little 2b; J. Rannie 3b; Linn ss; E. Whitton lf; Petherick cf; F Little rf; C. Hay and B. Hobbs, subs.

Umpires: Rev. Daniel and Wellman.

SENATORS WIN FROM TIGERS

Former Detroit Player Responsible for Tallies in 3-0 Victory.

HOMER FOR GEHRIG

NEW YORK, May 20 (Canadian Press)—New York won the first game of the series from the Indians at Cleveland yesterday 4 to 3. Relief Pitcher Moore winning his own game by working a squeeze play in the ninth inning, scoring Dugan from third base with a well placed sacrifice hit to Burns. Shocker was driven from the box in the second inning after Cleevland had tied the score. Gehrig hit his ninth home run of the season in the first inning with one on base.

Hollis Thurston pitched Washington to a 3 to 0 victory over the Tigers at Detroit. Because he was effective with men on bases, Thurston became the first pitcher to shut out the Tigers this season. Topper Rigney, a former Tiger, now playing shortstop for the Senators, drove in two of the Washington runs and scored the other himself.

Athletics Defeat

Tommy Thomas registered his sixth victory of the season yesterday when he bested Lefty Grove, Connie Mack's star southpaw, in a pitching duel, which the White Sox won from the Athletics at Chicago, 3 to 0. Thomas allowed only five hits. Ty Cobb, in hitting safely on his first trip to the plate, ran his string of consecutive games in which he has made one or more hits to nineteen.

Ken Williams' home run in the tenth gave the Browns a victory over the Boston Red Sox at St. Louis 6 to 5, and the Browns went into a tie with Philadelphia for third place. It was the fifth Brown victory in six games. Wingard held the visitors to three hits until after two outs in the ninth. Then the Sox drove in four runs. Melillo's double in the last half of the ninth scored O'Rourke with the tying run. "Bing" Miller, who average .446, went hitless in four yesterday boosted his season batting

HEAVY BATTLE IS POSTPONED

Proverbial "Weather Luck" Deserts Tex Rickard in Maloney-Sharkey Bout.

SET FOR TONIGHT

NEW YORK, May 20 (Canadian Press)—For the second time in twenty years of fight promoting, the proverbial "weather luck" that had followed the trail of Tex Rickard deserted him yesterday.

A steady, driving rain, setting in early in the day, forced the promoter to postpone until tonight the All-Boston heavyweight elimination "semi-final" between Jimmy Maloney and Jack Sharkey at the Yankee stadium. Outcome of the 15 round fray will determine an opponent for Jack Dempsey in the former heavyweight champion's scheduled comeback here in August.

Postponement of the match, generally disagreeable to the fighters themselves, held out for Rickard the prospect of an even larger gate than he had expected. With another day added for advance seat sale, already at the $175,000 mark, Rickard anticipated that the total receipts would exceed his original estimate of $500,000. Of that amount the fighters will share approximately $150,000.

The delay struck hardest of all at the physical conditions of Maloney and Sharkey, primed to peak trim for the crucial attle of their careers. Sharkey was caught in the midst of a "drying ouut" session, designed to put his weight down from 192 to 188 pounds and increase his speed, while leaving him on fighting edge.

Maloney was expected to add a notch or two to the 204 pounds he intended to carry into the ring last night.

The odds are even money.

ACADIANS TO PLAY PETES ON THE HOLIDAY

Fast Toronto Senior Crew Here Victoria Day Morning.

ARE GOING STRONG.

Visitors Include Some of Best Known Queen City Players.

Peterborough ball fans have received the announcement of the visit here on Victoria Day of the fast Acadian team of Toronto, who are to meet the Petes in a holiday morning fixture at Riverside Park. The Acadians are going great guns in their league and their line-up includes some of the best-known Toronto ball tossers. For all that, Manager Swanston's crew, who will practice tomorrow at Riverside Park, by the way, are hopeful of tossing the visitors for a loss. It is likely that all three local pitchers, Heckman, Hardill and Osterland, will be given a chance to show their wares against the Acadians. The game will get under way at 10.15 o'clock. There will be several changes in the Peterborough line-up from last season. Fred Ash replacing Hap Harrison at first base, while Charlie Ansaldo will be at shortstop.

4TH BATTERY WINS EASILY

FINAL SCORE 15 TO 4.

Taking the lead in the first innings, the 4th Battery boys gunned their way to a 15 to 4 victory over the Peterborough Canoe team in a league softball game last night. The Canoes were sunk with all on board early in the game and in only two innings did they give any signs of coming up. In four innings not a man reached first base.

The Artillerymen got runners on in all but one of their eight innings and scored in five of the eight, closing with a four in the final frame.

WATCH THE KIDNEYS

Fatigue and that tired feeling is the result of poison in the blood. When the kidneys fail to remove this poison from the system it leads to backache, rheumatic pains and sometimes to that fatal ailment known as Bright's disease. When this condition exists, don't delay, go to your druggist and get a box of Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills and they will quickly correct the cause of your trouble.

Mr. Arthur Pinch of Smith Township states that Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills give him more speedy relief than any other preparation that he had tried.

MAKE EFFORT TO HAVE EGAN ATTEND PROBE

Man Mentioned By Witnesses as Collecting Thousands Being Sought.

COMMISSION IN SESSION.

H. F. Kuntz Fails To Appear at the Hearing in Toronto.

TORONTO, May 20 (Canadian Press).—An effort to obtain evidence from W. M. Egan, former Windsor lawyer, will be made by the Royal Customs Commission. Mr. Egan, mentioned repeatedly as the man who made demands on Ontario brewers and distillers, obtaining thousands of dollars from them, has thus far not appeared to tell his story. The Commission will ask his former partner in Windsor to try and get in touch with Egan. The evidence is that Egan was campaign manager for A. F. Healy, former Liberal member for North Essex. Mr. Healy and John O'Gorman of Toronto, both connected with the alleged collections, have denied before the Commission any attempt to collect money from brewers.

One of the features today was the failure of H. F. Kuntz, managing director of the Kuntz Brewing Company, to appear and give evidence Chief Commissioner Brown said he thought the Commission could find some way to "make this brewery suffer."

Further evidence today was heard about camouflaging cars of beer which went to the United States Some of these cars were found to contain Kuntz beer but the Kuntz Brewery did not appear as the shipper. Evidence was that the beer was shipped by people who bought from the brewery.

First Tulip Appears in Victoria Park Beds

The first of the tulips planted in the flower bed of Victoria Park, has made its bow to outside world. A large number of tulips are planted in the beds there and the adventurous yellow bud looked rather lonely in its solitary glory among the innumerable others which were modestly enclosed in their floral envelopes. Tulips of various hues are planted in Victoria Park and a riot of color may be looked for in the next few days.

MARMORA TO SEND PETITION ASKING FOR BEST OFFICERS TO PROBE SLAYING OF KEENE

Unsolved Mystery Stirs People To Definite Action in Case.

STORIES RESENTED.

Provincial Member May Request Advertising of Reward By Government.

(By Examiner Staff Correspondent)

After three months of investigation by Provincial Police and O.T.A. Inspectors, the cold-blooded, fiendish slaying of Jerome Keene gives every appearance of being added to the already none to short roll of utterly inexplicable murders in Hastings county.

In the village of Marmora and throughout the district people are expressing themselves in no uncertain terms regarding what they believe to be a cold indifference on the part of those entrusted with the enforcement of law to properly safeguard human life. So strong is this feeling that a petition is being prepared to be forwarded to Attorney-General Price, asking that the very best investigators obtainable be employed to hunt down the fiend in human form who put to death Jerome Keene. This petition will be signed by every man and woman with, perhaps, one—or probably two exceptitons, in Marmora village and district. Citizens resent the idea, being broadcasted, that it is always open season for murder in Hastings county.

Just three months ago Jerome Keene, age 64, a life-long resident of Hastings county, industrious, and of a kindly disposition, was found lying in his bed in his 11 x 11 shack, with part of his forehead blown off, and also part of the jaw and mouth. The ceiling and south wall of the shack were smeared with his blood, and the bed pillow and bedding drenched therein—leaving it beyond a shadow of doubt that the crime was committeed in the shack. The shack occupies a commanding position at the intersection of Shanick and Cordova roads, one mile north of Marmora. Being built on a knoll it is thrown into full view of five of the surrounding homes, three of which are within calling distance. Smoke from the little metal pipe projecting from the roof of the shack would be discernable to travellers on both roads as well as to the surrounding homes. At night a light in the window could only be seen by those travelling north and by the occupants of two of the surrounding houses.

Notwithstanding the verdict brought in by the jury at the inquest into the death of Jerome Keene, the people living on the Shanick road, and the murdered man's nearest neighbors, in particular are convinced that Jerome Keene did not occupy his shack—as a living man—subsequent to November the 18th, three months prior to the finding of his mutiliated body, and a little more than one month prior to the time fixed by the jury which made him legally dead. The supposition is that Jerome Keene was living in or near the village without visiting the Shanick road district, and that on or about the 18th day of January he was given a powerful drug, taken to his home, put to bed and then shot by some inhuman monster, male or female. There is little doubt existing in the minds of the citizens of Marmora but that the party who placed the poisonous liquor on the table in Jerome Keene's shack, and which at the time nearly cost him his life, is the same party (or an accomplice) who pulled the gun that sent Jerome Keene into eternity.

Perjury Hinted.

It is generally felt that much more could have been brought out at the inquest and that a charge of perjury should have been laid against one of the witnesses and the witness placed under arrest. But the evidence that was produced seems more than sufficient to warrant greater progress along the line of investigation than has, so far as the public has any knowledge, been made. One arrest, or examination, of a man seen carrying a gun along the road, and who proved a perfect alibi, is the sum total so far as the public is informed.

The story of this latest hideous challenging of one's right to live in what is a Christian community is, perhaps, best told by a resume of the evidence taken at the inquest and published in The Examiner at that time. O.T.A. Inspector Nugent told of seeing the body lying on the bed with part of the forehead blown off and also part of the jaw and mouth. The wounds, said the inspector, were evidently caused by the discharge of a shot gun which had been fired twice. He placed on exhibit photographs showing the body lying on the bed, with the upper part of the face and the jaw shot

British Fliers Carry 1,100 Gallons of Gas

LONDON, May 21. Canadian Press. — The aeroplane being used by Flight Lieutenants C. R. Carr and L. S. M. Gillman, of the Royal Air Force, who left here yesterday morning on an attempted non-stop flight to Calcutta, India, carries 1100 gallons of gasoline, which is stated to be the heaviest load of fuel ever carried by an aeroplane.

The pilots are carrying hard-boiled eggs, cold beef, raisins, biscuits, apples, pear drops, water and vacuum flasks of tea and coffee. It is considered that this will be ample to last them for the 50 hours their flight is expected to last.

Their machine is fitted with a cot in which they will take turns sleeping.

JUDGE HUYCKE GIVES ADDRESS

President of Ontario Judges Addresses Colleagues on Common Law.

SPLENDID LECTURE.

His Honor Judge E. C. S. Huycke, of this city, delivered an address on "The Origin of Common Law," at the annual meeting of the Ontario County Judges' Association, of which he is president. The meeting was held in the Queen's Hotel, Toronto, and the judges present listened with great interest to the instructive and carefully prepared address, which follows:

Looking Backward.

To many of us the question daily arises—"What is the law?"—pertinent to the matter in hand, and, secondly, "Where is the law" to be found? These questions can usually be answered by use of a fair combination of intelligence and industry. Other questions, however, less insistent, but not less patent or interesting, receive less attention and are not so easily answered.

"Why is it the law?" "Whence came it?" "How came it and through whom to us?" "What is its origin and history?" "What is its nationality?" These problems are more difficult of solution and to a degree enwrapped in uncertainty and confusion.

As is well known the basis of our law is what is known as the English Common Law, the 'lex non scripta' as distinguished from the 'lex scripta' or Statute law. The Statute law is in many cases simply declaratory of the Common Law, or a codification of it: In other cases it changes or amends the 'lex non scripta' and the amendment of course obtains. The original Common law (as is well known) was but a collection of customs made and maintained by the people, recognized as being fair and equitable, and uniformly agreed upon as a basis of the rules of conduct. These customs in the first place were not written for the simple reason that writing was practically unknown to the people, and were made, maintained, and transmitted solely by memory of man and verbal teaching. The custom to be binding or recognized must have gone back so far that "the memory of man runneth not to the "contrary"; this immemorial usage gave them universal reception and recognition by the populace. These customs were handed down by tradition, communicated from father to son throughout the generations.

In addition there were the English lawmen, wise or learned men who made it their business to be informed as to these customs and advised the people as to their rights, duties, and liabilities. It is evident there was not and could not be any definite fixed period as the beginning and foundation of the system. It has been variously fixed at the reigns Of Richard I., of Henry II., and Henry I., but it is manifest that what customs existed at any of these periods must have taken centuries prior thereto as their formative period.

The Common Law system now prevails generally wherever the English tongue is spoken and regulates the conduct and destiny of nearly the half of humanity. It has been and is wondrously successful and yet cannot be said to be either logical or philosophic. In this respect it is in marked contrast to the Civil law, dominating nearly all Europe, which is practically the old Roman law as codified at Constantinople by the Emperor Justinian and his very distinguished legal philosopher, Tribonian, who reduced a chaotic mass to a logical system containing the essence of all anterior Roman law. Our Common law, on the other hand, has never been codified, perhaps could not nor cannot be, but these old customs were handed down through the generations until letters came in vogue, when judicial deliverances, validating and interpreting them, were written, and precedents followed up to the present.

The result is that our system, or lack thereof, has been well described by Tennyson as—

"The lawless science of our law

Boys and Girls Sold By Auction In China

By NEA Service.

PEKING China, May 21. — Boys and girls are being put on the auction block in China by fathers and kidnappers.

Though chattel slavery supposedly no longer exists, there is a heavy traffic in human beings since no Chinese will, if he can help it, let his line die out. If he has no children, or if he has only daughters he will buy a boy, legally adopt him, and so provide someone to worship at the family altar. There is the same sort of traffic in marriageable girls.

DISCUSS PLANS OF DECORATION

Other Committees Report at Meeting of Jubilee Executive.

ARCHES TO BE BUILT.

Committee reports were read last night at the meeting of the Executive of the Central Committee of the Jubilee Celebrations held in the Council Chambers, Dr. J. J. Craig presiding in the absence of Mayor Holloway.

The Committee on Decorations reported through Paul Manning, who outlined the plans under consideration. These include the decoration of the poles on both sides of George Street from Smith Street to the Exhibition Grounds. It was also suggested that lamps be hung over the same portions of George Street. Speaking on behalf of the Engineers' Club, Mr. Manning also laid before the committee some plans for the erection of an arch across George Street a few yards south of the Y. M. C. A. building. The arch, which is to be 30 or 35 feet high, will be a miniature reproduction of Quebec Bridge and will be put together in sections and brought to the site some days before the celebrations begin. It is intended to base the towers in large boxes filled with sand. The whole erection will be ornamented by appropriate emblems. The report was approved by the meeting.

ARE SKEPTICAL.

French Experts Doubt That American Flier Can Reach Paris.

PARIS, May 21. United Press. — French aviation experts were skeptical yesterday of Charles Lindbergh's chances to fly alone from New York to Paris. The French fliers praised the lone American's bravery, but they said it would be almost a miracle if one man flew a plane for from 32 to 40 hours unaided. Such a trip they said, almost was beyond human powers.

Nevertheless, Frenchmen and Americans prepared yesterday to welcome Lindbergh and his monoplane.

The grapefruit probably was not used in Europe before its introduction to America by Captain Stattuck, who is said to have brought it from the far east.

NO HOME BREW MAY BE KEPT IN PRIVATE HOUSE IS RULE OF NEW LAW SAYS MR. GORDON

Dominion Revenue Act Permits Brewing in Homes With Notice.

PENALTY $100.

Provincial Regulation Says Liquor Must Be From Government Vendor.

The Examiner, in discussing with the Honorable G. N. Gordon the effect of the new Government Control Bill, received from Mr. Gordon the opinion that it is unlawful for a citizen to keep home brew in his home under the Liquor Control Act, Sections 72 (2) which reads thus:

"No person shall, except with the permission of the Board, obtained within three months from the date upon which this Act comes into force, have or keep any liquor, other than native wine, within the Province which has not been purchased from a Government vendor or from a physician, as provided by Section 56."

The interpretation of liquor is as follows:

"'Liquor' shall mean and include any alcohol, alcoholic, spirituous, vinous, fermented malt or other intoxicating liquor or combination of liquors and mixed liquor a part of which is spirituous, vinous, fermented or otherwise intoxicating and all drinks or drinkable liquids and all preparations or mixtures capable of human consumption which are intoxicating, and any liquor which contains more than two and one-half per centum by volume at sixty degrees Fahrenheit of absolute alcohol shall conclusively be deemed to be intoxicating; the term Liquor' shall include beer but shall not include light beer."

The Inland Revenue Act, which is a Dominion law, permits beer to be brewed by the householder for his own and his family's use and the law reads as follows:

"Utensils used by any person solely for the purpose of brewing beer for the use of himself and his family, and not for sale, are exempt from the provisions of this Act, provided due notice of the possession thereof and of his intention of using them for the above-mentioned purpose is given to the nearest collector or to the Department at Ottawa; and beer so brewed shall not be liable to any duty under this Act, nor shall any license be required by any person so brewing for his own and his family's use."

Mr. Gordon said that while the Inland Revenue Act permits home brew, the Ontario Liquor Control Act provides no liquor other than native wine is to be kept by any person unless it has been purchased from an Ontario liquor vendor, appointed by the Liquor Control Board. That would mean that no home brew could be kept by any person in his house, and if found guilty of this infraction of the Government Control Act, he would be liable for the first offence to a fine not less than $100 and not more than $1,000, and the second offence or subsequent offence imprisonment in jail.

In view of the fact that there are many hundreds of notices filed in the Customs House of Peterborough, the Liquor Control Act must affect a good many persons who have been quietly making home brew for their own use.

Sheep-Headed Dragon Haunts Okanagan Lake

By NEA Service.

VERNON, British Columbia, May 21.—The strange monster which inhabits the Okanagan Lake, and which has been reported several times, race a motor car along the lake shore road recently. J. L. Logie, manager of a local land company, who drove the car, describes the monster as having a head like a sheep and dark colored body, about 15 feet long.

Three other persons in the car with Logie said the monster raised a swell about a foot high and made the spray fly ahead of it as it cut through the water at approximately the same speed as the auto.

FEE FOR SEWER SERVICE FIXED

Monaghan Citizens Will Pay $20 For Each Connection.

AGREEMENT TO BE MADE.

Monaghan citizens wishing to connect with Peterborough's sewage system, or who are already connected, will pay $25 a year from now on for that privilege. The price quoted by the Board of Works last night was $25, but the deputation from the township, headed by Reeve Lillico, offered $20. Ald. J. O. Fife, chairman of the Board, explained to them that he thought the figure reasonable, but on re-consideration of the costs to the average Peterborough householder, it was decided that $20 would cover maintenance, etc., with a slight margin. Those desiring sewer connections must, of course, build their own connections to the nearest part of the city's system. A point raised by Township Clerk Bruce Johnston in the debate was that the city had to maintain the plant anyway, and the fees collected would be almost found money.

An agreement between the two municipalities will be drawn and ratified. The township will collect from its ratepayers and pay the city.

While discussing the matter, Reeve Lillico asked if the sewage disposal plant is running properly, claiming that it was emitting noisome odors.

City Engineer Parsons said that the plant will run properly once there is a spell of hot weather long enough for the bacteria to begin growing.

Steps will be taken to get permission from the Government to use the site purchased for a new post office for a parking place. This land, at the corner of George and Sherbrooke Streets, would be very suitable for the purpose.

The chairman of the Property Committee, Ald. Hancock, was authorized to get the smokestack at the incinerator painted.

Flier Crosses Atlantic Today In Non-Stop Monoplane Flight; Started at New York Yesterday

PARIS REJOICES AT LINDBERGH'S GREAT VICTORY WHILE SORROWING IN LOSS OF FRENCH AVIATORS

Planes From Paris Attempt To Photograph Flier As He Passes Cherbourg—Many Wait at Landing Field All Afternoon—Weather Conditions Good.

Le Bourget Flying Field, Paris, May 21, — Captain Charles Lindbergh, in the "Spirit of St. Louis," landed here safely at about 10.15 to-day, French time, completing the non-stop trans-Atlantic flight. He was in the air 33 hours, and covered a distance of about 3,000 miles.

Enthusiastic crowds greeted him, and he was warmly welcomed by airmen and prominent Paris citizens.

(Special to The Examiner).

TORONTO, May 21.—Escorted by a squadron of British fliers, according to report, Captain Charles A. Lindbergh intrepid cross Atlantic airman was finishing the last leg of his history-making flight from New York to Paris just after 12 o'clock noon, Toronto time, to-day. Another two and a half hours would bring him to France, so that he was due to arrive at the end of his journey by three o'clock this afternoon.

It was 6.15 eastern standard time when "Lucky" Lindbergh left the coast of Newfoundland behind last night. All through the night and this forenoon, a world has waited anxiously for word of him.

Alone, without radio or other communication, and without a companion, he rushed along the 1,900-mile route across the blank desolation of the Atlantic which would be either his grave or his brilliant path to fame and fortune.

From New York to Paris is 2,81 miles. "Slim," as Lindbergh is known to his pals, was expected to complete his death-defying race against space and time and gas supply and little sleepiness before sundown to-night if he could manage to remain awake at the wheel and "stick" to the end of the forty odd hours of his 150-mile an hour speed.

Lindbergh Is Second.

Lindbergh is the second to complete a non-stop flight from the continent to the other side of the Atlantic. He is the eighth airman to navigate the Atlantic by plane, and in addition his flight has added about 400 miles to the world's non-stop air flight records.

Others who crossed the Atlantic by plane were:

May 31, 1919—United States Navy seaplane, N.C.4, piloted by Commander A. C. Read, made the first crossing from Rockaway, N.Y., to Plymouth, England, via Nova Scotia, the Azores and Portugal.

June 15-16, 1919—First non-stop crossing by Capt. John Alcock and Lieut. A. W. Brown, 1,960 miles, from Newfoundland to Clifden, Ireland.

March 30-June 1, 1922—Captain Socada and Continho flew from Lisbon to Brazil.

August, 1924—Two United States Army world flight planes crossed from Europe via Iceland and Greenland. The longest hop was 824 miles.

January 22-31, 1926—Commander Ramon Franco and three companions flew from Palos, Spain, to Brazil. Total flight, 6,230 miles, longest hop 1,432 miles, from Cape Verde Island to Fernando De Noronha.

February 22, 1927—Commander D. Pinedo of Italy, in connection with his four-continent flight, flew from Cape Verde Islands to the mainland of Brazil, 1,711 miles.

March 17, 1927—Major Sarmento Beires flew from Basiago Archipelago, Portuguese Guinea, to Fernando De Noronha, a distance of 1,40 miles.

In addition, airships have crossed three times.

July, 1919—The British airship R-3 flew from Scotland to New York and from New York to Pulham, England.

October 12-15, 1924—The Zeppelin ZR-3, now the Los Angeles, was flown from Friedrichschafen, Germany, to Lakehurst, N.J.

Landing Field Crowded.

Le Bourget Field in Paris, Lindbergh's destination, was crowded hours before the time of his expected arrival. People thronged over the vast expanse to welcome him, and special precautions were being taken to guard against any dire result should "Lucky's" landing be as sensationally break-neck and nerve-racking as his take-off from New York, when he just missed a road machine, telegraph wires and a nose dive to death ere he straightened his plane, heavily

Boxing Fans Pray For Safety of Flier

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 21. — (United Press).—Fifty thousand boxing fans at the Yankee Stadium last night were more interested in Captain Charles Lindberg than in the Sharkey-Maloney bout they had paid good money to see.

Just before the main bout started, a United Press despatch reporting the plane's progress was read to the crowd, which stood and cheered as if a favorite had scored a knockout.

Joe Humphreys, announcer, asked the spectators to pray for Lindberg's success. The 50,000 persons stood silent for a full minute.

Then the fight began.

UNIQUE CAMP OPENS IN JUNE

Lodge at Paudash To Be For Newspapermen and Their Families.

NORTH OF PETERBOROUGH.

An article appeared in The Examiner some time ago telling of a unique camp in Northern Ontario for newspaper men of Canada and of the United States. It was published with a view to gain not only publicity for the tourist development but to make "Peterborough" a name in the States as the central city from which to reach all kinds of situations for tourist camps. This camp was to be operated by Alfred D. Greene, formerly with the United Press of New York City.

Mr. Greene is in the city today and in an interview with The Examiner this morning, he mentioned some very interesting facts in connection with this "newspaper lodge" in the backwoods. Mr. Greene stated that until he had made a visit into the north country at the back door of this city, he had been connected with the United Press in New York, but on seeing this beautiful site near Lake Paudash he decided that he would open a lodge for the newspaper men of his country and of Canada there, severing all connections with his former occupation.

"I decided," said Mr. Greene, "to make this an international camp for newspapermen of the two countries, with an aim to creating fellowship between men of the United States and of Canada." He stated that already he has had big newspapermen of New York asking for reservations for the season, such as Carl Bickell, president of the United Press, and many other well-known syndicate writers.

"This camp," remarked Mr. Greene, "is to be operated like a regular hotel in regard to the rates, and though it is really a camp for newspapermen and their families and friends, other people with good credentials are not barred; but it is to be exclusive in that regard." In speaking about accommodation, he stated that for this year only about twenty-five persons could stay, but of course as the years go on the accommodation will increase. He is going to build log cabins and lodges, for the building are all to correspond with the natural surroundings.

The present lodge is seven-roomed, but tents with floors in them are also to be erected. Canoes are to be placed at the disposal of the guests, and the camp is to be open from the first of June to the conclusion of the hunting season.

All persons applying for reservations are to be routed through Peterborough and from the train here are to go either by stage or aeroplane to the lodge. Mr. Greene has been negotiating with the local flier for rates from the city to the lodge.

"The camp is situated on the lake shore," he stated, "in a clearing between the woods, and has land of two hundred acres with two miles of shore front, and in my estimation is one of the most ideal spots for recreation in any part of the world." Mr. Greene was loud in his praise toward Frank Kent of Toronto, and Frank Stinson of the Chamber of Commerce, Peterborough, for the interest shown by them in the promotion of the camp and for the interests of their respective cities.

In Russian factory schools, out of 8,202 pupils given a medical examination, 5,122 or 62 per cent. were found to be sick. There were 1,347 with tuberculosis.

FLYING CLUB TO BE FORMED

Owners of Homing Pigeons To Meet at the Y.M.C.A. To-night.

OTHERS WELCOME.

Growing out of the recent Boys' Hobby Show, a flying club is being organized for all boys who own homing pigeons or who are at all interested in the possession of these birds. The Director of the pigeon section of the Hobby Show has consented to meet any pigeon fanciers at the Y. M. C. A. on Saturday evening at 7.30, when the flying club will be organized if sufficient interest is manifested in the venture. The idea will serve educational as well as entertaining ends and should appeal to all boys in general and to those already in possession of homer pigeons.

The grapefruit probably was not used in Europe before its introduction to America by Captain Stattuck, who is said to have brought it from the far east.

GOOD WEATHER FAVORS FLIER WHO HAS REACHED IRISH COAST ON NON-STOP FLIGHT TO PARIS

Last Seen at Valentia Island on the Coast of Ireland.

LONDON INTERESTED.

More Attention Paid Than the Big Flight To India.

NEW YORK, May 21 (Canadian Press).—Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, otherwise known as "Slim," "Lucky," and the "Flying Fool," was last night somewhere over the wastes of the Atlantic Ocean flying from New York to Paris. The last word of the gallant youth and the last that was expected until he again sights land, came from St. Johns, Newfoundland last night. It was a report of the silvery monoplane Spirit of St. Louis passing over the capital of the island at 7.15 eastern standard time, just eleven hours and twenty-three minutes after its exciting take-off at Roosevelt Field here. Weather reports last night favored the "Flying Fool," and are expected to improve.

If the captain's well-tried instruments, his sole navigating resource, do not fail him; if his engine, which has already borne him a thousand miles, continues to function; if he can stay awake in his seat thirty-five to forty hours, he will see Paris late to-night when it is afternoon on this side of the American continent.

Survived One Peril

Lindbergh and his monoplane have already survived one peril, that danger which has stopped other long distance flights at the start, rising into the air with a heavy load of fuel.

When he sat in the seat he was not to quit for many a long hour, at Roosevelt field yesterday morning, the youthful captain was tense. His whirling motor and dray gray fuselage had 5,150 pounds to take aloft and only a mile of soft terrain in which to gain speed for the task. His flight almost ended at its beginning.

The plane was slow in getting up speed as she taxied. There was a slip on the wet ground, almost a slide, and the spectators gasped as the St. Louis appeared to be about to turn over. But the pilot pulled her back into her stride again, and gave her more speed. The St. Louis bounced, but settled back again as she whizzed past a piece of road-rolling machinery, missing disaster by inches. Then she was in the air making straight for a network of telephone wires as the crowd held its breath. "Lucky" Lindbergh pulled her up and over, only to start for the ground again. Once more the skill of the pilot and the strength of the engine yanked the nose of the St. Louis upward, fifty feet, 100, 500 and the plane and its master were off for Paris at one hundred and ten miles an hour.

Cheered by Crowds

Some of the crowd cheered, others wept. Men and women let the tears stream down their faces as the "Flying Fool" disappeared in the mist.

Lindbergh left with the cheering words of fellow fliers in his ears. Commander Richard E. Byrd, Bert Acosta, and George Neville went up in their "America," which is also a New York to Paris plane and dropped flowers on the St. Louis. It was Byrd's intention to escort Lindbergh for some distance, but a mix-up in the time prevented this.

"I do not want to bother you, old man," said the commander, referring to the proposed escort business.

"Won't bother me a bit," said Lindbergh smiling at the affectionate "old man."

Lindbergh was in character of taciturnity and spirit to the last.

"There's nothing left to say," he told newspapermen.

A bellboy in his hotel coaxed two words from him.

"Are you going to fly to Paris this morning, captain?"

"I may," said Lindbergh, and he started out to do so.

He took off at 7.52 o'clock, disappeared out of the ken of his friends and well wishers, and for a couple of hours nothing was heard of him. Anxiety reigned until 9.05 o'clock, when East Greenwich, R.I., reported passage of a plane resembling the St. Louis.

Was Flying Low

More authoritative reports of his safety and progress came at 9.40 o'clock from Halifax, Mass., where two women saw the plane flying low and was able to read the identifying NX 211 on the under side of the wings.

At 12.25 o'clock Lindbergh was sighted over Meteghan, N.S., showing that he had spanned his first water jump, a distance of some 200 miles, without mishap. His passage across Nova Scotia was noted at intervals by persons on the ground. Springfield saw him go over at 1.05; Milford at 1.50, and Mulgrave, on the Strait of Canso, at 3.05.

At 5.00 p.m. Lindbergh bade farewell to continental America, where Main a Dieu, the "Hand of God," tips the easternmost point of Nova Scotia. Then he was reported over St. Johns at 7.15 p.m., flying strongly toward the east, Ireland, France and Le Bourget Flying Field where his trip, if Fate wills, comes to an end as one of the most astunding exploits ever dared by a human.

Interest in London

LONDON, May 21 (A.P.).—Captain Charles Lindbergh's New York-Paris flight has aroused interest here unequalled by any such undertaking recently. Even the still longer England to India flight of 4,000 miles which was started yesterday morning from Cranley by Lieuts. Carr and Gillman of the Royal Air force failed to thrill Englishmen as much as the gallant attempt of the "Flying Fool."

Accounts of Captain Lindbergh's take-off were cabled here from New York in minute detail. They were printed in every edition of yesterday's papers, together with photographs of the lone flier and charts showing his course.

The novel flight is generally pronounced foolhardy, but elaborate arrangements have been made by the press to keep watch today along the coast.

Sighted at Sea

NEW YORK, May 21 (Canadian Press).—The Independent Wireless Telephone Company here today announced that one of their offices in Ireland had received a report from a vessel that Captain Lindbergh's plane has been sighted two hundred miles west of the Irish coast. The report said Lindbergh had been sighted at 5.30 a.m. eastern standard time. The message was reported to have been relayed to the Western Union and then to New York.

Approaching Ireland

HALIFAX, N.S., May 21 (Canadian Press).—The Canadian Government wireless station at Cape Race, Newfoundland, reports the steamer Hillvesum broadcasting at 12.10 Greenwich mean time (7.10 eastern standard time) as follows:

"Lindbergh signted 500 miles from Irish coast. Plane keeps full speed."

Seen Near Valentia

LONDON, May 21 (Canadian Press).—A Dublin dispatch to the United Press Association at 2.50 o'clock (9.50 a.m. eastern standard time) this afternoon quotes a message from Valentia, Southwestern Ireland, as saying that Lindbergh's plane was sighted 100 miles off that point.

Crosses Ireland

HALIFAX, N.S., May 21 (Canadian Press).—Captain Charles Lindbergh's aeroplane passed over Valentia Island, Southern Ireland, at 9 a.m. eastern standard time, according to a report broadcast by Station WYM at Chatham, N.Y., and picked up at the radio station at Yarmouth, N.S., and relayed to the government station here.

Plane Wing Not That Of Missing Aviators

NEW LONDON, Conn., May 21.—An airplane wing picked up in Fort Pond bay, at the extreme end of Montauk Point, Long Island, on Thursday night, and towed in here by coast guard patrol boat No 290, had been in the water for months, it was determined after inspection.

When the piece of wreckage was picked up there was an opinion held that possibly the wing was from the White Bird plane of Nungesser and Coli, missing since their attempted flight from Paris.

ASSAULT CASE IS DISMISSED

Stirling Youth Not Guilty of Assaulting Chinese in Restaurant.

HEARD IN BELLEVILLE.

BELLEVILLE, May 21.—Although not a city, the Village of Stirling had a representation of nearly fifty men and boys in the Belleville Police Court on Thursday when Albert Ashley, of West Huntingdon faced a charge of assault and battery against Toy Wo, an employee in the Chinese Cafe in Stirling.

On Saturday evening, Ashley, his young cousin, Garfield Ashley, and some of their friends were in the cafe between 11 o'clock and midnight, having something to eat and chatting. Young Garfield Ashley, according to the evidence produced in the Court Room, was standing leaning against a chair laughing and talking, when one Henry Hong, another employee in the cafe, walked up to him and kicked him in the ankle and hit him in the side, evidently wishing him to move. A heated argument started. Then Toy Wo came out from the kitchen and suddenly both Chinamen grabbed the boy and started to put him out of the cafe.

Broke Door Glass

It was at this juncture that Albert Ashley stepped in, and pushing Henry Hong to one side, smashed Wo in the face with his fist, blacking his eye and sending him spinning so that he crashed through the glass door. The remains of the little fracas were still evident on Wo's face at the trial.

According to other witnesses called a third Chinaman came out from the kitchen with a knife in his hand, but did not use it, and after the smoke of battle had cleared away had disappeared.

Magistrate Mikel dismissed the charge against Albert, saying that he was only "sticking-up" for his friend, and coming to his aid on a moment of peril."

The services of Charlie Ling, joint owner of the Quinte Cafe, were engaged as an interpreter, which made the case drag out longer than is usual.

Chas. Payne acted for the defence.

FIRST FATAL MOTOR CRASH

Fourteen Years Ago To-day the First Fatality of the Kind Occurred in City.

VICTIM WAS BOY.

"Fourteen-year-old Boy was Killed when Bicycle Collided with Auto," was the leading heading on the first page of the Examiner just fourteen years ago to-day. It was the first motor fatality which had ever occurred in this city and a wave of sadness swept over the whole city, for the auto was increasing in numbers and nobody has ever expected that such a thing would happen in Peterborough.

Since then many accidents have occurred, people have been killed, many have been maimed, but that first accident caused more excitement and sorrow for the family of the deceased than any of the other accidents.

The victim of the accident was Earnest Roy Bolton, who lived then at 466 Elm street, and the scene of the fatality was at the corner of Park and Weller streets.

The boy was following a street car which was going north on Park St., and as he came to the intersection of Weller and Park he turned out and was run down by an automobile which was coming south on Park street. He suffered a fractured skull internal injuries, and a broken leg. Medical attention was immediately summoned but he died before he could be taken to the hospital.

MONUMENT TO LATE PREMIER IS DEDICATED

Lieut-Governor Ross Unveils Statue of Sir James Whitney.

BEFORE LEGISLATURE.

Tribute Paid To Old Leader By Some of His First Followers.

TORONTO, May 21.—In the name of the Legislature and the people of Ontario, His Honor Lieutenant-Governor W. D. Ross yesterday unveiled a monument to the memory of the late Sir James Pliny Whitney.

Where formerly there were two bronze likenesses in Queen's Park to mark eventful milestones in Provincial leadership there now are three. To the statuary company of Macdonald, who laid the Ontario foundation of the Confederation pact which has ever since endured, and of Mowat—the wise, the far-sighted, the judicious — the Ontario public, acknowledging the work and worth of a man bold enough to be honest, and honest enough to be bold," has added the likeness of Whitney.

Vast Throng Present.

A vast throng assembled in front of the Parliament Builtings yesterday to hear the story of this son of an Aultsville blacksmith—of a man who, steering always the slow and unremunerative course of public service—was 45 years of age when first elected to the Legislature, and 62 when, in 1905, he became Prime Minister. Prominent men like Chief Justice Sir William Mulock, Sir William Hearst, Sir Thomas White, Sir Robert Falconer, Canon H. J. Cody, representatives of the Supreme Court, members of the Provincial Cabinet, Conservative and Opposition members of the Legislature, Mayor Thomas Foster and Controllers and Aldermen of the City of Toronto united with the general public and thousands of school children, massed for the Empire Day festivities, in paying tribute to one, as Premier G. Howard Ferguson afterward expressed it, "whose chief desire in life was to improve the conditions of his fellow-man, and to make some contribution to the strength of Canada and the British Empire he loved."

Right Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada, who is in the city for the week-end, occupied a seat on the platform. Mr. King did not speak, but, through Premier Ferguson, expressed his pleasure at being able to participate in the general tribute.

A Proud Moment.

It was a proud moment for men who knew Sir James in days of old; a prouder moment for Hon. Dr. Pyne, Hon. J. O. Reaume and Hon. Nelson Monteith, the three surviving members of the original Whitney Cabinet, who were on hand for the occasion; but the proudest moment of all for the son of Sir James and other "Whitneys" who heard praise lavished upon the family name and who stood proudly to attention when, on the signal of the Lieutenant-Governor, the Union Jack veiling the monument fell away to reveal the "old man," as political associates knew him, gazing, square-jawed and stern-eyed as ever—head up, alert, as much the fighter in the bronze as in the flesh. The Governor-General's Body Guards band struck up "The Maple Leaf," and the picture was complete.

PSYCHOLOGISTS TELL OF CURES

New Type of Doctor Described at Medical Association Convention.

(By Thomas L. Stockes, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, May 21. — A new type of doctor for the future, a physician of the soul, who will delve into the emotional life of his patient to cure his bodily ills, was pictured at the American Medical associates convention, which closed here last night.

Heart-break kills in real life, as well as in novels, and similarly the fires of ambition, the gnawing of discontent, the secret fear, tear down the physical being, eminent specialists told the convention.

The doctor of the future, they said, will be a man trained in the mysterious processes of the mind. Numerous cures through use of psychology were cited.

"The world is not awake to the part emotion plays in disease," Dr. Rollin T. Woodyatt, Chicago, declared.

Dr. J. Ramsay Hunt, New York, pointed out that the delicate mechanism of the nervous system, which is touched off by every emotional reaction, controls the entire body, including digestion, respiration and circulation.

Secret fears instilled in childhood often account for poor health of the man, he explained, and they must be rooted out by the pyhsician trained in psychology.

Blaydon Town Council Announces Decision Regarding Empire Day Celebrations.

ANTICIPATE TROUBLE.

LONDON, May 21 (Canadian Press) — In connection with Empire Day celebrations, which will be held in many places to-day on account of the usual Saturday half holiday, the Town Council of Blaydon, Durham County, comprised largely of Labor representatives, will decline to fly the Union Jack, it is stated. Opponents of the Labor party announce their determination to fly the flag and trouble is anticipated over the matter.

The Chief Constable of Blaydon, apprehending a riot as a result of flag controversy, has ordered that no flag at all shall be flown from the Town Hall in connection with Empire Day.

BATH PREPARING TO BURY VICTIMS

(By Foster Eaton, United Press Staff Correspondent).

BATH, Mich., May 21.—Bath prepared to bury the victims of Andrew Kehoe's insanity yesterday.

More than a score of funeral services were to be held here and in surrounding townships — services over children's caskets in almost every case.

The death list from Wednesday's dynamiting of the Bath Consolidated School had increased to 44, and of the 36 injured still in hospitals, a few were not expected to live.

Only one consolation came to the stricken town. Its tragic plight had touched the heart of Michigan and the State, responding to an appeal of Governor Fred W. Green, were raising a fund to remedy the material damage wrought and save the community from bankruptcy.

So great was the grief of the community that it was found impossible to make plans for a community funeral, and it was expected services for the dead would continue on Sunday.

THE BEST MEDICINE SHE EVER USED

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Highly Praised By a Quebec Lady.

Mrs. David Logan, Thetford Mines West, Que., gives unstinted praise to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for the good they have done in her family. Mrs. Logan says:—"I have been a user of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for many years, as occasion required, and have always found them a most reliable medicine. My husband, who was recovering from an attack of typhoid fever, and was in a very weak condition, took the pills, and through them gained health and strength. My daughter was in a run-down condition, and was forced to discontinue work. Again Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were resorted to and she was soon restored to excellent health. Then my eldest boy had an operation performed for adenoids, which left him in a weakened condition. Once more Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were tried, and he was soon in excellent health. So I can truly say that more than satisfaction has been obtained by the use of this medicine. The pills have done more good in my home than hundreds of dollars worth of more expensive medicines."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills assist digestion, correct the lassitude, the palpitation of the heart, shaky nerves and the pallor of the face and lips that are the results of thin, impure blood.

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

OLD MASTERS

At the last, tenderly,
From the walls of the powerful, fortressed house,
From the clasp of the knitted locks, from the keep of the well-closed doors,
Let me be wafted.

Let me glide noiselessly forth;
With the key of softness unlock the locks—with a whisper
Set open the doors, O soul!

Tenderly—be not impatient!
(Strong is your hold, O mortal flesh!
Strong is your hold, O love!)

—Walt Whitman: "The Last Invocation."

They are the very medicine the child requires and are so pleasant to take that they are as easy to administer as a glass of water. PARIS READY TO WELCOME DARING FLIER

Every Possible Technical Precaution Taken For Expected Arrival To-night.

WILL SET UP GUIDES.

French Officialdom Rapidly Preparing Plans For Royal Welcome.

PARIS, May 21 (Associated Press). — The flying field at Le Bourget, from which the intrepid French aviators, Captains Charles Nungesser and Francois Coli, started just twelve days ago on their ill-fated trans-Atlantic Paris to New York hop, last night was ready to receive their valiant brother airman, Captain Charles Lindbergh, now winging his way from New York to Paris.

Every possible technical precaution is being taken for Captain Lindbergh's expected arrival at Le Bourget to-night, while plans are rapidly going forward by French officialdom and the United States colony to welcome him royally.

The Ministry of Marine yesterday gave orders that the big air beacon at Cherbourg should be lighted up to guide the American inland from the French coast. The Air Department has arranged for the lighting of the Paris-London airway, while the beacon on Mount Valerian will throw its rays for a distance of 200 miles.

In Paris a group of Americans in the National Aeronautic Association, rejoicing at news that Captain Lindbergh had safely passed Nova Scotia, invited a number of prominent French men to be present at the flier's arrival to-night at Le Bourget, where the 'Spirit of St. Louis' is confidently expected between 10 p.m. and midnight, French time.

Plan Great Banquet.

Plans were under way to give the flier a great banquet on the very evening of his arrival if he should be sufficiently recovered and thawed out after his gruelling 35 odd hours in the air.

"We wish him good luck and a happy sky," exclaimed Deputy Laurent Eynac, who was the French aviation minister just before that service was consolidated under the Departments of War, Navy and Commerce. "We know our American comrade is worthy of both. France's heart is torn by the cruel fate of two of her magnificent children, but it will fairly burst with enthusiasm and fervor for the American having crossed that prodigious route."

M. Eynac was so moved that he said the quotation from the German poet Gothe: "From this day at this place will date a new era in world history," would be the only suitable description of Lindbergh's exploit if successful.

Aeroplane Escort.

If the Spirit of St. Louis' should heave into sight by daylight, there will be an aeroplane escort from Cherbourg or Le Bourget to bring the flier into the airport with every honor. Sentimental Frenchmen, of whom there are still many, are rather captivated by the plane's name, recalling as it does memories of one of France's most famous kings and also the part French missionaries and explorers played in the opening of the Mississippi valley to civilization.

PARIS, May 21. Canadian Press.—France was waiting with bated breath to-day for the first signs of the gallant Lindbergh, when he rears the close of his lonely flight overseas from New York to Paris.

It was somewhat cloudy over the English channel this morning, but with a brisk wind from the northwest, the weather was regarded as extremely favorable for the airman.

All vessels and wireless stations in the vicinity are keeping a sharp look out for "Fou Volant" (Flying Fool) as the French call him.

There is no doubt he will get a welcome such as is vouchsafed few visitors to France.

The authorities are completing arrangements with military aid to handle the record crowds which will flock to La Bourget flying field to witness the landing.

With a view to preventing confusion the authorities have requested that no airplanes take the air to-night during the hours the aviator is expected.

United States Ambassador Myron Herrick claims for himself the honor to be the first to clasp the hero's hands and is prepared to stay at the field all night if necessary.

The flight now takes precedence over everything else in the papers. Editorial commentators, while not disguising their opinion that the flight is foolhardy, still seemed inclined to share the faith of the crowd in the adage that "Fortune favors the brave."

Minor princes and chiefs of India wear squeaky shoes to impress their barefooted subjects. A British firm specializes in shoes that squeak loudly.

BRINGING UP FATHER — By Geo. McManus

Churches And Churchmen

SPEAKING of the Testament, a writer, last book in the New who is very popular in certain quarters, says: "I was struck with a remark from a Christian lately. Speaking of a gentleman—I trust a Christian, too—who gives large sums of money for sectarian uses, my friend, who knows him well, said, 'I never knew him to give one shilling to Christ'; or, strictly speaking, for the service of Jesus Christ alone. You may build a church, or a chapel, give largely to this interest or that, and you may never have given a cup of cold water to a disciple solely because he belongs to Christ." It is only too true that most of us are seeking our own instead of the things of Jesus Christ. And we need not wonder why some of the Bible is so little understood, especially the Book of Revelation.

Just in proportion as we are identified with "His servant John" for the word of God—not for the theories of men, but the testimony of Jesus Christ—in that same proportion we must be shut out with him in Patmos. Is this our standpoint? Do you ever find yourself saying, "I can neither make head nor tail of this book called Revelation?" The reason may simply be this—you live in your experience too far from Patmos. You prefer Babel to Patmos, and that is why your eyesight is too dim to see Him who is the fairest of all the sons of men.

How true are the words of one who says that it must follow that since the bulk of Christians in our day live in the world, and are one with it in spirit, this book must remain to them, as they say, a sealed book.

PROTESTANTS AND WAR.

IT will be remembered that the minister of the City Temple, London, was set free several months ago to carry on a crusade in Britain in the cause of world peace. This popular minister, Rev. F. W. Norwood, who was a chaplain with the Australian forces in the Great War, has just completed his six months' campaign. He has preached many sermons and addressed hundreds of meetings, at which over 10,000 new members of the League of Nations Union have been enrolled. Invitations to conduct similar campaigns in the United States and elsewhere have been extended to him, but he says that for the time being he must settle down to his regular ministry with vigor and determination at the City Temple, where the church membership has risen to 600 and the Literary Society has over 2,000 members. Anent peace efforts, Rev. I. W. Morgan, of Rochester, Kent, raises a pertinent question. He writes:

"I imagine that many ministers who, like myself, have not joined the Congregational Ministers' Crusade Against War, would be glad to know just what is the attitude of our brethren who belong to that crusade towards the present crisis in China. What would they do, or advocate being done?"

Dr. Norwood, who spoke recently in Chatham, approved of our soldiers standing between a Chinese mob and our countrymen to protect them; but that protection may so develop that it can hardly be distinguished from war, and in any case it may at any time become war through the action of the Chinese. It is with no desire to "score" off those with whom he does not agree that Rev. I. W. Morgan writes. Although he finds himself unable to go the whole way with Dr. Norwood, he has an earnest desire for light. It is so easy to pledge oneself in theory to a cause, and then to fail when brought up against concrete facts.

CATHOLICS AND PEACE.

A Catholic Association for International Peace has been formed, with Bishop Shahan of the Catholic University as Honorary President, and Judge Martin T. Manton, of New York, as President. It grows out of an International Peace Committee named last year by the Catholic Men's National Council, and a similar council of women. The office is to be in Washington, D. C., with E. Francis Riggs as Secretary.

Objects of the association are given as research for natural laws by which men and women may be developed to think peace, and later to act it, by ridding themselves of hatreds, and informing themselves concerning the real attitude of other peoples and nations. That is, peace is held to be a spiritual achievement. In the plans, the desires of the Pope are to have large place, such desires having been recently expressed in an encyclical.

All this is good so far as it goes, but the trouble with all such plans is that they don't go far enough. What men need is not more education, but a change of nature. The schools and colleges cannot give this change of nature. They can educate the head, but they cannot regenerate the heart; and it is at the heart of him that man is wrong and prone to make war. It will not be possible, in the absence of the Prince of Peace from a world that in its heart is still saying, "We will not have this man to reign over us," to get away from the possibility of war. If the energy and money expended on man-made schemes to establish peace upon the earth were expended in proclaiming the gospel of the grace of God far more would be accomplished.

THE CHURCH A FAILURE.

WE may not all be able to see the necessity for it, and may even question the wisdom of it, but surely we can agree that it must have taken courage to do it, when Rev. Jesse D. Roberts, a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, resigned, declaring from the pulpit that lack of prayer and real Christian spirit in the church were the causes of his action. For the last five years he has been pastor of his present charge, the Mary Taylor Memorial M. E. Church, Milford, Conn. Although he has been in the ministry for twenty-four years, he has decided to leave it and drop the title of "reverend."

There can be no doubt but many ministers feel that it is a true indictment that this disheartened preacher has brought against the church. But there are just as many who, while admitting his courage, wish that it might have been wedded to discernment of what the Scriptures have to say about the day in which we live and labor. The times in which we move, and which move us to tears, were all predicted about two thousand years ago. It is not a time for retreat, but for larger and more sincere consecration.

BLAMING THE PULPIT.

MINISTERS themselves may be largely to blame for the low spiritual condition of the churches. If the pulpits of the Christian church were engaged in preaching the Evangel with the passion of the first disciples, it is scarcely conceivable that the present state of religion could long continue. There would come almost immediately a world-wide awakening such as was witnessed in Jerusalem on the morning of Pentecost.

WHAT DOES IT MEANT?

SCOTLAND is giving one of her most scholarly sons to one of the most liberal of all the American colleges. The acceptance by Rev. James Moffatt, professor of church history in the United Free Church College, Glasgow, of the Washburn chair of church history in Union Theological Seminary, New York, in succession to Professor A. C. McGiffert, means a distinct loss to Great Britain. The Christian World remarks: "This is the most notable capture for the largest and best equipped theological college in the world since Dr. Johnston Ross was inveigled from Cambridge by Dr. McGiffert. Dr. Moffatt's departure will be widely regretted by innumerable friends in England as well as Scotland. His modern English translation of the New Testament set a world-wide seal upon his reputation."

We all know that it is possible to lay an accusation against a perfectly innocent person. Consequently we are rather loth to even suggest a suspicion regarding the orthodoxy of one whose scholarship is an admitted fact! At the same time it is just a little disquieting to know that Dr. Moffatt is going to one of the most heterodox institutions on the North American Continent. It is common knowledge that a man is usually to be judged by the company he keeps. And perhaps it will always be true that birds of a feather flock together.

A LONDON VENTURE.

LONDON, through the Presbyterian Office Bearers' Association, recently summoned a special meeting and invited young men and women connected with different congregations frankly to express their views and wishes and to make constructive suggestions. This was in order to discover what young people really think about the church, its services, organizations, methods, etc.

A large gathering assembled one week evening in Regent Square Church. The most satisfactory feature was the evidence given of the ability, high seriousness combined with humor, fundamental religiousness and lofty ideals of the speakers. The young woman who dealt with the place and value of social organization in the church, while favoring social activities, submitted that the social work of the church should be the effect and expression of its spiritual life, and not sought to be made its cause. A young man, although himself musical, favored congregational more than choir singing, and pleaded for simplicity of thought and language, freedom from sentimentalism but not genuine sentiment, a universal note dealing with matters that touch everybody, and a treatment of great subjects, human and divine. Another young man urged that "Youth, with its enthusiasm freshly kindled and as yet unquenched by the disillusionment that time will bring; with its gloriously impossible ideals; with its spirit of loyalty, and even with its beautifully hopeless blunders, should have a greater part in the organization of the church to which it belongs."

Speaking on worship and prayer, a young Scotsman suggested that several short prayers are better than one long one, that the minister should avoid flowers of speech and choose simple language, that he should be strictly sincere in every phrase, and that there should be pauses in the prayer, especially in intercessory prayer. A young woman doubted whether the church today is sufficiently holding up great social and ethical ideals which appeal to the imagination of young people, arouse their enthusiasm and impel them to adventurous living and to fight for great causes.

A verbatim report of these papers and speeches and subsequent discussion is being circulated in Presbyterian circles, and another meeting is to be held at which the older folk will reply to the youngsters.

BLAMING THE COLLEGES.

PERHAPS the colleges are to blame! The college or seminary is the place where preachers are supposed to be produced and prepared for the work of the ministry. If the message of the pulpit does not ring true to the word of God, as too often it does not ring true; and if the methods of the ministry do not compare favourably with the methods of the early church, as too often they do not compare—does the fault not really lie with the institution which is dedicated to the business of producing ministers?

Doubt always paves the way for spiritual decay and death. And if men, who by their ordination vows are pledged to a certain clear-cut course and message, deny and destroy the faith which they ought to declare and defend, we need not be surprised at the low level of life within the churches.

Where and when did those doubts first arise? Surely we don't need to seek far for an answer! The colleges are chiefly responsible for the prevailing impotence of the pulpit. And the impotence of the pulpit is mainly responsible for the low level of the pew. Some John the Baptist is needed for our colleges! It is a call to repentance that should be sounded forth upon the scholastic air. A mission to ministers would not be a bad venture. It might rid many of them of their doubts and restore unto them the joy of their salvation.

To The Point

WHEN you've got a thing to say,
Say it! Don't take half a day.
When your tale's got little in it,
Crowd the whole thing in a minute!
Life is short—a fleeting vapor—
Don't you fill the whole blank paper
With a tale which, at a pinch,
Could be cornered in an inch!
Boil her down until she simmers;
Polish her until she glimmers.
When you've got a thing to say,
Say it! Don't take half a day!

Not a Ready-Made

IT should be remembered that human personality is not a ready-made thing, but it has to grow by moral exercise, and chiefly in the Kingdom of God, by prayer. The living soul has to grow into moral personality. And this should not be ignored in connection with the moral psychology of Christ. He no more than we came into the world with a completed personality—which would be not so much a miracle but a magic and a prodigy.

Children's Corner — TELL US A STORY

A FRIEND called on Michael Angelo, who was finishing a statue. Some time afterwards he called again; the sculptor was still at his work. His friend, looking at the figure, exclaimed, "Have you been idle since I saw you last?" "By no means," replied the sculptor. "I have retouched this part, and polished that; I have softened this feature, and brought out that muscle; I have given more expression to this lip, and more energy to this limb." "Well, well!" said his friend, "all these are trifles." "It may be so," replied Angelo, "but recollect that trifles make perfection, and that perfection is no trifle."

It is written in a very old book that we should never despise the day of small things.

I see a group of men more than twenty in number. They are standing together listening to the words of one who is in authority.

They have apparently a good long journey before them; and see! A book is given to them; but it is not a guide-book, for there does not seem to be anything written on these blank pages.

The men start on their journey, but it is slow work, for there are a good many stoppages, and every time the book comes into operation.

Do they ride over the plains and along the valleys? No, they have to walk every step of the way and to carry that book, without which their journey would be useless.

Power of the Tongue

THE tongue's power of blessing is simply incalculable. It can impart valuable knowledge, making others wiser. It can utter kindly sentences that will comfort sorrow or cheer despondency. It can breathe thoughts that will arouse, inspire and quicken heedless souls, and even call up dead souls to life. It can sing songs which will live forever in blessed influence and ministry. Such power we should consecrate to God and hold ever pure for Him. The lips that speak God's name in prayer and Christian song, and that utter vows of fidelity to Christ, should never defile themselves with any forms of corrupt speech. They should be kept only for Christ.

ON THE surface, disappointments,
Uphill pathway bravely trod:
Underneath, peace passing knowledge,
Full surrender made to God.

On the surface, life unsettled,
What appears like loss of time:
Underneath, the patient waiting,
Grand result of faith sublime!

On the surface, many actions,
Friends can scarcely understand:
Underneath, the way committed
To the Father's guiding hand.

Lord, I thank Thee for Thy favour!
Lo! to me Thou hast revealed
Hidden gems of faith and patience,
'Neath the surface close concealed.

Honors for a Great Educator

REV. FRANCIS LANDEY PATTEN, M.A., D.D., LL.D.

Princeton's Grand Old Man and Patriarch of World Presbyterianism Who Is About to Observe Two Semi-Centennials.

REV. FRANCIS LANDEY PATTON, patriarch of world Presbyterianism, oldest living moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly, and former President of Princeton University, is to have two signal honors accorded him this year. The forthcoming Presbyterian General Assembly in San Francisco, May 26-June 1, will vote to invite him to attend the Assembly of 1928 as its special guest of honor in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of his moderatorship. The Alliance of Reformed Churches Throughout the World Holding the Presbyterian System has extended similar honors to Dr. Patton in connection with the jubilee of its first General Council, which was held in Edinburgh in 1877, and which is to be celebrated by a special service in St. Giles Cathedral, Edinburgh, Wednesday, July 6. Dr. Patton, active in the founding of the Alliance fifty years ago, has agreed notwithstanding his advanced years to cross the Atlantic to preach the sermon at this service.

Dr. Patton was moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly which met in Pittsburgh, Pa., in 1878. He was at that time a commissioner from the Presbytery of Chicago. The next oldest living moderator is Rev. Wallace Radcliffe, of Washington, D. C., who was moderator of the General Assembly which met at Winona Lake, Ind., in 1898.

Rev. Dr. Patton is the son of George John Bascombe Patton and was born in Warwick, Bermuda, Jan. 22, 1843. He attended Warwick Academy, Knox College, the University of Toronto, and in 1865 was graduated from Princeton Theological Seminary.

He received the degree of doctor of divinity from Hanover College in 1872, and from Yale in 1888. The degree of LL.D. was conferred upon him in 1878 by the University of Wooster, in 1889 by Harvard, in 1894 by University of Toronto, in 1901 by Yale, in 1902 by Johns Hopkins, in 1907 by the University of Maryland, and in 1913 by Princeton University. Also from Princeton, he received an honorary M.A. degree in 1896.

On Oct. 10,1865, he married Rosa Antoinette Stevenson, daughter of Rev. J. M. Stevenson, D.D., of New York. Their children now living are: George Stevenson, Francis Landey, Robert Hunter, Paul Richard, and Alexander Hodge.

In 1865 he was ordained as a Presbyterian minister and took his first pastorate at the Eighty-fourth Street Presbyterian Church, New York. In 1867 he became pastor of the Nyack Church, and from there in 1871 he went to the South Church, Brooklyn. From 1872 to 1881 he held the Cyrus H. McCormick professorship at the Presbyterian Theological Seminary of the Northwest (now McCormick Seminary), Chicago. During part of that time, 1874-1881, he held also the pastorate of the Jefferson Park Presbyterian Church, Chicago, and in 1878 the moderatorship of the Presbyterian General Assembly.

In 1881 he went to Princeton and until 1913 held important positions in the faculties of Princeton Theological Seminary and Princeton University. He was professor of relations of philosophy and science to the Christian religion, a chair founded and endowed for Dr. Patton by Robert L. Stewart, and was president and professor of philosophy of religion at Princeton Theological Seminary. At Princeton University he was professor of ethics as well as president of the university.

He is the author of "The Inspiration of the Scriptures," "Summary of Christian Doctrine," "Fundamental Christianity," and many articles and reviews. He is a member of the Victoria Institute and the American Philosophy Society. His home is at Carberry Hill, Warwick, Bermuda.

THE CANADIAN LEGION.

There seems to be some confusion in the public mind as to the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League, which is to hold a Provincial convention here during the first three days of next month.

The British Empire Service League, as its name suggests, is an Empire-wide organization of ex-service men, with branches wherever the British flag flies, and the Canadian Legion of the league has absorbed the other organizations of returned soldiers in this country, bringing them in line with their comrades of the Empire.

Thus the Great War Veterans' Association here has ceased to exist, it becoming a part of the Canadian Legion, and the headquarters formerly known as the G. W. V. A. Hall becomes, of course, the Canadian Legion Hall, and should henceforth be so described.

The G.W.V.A. did splendid work along many lines in Peterborough, but in the interest of unity among returned soldiers, not only here, but throughout Canada and the Empire, it became necessary to scrap the pioneer machinery and link ex-service men in one supreme organization—hence the British Empire Service League.

A COURSE IN CANADIAN HISTORY.

It is a pleasing follow-up to the article in these columns yesterday as to the necessity of Canadians knowing more about the history of their own country to be able to announce that McGill University has decided to give a complete course in Canadian history for the first time in the history of that organization.

The Department of History at McGill, it is announced, feels the desirability of allowing students a chance of obtaining a broad general knowledge of the history of the Dominion.

The history of Canada will be a three-year course, following a complete course on the history of the Western Hemisphere, and is designed to enable the student here to grasp trans-Atlantic conditions.

This action on the part of McGill is a step that will be generally approved.

Canadians will be better citizens for knowing more about the history of their homeland, for it is undoubtedly true, in the words of The Montreal Star, that "a sound knowledge of one's own country is the best possible equipment for a citizen whether he be engaged in a commercial or a professional career."

Thanks to the jubilee celebration, there is a very real awakening in Canada to the need of learning Canadian history.

THE SCHOOLS' CELEBRATION.

In Peterborough's schools on Monday the usual observance of Empire Day will take a new form, inasmuch as on this occasion the schools will celebrate the Diamond Jubilee of Confederation.

As the actual anniversary comes during the holiday season, the Ontario Department of Education suggested Empire Day as a suitable date for the schools' jubilee celebration, and acting upon the advice, Peterborough's school staffs have prepared programmes in which Canadian history plays a prominent part.

The result should be not only a very interesting but a very beneficial afternoon for Peterborough's school children, and The Examiner hopes that as many parents as possible will take advantage of the invitation that is extended to them to be present.

As a people Canadians have been almost chilly in their attitude toward anything that suggested a patriotic demonstration.

Proud as they are of their country, they have apparently been reluctant to give any indication of that pride.

But in this year of jubilee a different feeling is abroad, and it should be indicated on Monday by a goodly representation of citizens at the jubilee celebration of the schools.

THE WHITNEY MEMORIAL.

A prominent politician in the United States declared not long ago that a public man lost little in the way of respect or of votes by sticking to his principles.

Yesterday in Queen's Park, Toronto, a monument to the memory of a Canadian statesman whose success in public life was a complete proof of the truth of that statement was unveiled.

Sir James Pliny Whitney has been dead for over ten years, but his reputation for rugged honesty still remains so fresh in memory that no monument is needed to recall his splendid services on behalf of the people of this country.

Whitney was a new type in public life in this Province, an autocrat if you will, a leader who insisted on leading, a politician who cared nothing apparently for the clamour of the public, who had no hesitation in saying "No" to deputations, who ruled his Cabinet and his followers with an iron hand, but who insisted on the doctrine of the square deal to the people of Ontario, and ever fought for honesty and efficiency in the public service.

He may have made mistakes, he may have made enemies, but his honesty of purpose so impressed itself upon Ontario's citizens, regardless of their political beliefs, that his administration swept the Province at several general elections.

It is fitting that there should be a statue to his memory in the Provincial capital—Sir James Whitney was a great citizen of Ontario and a great Canadian.

THE UNFORTUNATE FILM STARS.

The stars of the motion picture firmament take themselves with profound seriousness. "Upon us," said Mary Pickford the other day, "is laid a great responsibility, and we must accept the fact that our lives do not belong to ourselves." Undoubtedly it's a sad case, these poor, unfortunate men and women devoting themselves to the cause of humanity at a million dollars a year, and obliged to suffer the acclaim and adoration of the multitudes. The "industry"—we wonder Miss Pickford did not speak of it as the "art"—is tired of being spanked by outsiders, and henceforth proposes to administer its own chastisement to offenders against its ethics.

The stars resent the opprobrium which attaches to the industry as a whole through the occasional murder or marital scandal within its ranks. They forget that publicity is a broom with two handles. All the wiles of paid and unpaid propaganda have been used by these stars to surround the whole industry with the glamor of romance, and the public interest, created largely by themselves, in themselves as individuals has swept them along t othe glittering pinnacles. But the same machinery is just as ready to sweep into professional oblivion the star caught up in an unsavory affair, and there are notable instances which everyone will recall. The great masses to whom the "movies" appeal insist that their heroes and heroines shall be untarnished.

If their lives do not belong to themselves, but to their dear public, we do not know anyone more responsible than Miss Pickford and her associated stars. No doubt the industry would be very happy if it could chastise its own offenders without rude intervention by policemen and reporters, and give to the world a Pollyanna picture of happy hopes, devoted husbands, and lovely ladies consecrated to the higher art, but they cannot have it both ways.—Ottawa Journal.

A NATIONAL POLICY NEEDED.

(From The St. Thomas Times-Journal.)

Had the Washington Department of Labor and Immigration decided to end the regulation that permits Canadian citizens and residents to pass freely to and fro while at work on the United States side of the Detroit River, no objection could have been taken except that of lack of neighborliness. But when the scope of the new regulations was modified in a way that favored the native-born Canadian as compared with the British-born or naturalized Canadian, quite another issue was raised with important complications bearing on the general question of citizenship. Though the matter is of primary interest to the Border Cities, the principle at stake is national in its nature and is so recognized in the discussions that have been proceeding between the United States Secretary of State and Hon. Vincent Massey, first Canadian Minister to be stationed at Washington as diplomatic representative of the Dominion Government.

In taking the step that led directly to the present complication, the Department of Labor was undoubtedly influenced by the labor unions in Detroit, these bodies objecting to Canadian competition with workers who are United States citizens or residents. Its order when first issued was construed as applying to all who crossed the river daily. But it was later explained that it had not been the department's intention to stop native-born Canadians and that it only applied to British-born or naturalized Canadians. The department thus drew a sharp distinction in the ranks of Canadian citizenship, practically limiting the term to Canadians born in Canada. On the Canadian side of the border this line of demarcation is not appreciated, is, indeed, resented, particularly in its discrimination against British-born Canadians who require no process of naturalization to become Canadian citizens.

The question has another angle which should not be forgotten. If British-born and naturalized Canadians are barred from working in United States points, it is going to put some thousands of people out of work. The nature of the process by which this is done—if it is done—is of such a character that it becomes at once a matter of national policy. Canada is buying a great deal more from the United States than that country buys from Canada, and the adverse balance of trade from this sort of uneven trading is sharply on the decline. Put another way, this means that Canada is creating a great deal more employment in the United States through our very large purchases there than the United States is creating here through its lesser purchases in this country. If the United States succeeds in preventing other than native-born Canadians from working in its plants, then the work now performed by the prohibited class will be done by United States citizens. The effect will be that United States will have (1) an increased labor income for her own people, and (2) an increasing market to sell these goods in Canada, as shown by trade statistics. On the other hand, Canada will have (1) some thousands of men out of work, and (2) an increasing amount of money being spent in United States markets. This is a problem acute enough to make Canadians, regardless of their political theories, stop and do some deep thinking. It is also big enough to rank as a national problem demanding a national policy to meet it.

Although the Canadian delegation at Washington can make requests, it has no power and no authority to make demands. Washington can make what rules and regulations it sees fit, and if a period of depression were to hit the United States it is not at all unlikely that it would be accompanied by a demand to make all possible employment available for United States citizens only. The whole situation turns into a finger-post pointing very plainly to the absolute necessity of a definite program of policy along these lines:

(1) Forming the habit of buying at home.

(2) Protecting the industries that will give employment to Canadians.

(3) Developing our own resources in such a way, and at once, so that we shall cease shipping out of the country millions of dollars that we could, with very decided advantage to ourselves, be spending at home.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCF

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, May 21 — Monday's heavy run of about 5,000 cattle slowed down trade a little for the first couple of days this week, and a rather heavy carry over handicapped trade for the balance of the week. By Wednesday's market, however, all the choicest offerings had been picked out, and only stale and coarse heavy steers and half warmed up cattle were left to take their chances in a tail end market.

Prices for choice quality beef cattle heavy or handy weight butcher fully recovered to last week best, and indications are that these prices will be maintained for the next few markets. While there was a heavy run this week, it is probable that the peak has been reached, so far as choice finished cattle are concerned.

Any easing off in prices that there may be will be on the coarse and inferior qualities. Choice quality is likely to be in active demand at firm prices.

It is reported that one local firm has an order for butcher grade cattle to be shipped to the Pacific coast. This, perhaps, is not so significant, as indicating a general shortage of cattle of high grade quality, as is the fact that for many weeks now no Canadian beef cattle have been shipped east for the Liverpool and Old Country markets.

So long as Liverpool prices are so far out of line with the high level of prices on this side, there is little chance for export business in that direction.

Prices over the week end averaged as follows:

Choice handyweight butcher steers and heifers firmer at $9.75 to $9.25; fair to good butcher, $7.75 to $8.25.

Cows, good to choice, $6.50 to $7.50; medium, $5.50 to $6.50.

Bulls, steady, $6.50 to $7.25.

Calves a shade firmer at $10 to $11.50 tops.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., May 21. Canadian Press.— The export trade in grain continued extremely dull on the Montreal market yesterday — there being practically no demand from the foreign buyers.

The trade in cash grain in the local market was also slow, but the undertone was firm.

The flour market was without any feature to note; business in spring and winter wheat grades being quiet but values were steady.

Prices for all lines of millfeed were firmly maintained with a moderate amount of business passing.

The market for standard grades of rolled oats was inactive but firm.

A fair trade was done in eggs and prices were unchanged. The receipts were 3194 cases.

The undertone to the potato market continued firm owing to the good demand and the small receipts. Sales of car lots of Quebec "B" grade were made at $2.10 to $2.20 per bag of 90 lbs. in bulk, ex-track.

A feature of the butter trade was the weaker feeling that developed and prices were reduced ¼c to ½c per pound. This was attributed to the small demand and the large shipments. The receipts were 2639 packages.

Owing to the continued small receipts of cheese here and an increased demand a stronger feeling developed in the local market and prices scored a fractional advance. The receipts were 1445 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 21. Canadian Press. — Despite heavy profit taking corn yesterday overtopped the season's highest prices for July and September, with May jumping above 90c—the first time in months. Adverse planting conditions as well as a prospect of more wet weather over the entire corn belt had a decided bullish effect.

Corn closed unsettled ¾ to 1 1-8c net higher; wheat irregular; 1-8c off to ¾c up; oats ½c to ¾c down, and provisions varying from 5c decline to a rise of 25c.

Profit taking weakened the oat market.

CAMPBELLFORD HAS VALUABLE ASSET

Power Plant Provides Electricity at Low Rate and Makes Profit.

The town of Campbellford is occupying a favored place in regard to power and light, having the lowest rates in the province. But Campbellford not only enjoys a favorable rate in this way from its municipally owned plant, but receives yearly also a nice fat cheque from their Commission Board. The Campbellford Herald, in commenting upon this, says:

"At the regular meeting of the Comission Board held on Thursday evening last the sum of $15,000 was voted to be placed in the general fund of the town. This is simply another evidence of the valuable asset the town possesses in its electric power plant. Two years ago the sum of $6000 was turned over to the town; last year $12,000 was handed over, and this year $15,000.

"In making this grant the Board is in no sense crippling itself financially. After allowing for necessary improvements it expects to have as large a surplus on hand at the end of the present year as in 1926.

Campbellford has spent large sums of money on its sewer system in the last few years and were it not for the dividends from the municipally owned plant, would have a very high tax rate. As it is the town is favored with a very moderate rate and has all the advantages of other towns with rates in some cases ten mills higher. This is due to the revenue from the municipally owned public utility, although the light and power rates are the lowest in the province.

CAN THE SICK MAN WAIT?

The American Medical Association has just created a "Council of Physical Therapy." Can it be that the older schools of medicine have at last awakened to the necessity of employing physical therapy to their other methods of drugs and surgery? Here is a report of the Council as given out on October 16, 1926.

"The Council warns against the indiscriminant use of physical measures and the danger that their use may lead into dishonest practice or quackery. The physical measures that have been found to have certain therapeutic value include: 1. Heat, Natural and Artificial. 2. Hydrotherapy. 3. Light. 4. Electricity. 5. Massage. 6. Therapeutic Exercises. The Council feels that the following considerations must receive the most careful attention of the medical profession:

1. Physical physiology and biochemistry must be called on to dispel the empiricism of the past and to prove the value of various physical agencies. 2. Physical therapy must be recognized as a definite part of medicine, practiced and controlled by graduate physicians. 3. 'Since physical therapy is a definite part of medicine, every medical school should give thorough training in this subject. 4. Persistent, prolonged effort must be made to eradicate the abuses of physical therapy. The Council proposes to point out to the medical profession the advantages and the disadvantages of physical therapy, so that its abuses may be reduced to a minimum, and its scientific possibilities may be appreciated."

What about embracing the methods used for years by the Naturopaths, Osteopaths, and Chiropractors? The layman who does the suffering has gone to these practitioners of the newer methods, and has been apparently receiving good results.

Osteopathy is over fifty years old, yet no medical schoo in North America teaches one hour of this subject. The people have voted to create Chiropractic boards of examiners in practically every state of the United States, but this science is not yet added to the regular curriculum of medical colleges.

I am sure that every sincere physician of the different schools will welcome the day when all of the methods of the different schools wil be taught in each medical college, and the truths about the various branches of the healing art will be given their proper place in the regular courses of study.

Much energy is often lost by members of one school who waste time denouncing other systems of treatment which they have not studied and with which they cannot, therefore, be familiar.

Meanwhile, the sick man must try one system after another until the doctors of all schools get together, and profit by each other's knowledge and experience.

AT THE CAPITOL.

BIG NAVAL AND LAND BATTLES IN "TELL IT TO THE MARINES" GRIMLY REALISTIC.

With the huge rifles of battleships thundering their mighty salvos; thrilling battles on an Oriental plain; sensational attacks on weird Chinese villages with Chinese troops in action; a reproduction of a tropical cloudburst, one of the most terrible of storms, "Tell It To the Marines", epic of the Marine Corps, coming Monday to the Capitol Theatre, marks one of the most elaborate production feats in the history of the screen.

The spectacle, a true story of life with the Marine Corps, was filmed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with the co-operation of the United States Government, which permitted the actors to take their places in the ranks of the regulars in battle practice with the Pacific fleet, and lent them several hundred regular Marines to stage a sham battle, as a Marine maneuver, for a spectacle in the new picture. The cast is one of the most notable assembled at the studio in months, augumented by men and officers from the Marine Base.

Lon Chaney plays a veteran sergeant and William Haines the romantic lead as a recruit in the new picture, with Eleanor Boardman as the heroine and a cast that includes Carmel Myers, Eddie Gribbon, Mitchell Lewis, Maurice Kains and others of note. The actors had to drill for weeks, that they might take their places with the regulars on regular duty during the picture; for on battleships and in Marine barracks they were literally enlisted men of the corps.

The new production, directed by George Hill, is from the story by E. Richard Schayer, detailing the training of a useless youngster of whom is made a man in a baptism of fire, superintended by the gruff but lovable old sergeant played by Chaney.

A sensational attack on Chinese bandits to rescue a mission full of white residents in Manchuria; thrilling battle maneuvers, filmed during the Pacific fleet practice, with Chaney, as gun captain, firing the huge rifles of the battleship, and other exciting details mingle with uproarious comedy in the initiation of the recruit into the corps, and a delicate romance in his love affair throughout the story.

The Marine details were under the supervision of Major J. P. Wilcox, U.S.M.C., representative of General John A. Lejeune, commandant of the corps, throughout the production.

JETTA GOUDAL'S NEW ROMANTIC PHOTOPLAY IS "FIGHTING LOVE

Story Carries Fans from Noble Halls in Italy to Burning Sands of the Sahara

Jetta Goudal, the petite, dark-eyed, exotic film star who has been called the "emotional cocktail of the screen drama," will be seen in another of her striking characterizations at the Regent Theatre, opening on Monday next. Victor Varconi and Henry B. Walthall are featured.

The picture is "Fighting Love," described as a romantic drama of love and intrigue ranging from the castles of nobility of Italy to the African desert, with Miss Goudal in the role of a young girl of the Italian aristocracy who, in order to escape marriage with the disreputable scion of a great family, Niccolini, whom she despises, accept the hand of an aged soldier, General Navarro.

Hardly has her marriage been consummated than her husband is summoned to Tripoli. Vittoria follows later, only to find that the General has gone into the desert at the head of his troopsto quell an uprising of the Arabs. When she discovers that this is only a ruse to get rid of her husband, so that Niccolini may be alone with her, Vittoria leaves Tripoli accompanied by the handsome young adjutant of the General.

During the twelve days' journey across the burning sands to Ghalut, the girl and the adjutant discover they are deeply in love. Vittoria remains true to her husband, and when she reaches Ghalut resolves to make General Navarro, for whom she has a profound respect, take her for his wife. But Navarro's concern for his country blinds him to all softer sentiments, and he leaves Vittoria to join his waiting troops who are marching on Kareb to repel an incipient Arab attack.

From here the story moves to a swift and startling conclusion, in the course of which Vittoria and the adjutant are captured by the Arabs. When word is brought that the General is killed, Vittoria and her lover are married.

Then the revelation! The report of the General's death was false. The denouement to this powrful drama is one of the most gripping climaxes ever achieved on the screen.

The drama was adapted by Beulah Marix Dix from the novel "If the Gods Laugh," by Rosita Forbes, and was made under the direction of Nils Olaf Chrisander, supervised by Bertram Millhauser.

away, and large blotches of blood on the wall. Tears in the blanket were said to be undoubtedly caused by the shot. Some pellets of shot in the head of the bed and also in the wall. Among other exhibits was a tin box and contents, some correspondence, a small bag containing $10 which was wrapped in a handkerchief, a Dominion Bank pass book, showing a balance of $66.56, and a bundle of accounts and papers. Inspector Nugent also told of receiving a bottle of liquor from James Gordineer which he took to Toronto for analysis. He produced a certificate of the analysis showing the liquor to contain 2 grains of strychinne to the fluid ounce.

Charles Gordineer said that he worked at Deloro, and that the murdered man was his uncle. He last saw him alive on the 15th of November when he took him home in his car. A few days before this his uncle had told him about finding a bottle on his table. He had taken a little of the contents and weas nearly stiffened out. Gordineer further stated that his uncle, the late Jerome Keene, was not living with his wife. He didn't know the reason for the separation. It was about 8.30 or 9 p.m. when witness drove him home. His uncle was a frequent visitor at his home in the village. He was apparently in good health and was 64 years of age. Continuing, Gordineer stated that his uncle had come to his home to tell him about liquor, and, in the presence of his wife, he stated that John Bell, Sr., had given him a bottle of liquor. Gordineer then told of the finding of his uncles mutilated body. He said he had secured a new car from Toronto and with his brother, who was on a visit from Rawdon, they went for a drive. His mother had been anxious about Keene so they drove to Keenes shack. The outside door was unlocked and the inside one locked. He had a key which opened it, and he and his brother went in. As soon as they saw their uncle they hurried back and told their brother, who is a county constable. It was brought out the witness had borrowed a shot gun from Percy Gray and had gone fox hunting at Rawdon. He had the gun in his possession for some three weeks. He kept it in his house and it was unloaded. He stated that he had used it only once when he shot a couple of times at a stump of a thee, and that he had left the empty shells on a tree stump near his brothers home at Rawdon. He had shells in his house at the time of borrowing the gun from Gray and, therefore, did not purchase any at that time. He stated that he had returned the gun to Gray's wife about January 15th. When asked if his uncle had ever told him that he was suspicious of any one, Gordineer stated that his uncle had told him that Bell was acting funny; that Bell came to his shack with liquor—a thing he had never done before. "He gave me to understand that he was suspicious of John Bell. He told me that he had lost $35 and did not miss it until the evening Bell was in his shack." He further stated that his uncle had lent other money to Bell. Throughout his examination the witness appeared very nervous and there was a great deal of repetition in his evidence. The Crown Attorney informed him that they did not suspect him, and urged him to be more candid in his answers.

Thought Something Wrong.

George Gordineer stated that he lived at Rawdon, five miles from Marmora, and that he was a farmer. He was at the shack the day Jerome Keene was found. He had heard stories to the effect Keene was in Detroit, or Timmins, or at the widow Weese's. His mother thinking that something must be wrong had gone to Mr. Hubbell to see if she would have the right to enter the shack. After entering the shack and seeing the body he and his brother Charles drove to the village and informed their brother, the County Constable. He last saw his uncle about the 18th of November in front of Neal's hotel. His uncle told him at that time that he had come near dying a few nights previous; that a bottle of dope had been left on his table and that he had taken the bottle to Constable Gordineer to have it analysed. At the time of the Stirling Fair Keene had told him that he was suspicious of John Bell, and that John Bell and William Jones had brought liquor to his shack—about a '5 o... bottle. He expressed surprise at Bell and Jones coming with such a small bottle when they were such old whiskey topers. Keen, said the witness, lost between $30 and $40 and believed that John Bell had taken it. He had a dream that someone had asked him if he was asleep, and when he woke up next morning he was unable to find the money. In addition to this Keene had told the witness that Bell had about $60 from him.

Mrs. Lottie Gordineer, wife of Charles Gordineer, corroborated his evidence, and adding that Keene had complained about Bell keeping putting off the return of money he had borrowed.

Promised A Surprise.

Mrs. Nancy Gordineer said she was a sister of the deceased. He came to her home in Rawdon on the 4th of November and left on the 5th. He had told her about John Bell and William Jones giving him whiskey. He had also told her that he was suspicious of Bell—didn't like the way he was acting. He said to her, 'I'll tell you something some day that will surprise you."

Wm. McCoy stated in his evidence that he had seen Keene either the 6th or 8th of January. He was out from camp those two days and saw the unfortunate old man on one of them.

John Neill stated that he saw Keene some time after the 11th of January.

Wm. Burns said he passed Keene's shack on New Year's Day and saw smoke coming from the chimney.

Daniel Campion stated that he walked up the street with Keene three days before Christmas. Keene was carrying two parcels. The deceased told him about finding liquid, but did not say whom he suspected.

John Reid stated that the late Mr. Keene was his uncle. He had gone to the shack on February 11th, having been requested to do so by Mrs. Gordineer and Mr. Hubbell. He had looked in the window, but couldn't see anything. He had borrowed $200 from his uncle and had paid the interest thereon.

Mrs. Ben Demas, sworn, said that Joseph D. Lynch was her son-in-law. He was married last July and lived in Peterborough. He visited here with his wife a couple of weeks in November. Had not been here since. Her sister, Mrs. Keene, and the deceased had separated about five years ago.

J. P. Marrin told of Keene bringing a bottle of liquid for him to analyse. Deceased had told him that he had found it on his table; had taken a little of it and had nearly died during the night. He smelled the liquid and thought it was some kind of moonshine.

Mrs. Jerome Keene, widow of the deceased, said that she was married to Mr. Keene in Marmora. They had one child. They separated about five and a half years ago. Her husband rented the house after they had separated. He sold the house about two years ago for $875 and gave her one-third of the money. Her late husband could not read nor write. Since the separation she had never spoken to him except at the time the house was sold.

Wrote one Letter.

Miss Agnes Keene, daughter of the deceased, following her mother on the witness stand, said she had been living in Lonsdale but had returned to Marmora about the 23rd of Dec., remaining for two weeks. She liked her father and never had a quarrel with him. Her father and mother separated because they could not get along together.

Asked if she corresponded with her father, she replied that she had written him one letter. The letter was produced, and after commenting on the tone of it, the Crown Attorney read it. It was very bitter and abusive, and gave the 600 or more spectators a blood-chilling thrill. Asked for the reason for writing such a letter to her father, she replied "It was in reply to a very disgusting letter from her father."

John Bell stated that he was tax collector for Marmora and Lake. He paid Jerome Keene $875 for the property where he now lives. Mrs. Keene got one third of the money. Keene's shack is on the north corner of his lot. November 16 or 17 was the last time he had seen Keene alive. He and Mrs. Bell were away a good deal of the time after that. Mr. Jones came home from Campbellford with him the evening he was accused of giving liquor to deceased. Had never given him a drink at any time.

Asked the second time as to the giving of liquor to Keene, Bell, with some heat exclaimed, "So help me God, I never gave him a drink!"

He stated that he owed Keene $200, which he borrowed a year ago last December. He had offered deceased the money, but was asked to keep it as Keene only wanted the interest.

Questioned in regard to the loan by Keene to Mrs. Moffatt, Bell said that Keene had asked him where he could loan some money. He told him of two people in Marmora and Mrs. Moffatt. Keene did not have enough for the people in the village so decided to let Mrs. Moffatt have it. He told Keene that Moffatts owed the money and it was going into his wife's hands. Questioned with regard to inducing Keene to loan money to Moffatts when he was unable to collect from them, Bell claimed he could collect from them if he had time. He stated that he had never borrowed any money from Keene except the $200.

After Inspector W. H. Stringer had given evidence regarding certain notes and papers which had been secured from the bank the jury returned the following verdict:

"That Jerome Keene came to his death while asleep in his shack, lot 9, in the 4th concession of the Township pof Marmora, on some date after December 20th, 1926, and before February 15th, 1927, as a result of being shot in the head by two charges of a shot gun in the hands of a person or persons unknown."

Owing to the apparently unsuccessful efforts of the Provincial police and O.T.A. inspectors it is stated that the Provincial member has interested himself in the case and will personally take up with the proper authorities of the Ontario government the matter of offering a reward for the slayer of Jerome Keene. Any such move made by the local member will be whole heartedly backed up by the entire community.

Mount Athos Becomes Monastic Republic
Levant's Holy Mountain Excludes Women

ATHENS, May 21 (A.P.).—Mount Athos, or the Holy Mountain as it is called throughout the Levant, is now an ecclesiastical republic under the new constitution granted by the Greek Government, giving the area autonomous powers. No female, human or animal, is allowed in the republic, in which Greek and Slav monasteries, have existed for many centuries.

By an annex to the Treaty of Sevres in 1920, the peninsula of Mount Athos became a monastic republic under Greek sovereignty. The new charter confirms the right of the monks to settle their own affairs, but appoints a Greek Governor of the peninsula, with the rank of Perfect, dependent upon the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Ecclesiastically, the monasteries continue to depend directly upon the Ecumenical Patriarch at Constantinople.

Their lands are declared inahenable, and all the property will be exempt from taxation. There will be a force of gendarmerie under the orders of the Governor. Every novice or monk who retires to any of the monasteries, even to the famous Serbian monastery of Chilindar, will automatically become a Greek subject.

In days gone by Mount Athos had a strategic importance and was regarded as a Russian base in the Aegean. Henceforth it will be an autonomous province of Greece and a centre of learning and study.

BRITISH COLUMBIA
THE LAND OF OPPORTUNITY

TREASURE

British Columbia may well be described as a gigantic treasure chest. Here in the walls of old mother earth nature has stored riches inconceivable. The energy and persistency of pioneers have sprung the lock, and British Columbia is now pouring gold, silver, copper, lead, zinc, coal and building stone into the lap of the world.

The Days of 1852

The glitter of gold first caught the eye of man in British Columbia in 1852. The news flashed around the world. Those daring pioneers of the covered wagon, who made the grand trek to California in the days of '49, were the first to come. They were followed by thousands of "Chechahcos," who dropped the pen and plow to seek fortune with the pick, pan and shovel. With a grim determination that was not to be denied, these hardy pioneers pushed on, following the gold trail as marked by the mighty Fraser River, making each sand bar yield its horde of glittering dust. They reached the rich placer fields of the Cariboo in Central British Columbia, and there, literally with their bare hands, they skimmed from the earth's surface $50,000,000 in gold.

Placer Mining Today

Pick and shovel methods are now obsolete. Modern bucket dredges and hydraulic methods are developing new fields and working low grade gravels. $82,697,053 in placer gold has been harvested in British Columbia. And it is reasonable to believe that placer mining here is in its infancy

Lode Mining

Lode mining followed the completion of the C.P.R. in 1885. Since that date, there has been a steady increase in production from $60,000 per year to $67,718,400 in 1926. Today British Columbia is the world's third largest producer of zinc, and ranks fourth in the production of lead. It leads all Canada in the production of copper and silver, and ranks second in the production of gold. The coal mines of British Columbia produced approximately 2,750,000 long tons in 1926.

One Billion

Since the days of the Cariboo gold rush, British Columbia has produced minerals aggregating in value slightly less than one billion dollars—exact figures being $998,628,028. $6,000,000 was paid in dividends in 1926 to investors in British Columbia mining development.

The Government Cooperates

British Columbia is the most highly mineralized area on the continent. Not more than fifty per cent. of the total area has been thoroughly prospected. Two hundred thousand square miles remain to be explored. Mining laws are more liberal and fees lower than in other provinces in the Dominion or any part of the British Empire. The government is co-operating in this development by building trunk motor roads and, wherever required, constructing branch roads and trails to serve new areas.

A Great Place to Play

The mountains and the sea, the lakes and cascading streams, and the invigorating climate, make British Columbia a great place to vacation. In 1926 more than a million tourists came to enjoy Canada's "Evergreen Playground." They motored over her 17,500 miles of motorways, enjoying such scenic grandeur as is paralleled nowhere else in the world; they fished gamey trout and the great Tyee salmon; they hunted grizzlies, moose, mountain goat, pheasants and other game to be found here in abundance; they golfed over sporty courses by sea-side and in mountain valleys. They trod the shimmering sands of British Columbia's wonderful beaches, enjoying the exhilaration of a swim in the Pacific; they enthused over the wonderful boat trips along the British Columbia coast line with its seven thousand miles of fjords and bays; they left with regret, planning to return again, voting unanimously that Canada possesses the most wonderful playground on the American continent.

The Land of Opportunity

Many of these tourists were men of initiative, men of brains, who predict a great future for this western land. They were amazed at its natural resources; they found here the world's greatest stand of timber, which produced wealth to the value of $82,000,000 in 1926; they learned of the greatest fisheries on the American continent with a 1926 production of $25,000,000; they saw with their own eyes potential waterpower and great coal producing areas that will make this province one of the leading industrial centres of the world. They beheld fertile farms which are producing an average of $3,185 annually, and a total revenue of $70,000,000 last year, with approximately fifteen million acres of similar lands yet to meet the plow; they visited magnificent harbors—the termini of more than fifty steamship lines that ply the seven seas. They realized that here indeed was the Land of Opportunity.

CANADA'S EVERGREEN PLAYGROUND

PLAY PRESENTED AT CAMPBELLFORD

Young People From St. Luke's Put on "Nothing But the Truth."

CAMPBELLFORD, May 21. — A large audience was present in the Parish Hall on Thursday evening to greet the A.Y.P.A. of St. Luke's Church, Peterborough, who presented the three-act comedy, "Nothing but the Truth."

The first act is centered in the office of E. M. Ralston, orcker. Bishop Doran is trying to raise funds for a seaside home for children, and Ralston's daughter, Gwendolyn, is canvassing for funds. Her father has promised, if she is able to secure $20,000, to double that amount for the home Gwen asks her fiance, to raise this money, and Bob makes an agreement with Ralston, Van Dusen and Donnelly, to tell the absolute truth for twenty-four hours for $10,000. In the meantime Ralston has been busy trying to sell worthless stock to several important men of the town. When Bob is asked about the mine, he declares it is worthless.

In the second act, everyone is at the Ralston summer home, Long Island. The men try to catch Bob in a lie, but Bob sticks to the truth, sometimes to the disgust of those around. Mrs. Ralston overhears the boys talking of her husband lighting the cigarette for Mabel and plans to see these girls that have been in her husband's office. Mr. Ralston sold stock to the Bishop, but Bob tells the Bishop it is useless and that if he yells loud enough, Ralston will refund his money.

Van Dusen, Donnelly and Ralston try to frame Bob so he will have to tell a lie to Gwen when she asks him about the girls in her father's office, but Bob sticks to the truth. Miss Clarke, daughter of one of the influential men of town to whom Ralston had tried to sell stock, appears with a large sum of money contributed by her father in his grudge against Ralston, so that in the end Gwen gets more than enough money for her charity scheme and her father has to pay his share. At the end of the twenty-four hours Bob wins his bet and also assures Mrs. Ralston that the girls were never in to see Mr. Ralston at all.

Like all happily ended stories, everyone is happy, and Bob, with his arm around Gwen, asks Ralston if he knows what stock he is taking, and says, "Steal."

MISS MACPHAIL

Your history may be right,
Miss Macphail.
It may be wrong to fight,
Miss Macphail.
But though you spend your time
A-scaling heights sublime,
Your English is a crime,
Miss Macphail.

Your pronouns don't agree,
Miss Macphail.
Your verbs are on a spree,
Miss Macphail.
While "and" that trite conjunction
You sadly over-function,
Without the least compunction,
Miss Macphail.

You use your prepositions,
Miss Macphail,
In rather queer positions,
Miss Macphail;
And must a sentence sprawl,
Because it's full of gall
Anent the Chinese brawl,
Miss Macphail?

Now we don't know much history,
Miss Macphail.
To us the Chink's a mystery,
Miss Macphail.
But since your letter's foggy,
Your history may be groggy,
And perhaps your brains are soggy,
Miss Macphail.

So, some night after dinner,
Miss Macphail,
Although you're not a sinner,
Miss Macphail.
Take down your Holy Bible
And though its wars are tribal
Its English is no libel,
Miss Macphail.

Next, read the old-time tinker,
Miss Macphail,
Who was a mighty thinker,
Miss Macphail;
Though Bunyan didn't coddle,
He'd something in his noddle,
His English is a model,
Miss Macphail.

History may be your forte,
Miss Macphail,
And life is very short,
Miss Macphail;
But if you have a thirst
Our British pride to burst,
Please learn the language first;
Miss Mac Fail.
—Tristan.

"Will Morning Never Come?"

"IF I could only sleep I believe my nerves would soon be all right, but night after night I lie awake and think about everything under the sun.

"What chance is there of getting better so long as this goes on?"

"None. Nerve force is being exhausted nearly twenty-four hours of every day, and there is no rest and sleep in which to replenish the waste."

"One thing sure I cannot stand it much longer, for I know that every week—yes, every day—finds me more restless and nervous, and less able to stand the strain of the day's work."

"I suppose the doctor could give me something to make me sleep, but I don't want that. I am weak enough now. I want something to build up strength rather than to tear down the tissues of the body."

"I believe I will try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I have often heard of it, but never thought I would need to use it. I was always so strong and healthy."

"This nervous trouble is a peculiar ailment. No one would believe what I suffer from sleeplessness and nervousness. I do not look like an invalid, but I certainly am one."

"One thing sure I shall not spend another sleepless night before I begin using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I expect it will take a little time to get my nerves right, but I shall get half a dozen boxes and give it a try out. Something seems to tell me that I shall not be disappointed."

TO WEAR STOCKINGS OF DIFFERENT HUE

PARIS, May 21.—Ladies, if you should some day find yourself without a pair of stockings that don't match, don't worry. They shouldn't match anyway, according to Paul Poiret, Parisian designer. Put on a light stocking and a dark one and you'll be right in style; at least you'll be in the style that Poiret intends to force upon America this fall. Individuality—that's his battle cry. "Why must women keep wearing the same things all the time?" he asks. "The only variety to stockings is what's in them. Since a woman has two legs, why does she dress them alike? She should not."

An Ex-Buck Private Goes Back to France

Vimy Ridge as it Was ---and as it is To-day.

Dear Mac:

I started this morning away back at Aubigny and came up by Frevin Capelle, Acq, Ecoivres and Mont St. Eloy to La Targette and Neuville St. Vaast, as a start in following the troops over the ridge. It was a long hike in those few days before Easter, 1917, and that old ruined tower at St. Eloy made it worse. No matter how long you marched, that tower seemed to be just the same distance away at the end of an hour. Probably it was a standing taunt to the squareheads on the ridge, too, for here the French put up a splendid resistance that halted further invasion. How the Hun would have liked to hold the ruined monastry tower—relic of the destruction his tribes wrought when last they passed that way in 1870!

We didn't enjoy our one-night stands in barns, chicken-coops and pigsties, but there were two or three pretty rotten billets we'd have gone back to cheerfully after one look at the trenches on the west side of Vimy Ridge. It was too late to go back then, so we went forward instead. We had to do something to get out of those trenches. It was over this ground that some of the most sanguinary battles of the war were fought, and as we moved up in front ill-buried Huns filtered through the parapet and old French jam-tin bombs threatened to mix us up with the remnants of other battles and the newly-churned chalk. To some who had been passing the time in billets with the assistance of cognac and vin blink, it was a real test, that march through the mud, or worse still, up the endless communication trenches. And it was much the same whether you went in by Acq, Maroeuil, Etrun, Agnez or Ablain St. Nazaire. Whatever way the troops took going in, they all landed in that 7,000-yard front that extended from a mile north of Roclincourt on the Arras-Lens road to a little east of Souchez, and it was all much alike.

The winter in the line had been a hard one, though this was said to be a rest position where we should recuperate after the Somme. La, la! It's no wonder there was such a rush of would-be specialists to the corps schools!

But when the big day at last came, all were ready and even eager to go over the top. If that statement needs a grain of salt, Mac, I'm leaving it to you for seasoning! It is interesting to note that one of the brigades in the third division, the eighth, was under command of Brigadier-General J. H. Elmsley, now Major-General J. H. Elmsley, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., District Officer Commanding Military District No. 3, in which Peterborough militia units are the right bower. General Elmsley has a high place in the regards of the Peterborough officers and men, and while they rejoiced in the recent news of his probable promotion to another district, they cannot but express regret at the prospect of losing a commanding officer who is so deservedly popular.

To return to the battle, you will recall that the last of the units were in the line at 4 a.m. on Monday morning. Some of us rolled ourselves in our great-coats and slept on the floors of the tunnels that were to prove so important in driving Heinie off the ridge. Rain and sleet made life outside very uncomfortable. The artillery kept up a desultory fire all night, and probably brother Bosche congratulated himself that the worst was over for a little while. Then, at 4 seconds to zero hour, the guns fell silent. After the deafening bombardment of the past few weeks, the sudden silence nearly deafened us as we stood to. It was blood-chilling. Exactly at 5.30 every gun on the 12-mile front opened up. In the dim morning light the scene was terrific. The whole countryside to the west of the Arras-Bethune road was lighted up with sharp stabs of flame. The explosive charges in the blind ends of the tunnels were blown, and we advanced under cover to within a hundred feet of Fritz's trenches. Machine guns and trench mortars added their quotas to the storm that preceded us over no-man's land. Gas and smoke from the mortars added to the fearsome aspect of the dawn. And through it all blazed the distress signals from the trenches of an alarmed Hun army.

As a background for this cataclysmic scene, the sun rose slowly above the horizon and peered angrily through wild storm clouds. Flurries of snow and sleet whipped the field and at times blotted out the battle scene. Three minutes after zero the barrage made its first lift, and our infantry closed with any of the enemy who still survived the storm of steel.

Out of all the welter of that battle some of us have very clear recollections of a certain German sap where we captured enough cigars to keep the platoon in smokes for a week. And souvenirs!

There was nothing spectacular about the actual advance. Mud and rain and the barrage prevented a headlong rush. All we could do was stroll along until we saw someone to fight. Picked machine gunners and snipers gave us trouble, until we mopped them up. Two hours after the barrage fell on the enemy front line, we had captured our objectives in Swischen Stellung, and before nightfall the 3rd and 4th Battalions were established on the western side of Farbus wood. On the northern flank of the 1st Division, the 4th and 5th

HOW DIFFERENT!

A street corner in Arras is very different to-day from the wreck of 1917 There is a courteous cop to show wandering soldats the way.

Eighth Brigade General Now Commands No. 3 District.

Brigades had dug in near the outskirts of Thelus, and it only took the 28th Battalion twenty minutes to capture the western end. The 29th Battalion took Thelus trench, and then the 28th and 29th swept through the eastern end of the village and established themselves on Hill 135.

In the meantime, the 3rd Division had consolidated its position in La Folie Wood, after the 1st, 2nd, and 4th C.M.R.'s, the P.P.C.L.I., and the 42nd Battalion had taken all objectives. The 4th Division had stiffer fighting, the 11th Brigade running up against a real battle at Batter Trench.

Towards nightfall, with the Hun rushing trainloads of reinforcements from Lens and Douai, Hill 145 was captured in a dashing action by the 10th and 11th Brigades, who then dominated the Pimple. This success made it imperative for the Hun to retire to the La Coulotte-Avion-Mericourt line on April 12th and 13th.

That, in brief, is the story of our attack on Vimy Ridge on April 9th, and here we are again! From the top of the ridge to-day I can see backward to that old ruined tower, and forward to Douai. Below me is Farbus; there is the railway line that runs through Vimy; farther away are Fresnoy and Arleux. All are rebuilt, glisteningly new. The fields are ploughed and sown; their little ditches are clear of rubbish. The corduroy road isn't needed any longer, for the roads have been repaired. And, anyhow, all the life that crowded the highways ten years ago has gone. It's too quiet to-day for one who was through the days of 1917. The stumpy church-spires we see from Vimy Ridge to-day don't seem right. I'm smoking an atrocious French cigarette, and wishing for an "Arf a Mo" (recollectez-vous?). Somewhere down there in Farbus is a place where once was a nice deep Hun dugout. Somebody has spoiled it by building a house over it. But in there, in 1917, I was in one of the hottest little Black Jack games that ever used up captured 5-mark bills.

Comment-to-helley-vous? They couldn't keep the whole country churned up just to please old soldiers. And really, Mac, you can't expect the girls to stay single just because that's the way you remember them. I'll tell you about the villages back of here and the old billets, in my next. And then there's a lot more of this battle front to cover—Lens, Ypres, Amiens, Messines, and a dozen places in between. It costs beaucoup francs, but it's worth it, ness pah?

To those who regard a car as an Investment

THE purchase of ANY car is an important matter, deserving serious consideration. To the majority of car-buyers, an automobile represents an investment. And the investment of money, whether in a home, a bond or a car, is not a subject for whim or fad.

McLaughlin-Buick enjoys the largest measure of public confidence and popular acceptance ever accorded any fine car because McLaughlin-Buick represents the safest investment, the firmest security and the highest return. McLaughlin-Buick quality is tried and proven—its value is beyond doubt—its name is an unqualified guarantee throughout the whole civilized world.

The buyer of a McLaughlin-Buick consciously invests his money in more miles of transportation, in greater comfort and luxury, in more satisfying performance, in absolute dependability.

Such phenomenal advances as the McLaughlin-Buick Engine, Vibrationless beyond belief—the most powerful motor of its size in the world, by test—Torque Tube Drive—Mechanical Four-Wheel Brakes—Sealed Chassis—Vacuum-cleaned Crankcase—are evidences of the firm determination to keep McLaughlin-Buick always the standard by which automobile investment values are judged.

Those who regard a car from an investment standpoint should first consider McLaughlin-Buick, not merely its quality and beauty today, but its lasting dividends of undiminished satisfaction.

NEW CAMP BUILT NEAR PINE LAKE

Six Point Lodge Established By New York Man North of Here.

A summer camp, Six Point Lodge, has been established near Pine Lake, 50 miles north of the city, by a United Press writer, Alfred Greene of New York, who is at present in the city. Mr. Greene, who covered the provinces from one end to the other in search of a site for a vacation camp which would appeal to the city toiler and yet be within easy reach of civilization, found in the neighborhood of Pine Lake the spot which he thinks should make an irresistable appeal to the American city man.

Mr. Greene gives great credit to Canadian authorities, local and national, for their cooperation with him in his search mentioning particularly officials of the Canadian National Railway and Frank G. Stinson, secretary of the local Chamber of Commerce.

INTERESTING SHIP IS COMMISSIONED

H.M.S. Adventure, Cruiser-Minelayer, Fitted With Diesel Engines.

LONDON, May 21.—(Canadian Press)—Just commissioned, H. M. S. Adventure is the only vessel of her type in the world and the first such vessel in the Royal Navy. She is a cruiser-minelayer. The performances of the Adventure will be followed with considerable interest by naval architects as they are expected to yield data of great importance. Engineers are particularly interested in her because her propelling machinery includes a Diesel plant for use at ordinary cruising speed. She is the first large warship to be thus fitted with internal combustion engines. If the experiment proves successful it will be tried on a larger scale in future cruising vessels, and may prove the initial step towards motor-propelled warships.

George West President of Kingston Presbytery Branch.

SUCCESSFUL MEETING.

BELLEVILLE, May 21.—A rally of the Sunday schools and Young People's Societies of the Kingston Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church of Canada was held at St. Andrew's Church here on Wednesday. Officers were elected, general routine business was discussed, and a very successful day was spent by all concerned. The Rev. W. M. Kannawin of Toronto was the principal speaker of the meeting.

The convention was attended by delegates from all the Sunday schools and Young People's Societies of the Kingston Presbytery, which is bounded on the east by Gananoque and on the west by Trenton. The session was opened by Devotional exercises led by the Rev. R. G. Stewart, following with the report of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies was furnished by the Rev. T. G. Marshall, Presbytery convenor.

The Reports.

Reports were heard from twenty-four Sunday Schools which show an enrollment of approximately 1,550, eighty-one officers and teachers. $2,445 was the amount of money raised during the year by the schools and $363 was raised for mission work.

The Young People's Societies reported an enrollment of four hundred members, with $1,200 raised throughout the year, and $175 for mission work, a very creditable showing.

The Nominating Committee was next chosen and comprised George West, Madoc convenor; Rev. Stewart, Belleville; Rev. D. A. McKingie, Burnbrae; Rev. T. G. Marshall, Madoc; Rev. Duncan, Roslin; Miss Davis, Kingston; Miss Fleming, Ivanhoe, and Mr. I. L. Moore, Belleville.

This committee chose as its officers for the coming year:

The Officers.

President—George West, Madoc.
Secretary—Miss Middleton, Belleville.
Treasurer—Miss Davis, Kingston.

Perhaps one of the main features of the day was a sumptuous supper served by the Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's at 6 o'clock in the evening, after the afternoon's work was done.

The evening session opened at 7.30 with devotional exercises conducted by the Rev. T. G. Marshall of Madoc and closed with prayer and hymns. Throughout the entire convention there were five speeches, and address by the Rev. W. M. Kannawin of Toronto who spoke in the afternoon on "Canada's Greatest Asset," and in the evening on the "Vision of Youth." Addresses were also given by the Rev. A. N. Reid, B.A., of Stirling, who spoke on "Education and Character Building," and an address in the evening by the Rev. D. A. McKenzie, of Burnbrae, who took as his subject "The Challenge of the Twentieth Century to Young People."

The convention was of only one day's duration.

DOCTORS ADVICE TO THE SICK

To feel your best day in and day out, no more headaches, indigestion, gas on stomach, bilious attacks, rheumatism, kidney pains, bad breath, you must bathe your self inside. Start today by taking one Tanol Calomel tablet before meals or two at bedtime, then next morning drink a glass or two of hot water to wash from the stomach, liver, kidney and bowels all the previous day's waste, poison and toxins before more food is taken in. Get a few Tanol tablets from F. C. Weber, Charlotte street, Peterborough. They are harmless to take, do not nauseate, no bad after effects, no salts or seidlitz next morning, like ordinary calomel. Then you can eat better, sleep better, work better, think better and look better.

SOCIETY

Mrs. Jordan, 173 London street, was given a pleasant surprise on Thursday, when some thirty of her friends gathered to observe her sixtieth birthday. The reception room was a mass of flowers while the tables were prettily decorated with silver candlesticks and cut glass baskets of roses, sweet peas and carnations. Mrs. James received the guests, while tea was poured by Mrs. Jones, assisted by Mrs. George Coleman, and the ices were cut by Mrs. Frank Roberts. Mrs. Craig contributed several vocal numbers during the afternoon with accompaniments by Mrs. Fenwick.

Mrs. E. They deeply appreciate your zeal and untiring efforts on behalf of the Association, which have made your work so eminently successful. Not less do they appreciate the motherly interest you have taken in the girls who have come under your care from year to year, the influence of which it is impossible to estimate. We believe that, in addition to the already mentioned anniversary, to-day is also your birthday. Will you accept the accompanying gift as an indication of our gratitude and of our good wishes for this and all future birthdays. Yours sincerely, Annie Wood, Secretary of Board."

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

Here is the new printed linen sport jacket, worn with a crepe de chine frock with side-pleated skirt.

The short, rather close little tailored jacket of chintz or painted linen is one of the new things for summer. It comes as a successor to the cretonne summer coat of several seasons ago—but from our present point of view it is decidedly more wearable. And though perfectly tailored with manish notched collar it is one of the new modes that may truthfully be spoken of as decidedly feminine.

Jackets you may call these little printed linen garments—though they are frequently spoken of as linen caraes frequently spoken of as line digans. For summer wear many women are planning to make much of the sports costume consisting of simple crepe silk or satin frock worn with a printed linen jacket. Patou of Paris has done much to popularize the sleeveless satin sports frock worn with printed linen jacket. And the favor with which this type of costume was received at Southern resorts during late winter and spring augurs well for its summer popularity.

You may be able to buy one or two of these separate linen cardigans which you may then match up with atin or crepe frocks. A dressmaker with the knack of imparting the tailored finish might make your linen cardigans and you might then make the silk frocks to go with them yourself!—thus providing for yourself a very good start on your summer wardrobe.

Some of the flowered chintz cardigans worn with light crepe de chine frock show a tracery of gold threads outlining the figures of the chintz and one such cardigan was also edged with fine gold braid—down front, along the hem and at the edges of the sleeves.

Navy blue chiffon polka-dotted in white is a material that has been used to make a charming summer frock, and the woman who plans to make something distinctive for warm weather might well select this material. One such frock was made with plain straight bodice and a skirt of three gathered ruffles. It was worn over a navy blue crepe slip.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

Sunday, May 22, 1927.

(Copyright, 1927, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Friendly stars have power to-day, according to astrology, which reads good luck in the stars.

It is a rule under which mind and spirit should benefit. Expansion of ideas is supposed to be encouraged by the sway.

The clergy should profit greatly by the trend of events that are foreshadowed for the remainder of the year.

Again men and women will turn toward religion and philosophy, it is foretold, and new leaders of thought will gain followings.

Secret antagonisms among persons of differing faiths are forecast and important organizations of men will protect ancient knowledge, the seers prophesy.

This should be an auspicious day for writing letters or for setting one's financial records in order.

There is a good sign for authors who will command respectful hearing and will produce real literature in the current year.

This is read as a lucky day for social contacts. It is even promising for visits to relatives. Duty calls should be fortunate.

While this configuration prevails good news may be expected and there is likely to be ability to see the bright side of what is in measure disappointing.

Financial matters should be encouraging to-day, which presages large profits for bankers and for capitalists.

Mergers of large business enterprises are foretold and it is probable that railroad corporations will benefit.

The evening should be a propitious time to associate with persons whose favor it is desirable to assure.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the prospect of travel within the year and there may be good news regarding property tied up.

Children born on this day are likely to be exceedingly keen and intelligent. They should succeed in managing financial matters.

Monday, May 23, 1927.

(Copyright, 1927, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Astrologers read this as a treacherous day in planetary direction. Sinister stars dominate.

Discontent and restlessness are supposed to be encouraged while this sway prevails and it is wise not to act on impulse.

The rule tends to trouble in industries and even to possible strikes, owing to a disposition toward fault-finding.

There is likely to be much double dealing revealed in business and social matters, since Neptune is in an aspect supposed to encourage deceit.

Because of an apparent decay of old standards of honesty there will be movement toward reforms that will re-establish a strict code in human relations, the seers foretell.

While this configuration prevails women should be quiescent and should delay important initiative.

All the signs appear to presage for women great public activities in the future, but they will do well to prepare for them unobtrusively now.

The seers predict that women are to gain greatly in beauty and that America soon will attain types that are physically perfect.

While the American body is to develop it is to be the symbol of a tremendous evolution in intelligence, astrologers prophesy.

To-day is not a fortunate time for making engagements to marry or for reposing confidence in suitors.

The rule of the stars is read as tending toward confusion and uncertainty in politics and it is adverse to women's ambitions.

Persons whose birthdate it is may be rather uneventful, but short journeys probably will break the monotony.

Children born on this day may be idealists who make their dreams come true. All subject to this sign are likely to be popular.

SAINT and SINNER

When Bob, with Faith by his side, tried to drive his car to the parking place opposite the courthouse, he found Courthouse Square so jammed with a milling mob of people, afoot and in cars, that he was forced to park three blocks from the building in which the drama, entitled "The State versus Cherry Lane Wiley," was being enacted. A mounted policeman plunged through the dense throng to clear a path for Cherry's sister and Bob at the street crossing, and two unmounted officers were required to escort them up the walk leading to the courthouse and through the mob that was literally storming the locked doors of the room in which the trial was being held.

Cherry, the beautiful little star of this sordid drama of real life, had had just sufficient warning of Churchill's intention to put her on the stand that afternoon to change, during the lunch hour, to the costume which had long since been decided upon by Churchill as the most effective for the stern business of courting sympathy from the jury.

Faith slipped into her seat, breathless and disheveled after her battle with the mob, just as Churchill was whispering his final word of encouragement to his client before she took the stand.

"Oh, Faith! I thought you weren't going to get back in time," Cherry turned from her lawyer to seize her sister's hand. "Kiss me, Faith, darling, and—and pray for me! Mr. Churchill says it's up to me now—oh, I'm afraid!" Her voice broke and suddenly the bright head dropped upon Faith's shoulder.

"Just remember every minute that you're innocent, darling," Faith whispered, her lips moving against the copper-and-gold curls.

Churchill bent over them, gently took Cherry's hand from Faith's, assisted the shrinking little figure to rise, and led her to the witness chair. It was an expert bit of stage management, for against Churchill's great bulk Cherry's body was like that of a small child.

There had been little need of Churchill's terse command, "Remember to look wide-eyed and innocent, keep your voice sweet and low but distinct, and for God's sake, don't lose your temper," for Cherry, no matter how much she might have tried, could not have looked anything but childish, wide-eyed, and innocent. As she stood beside the witness chair, her tiny, white hand upraised to take the oath, the wisdom of Churchill's choice of a costume was obvious. Faith had made the dress according to a design approved by the astute lawyer, and before it had been finished, Churchill had fussily superintended the fitting, ruthlessly overruling Cherry's objection to an unfashionably long skirt.

As she raised her wide golden eyes to gaze toward heaven when taking her solemn oath, a shaft of sunlight from a dingy courtroom window turned her curls to a blaze of glory. A startled gasp of profound admiration rose from the densely packed audience.

That codeless myriad of precedent
That wilderness of single instances."

The root idea of our word law comes rom the Teutonic term lag or lawge, o lay a thing down and keep it still, tationary, changeless, i.e., a common ule of conduct binding on all sorts and onditions of men and to be administerd without fear, favor, or affection. In ne regard the term is a misnomer; nstead of being changeless its changes ave been multitudinous, but on the hole without detracting from or alterng in any degree the primary principles f justice and fair play which characerize the custom from the very begining. It has shown itself to be adaptale to meet and suit the changing conitions of society and therein lies perps its chief strength and utility. A ode is apt to be inflexible, inadaptable, nd inexorable, while our system has ver shown itself sufficiently elastic to eet the varying requirements of the ges.

But whence come those customs, the asis of our jurisprudence, in the first nstance? We must conclude there was o first instance; custom is a creature of low growth, the result of combined isdom and experience. Our Common w is the progeny of no single race, eople, or nation; as our blood is mixed nd our nation composite, as our langue is derived from many sources, so our w is of mingled origin, of composite rigin and character. To make this lear and secure even a partial history f our law, we must glance back over he history of the British Isles, the radle of our great race, for the past two housand years. Twenty centuries ince, England was peopled by the anient Britons, a Celtic race, whom ulius Caesar with his legions subdued, nd briefly describes in his memoirs. mperial Rome ruled the island for early five hundred years and as far as e can judge, ruled it firmly and well nd sowed the seeds of Roman civiliza-ion among the people of the island. oman influence was indelibly stamped pon the minds and habits of the ritish people, and Roman law and gic, order and organization are a eritage to Britain from the Imperial ity. When Rome itself was threatened y the invading Goths, the Roman egions were withdrawn in A. D. 410 rom Britain, taking with them some 5,000 British soldiers to assist in the efence of the Imperial city.

The Romans had no sooner gone than he Scots from Ireland, and the Picts om Scotland, cast envious eyes on he unprotected and depleted inhabitnts of England, and harried its people ith ceaseless raids and warfare. The ritons, unable to repel these assaults, sked assistance from their neighbours, he Jutes, a suicidal policy indeed. hese Jutes under Hengist and Horsa heir Chieftains did, it is true, repel the avaders, but turned and became hostile avaders themselves, no less ruthless han the Picts and Scots. Some wenty-five years later the greed of lunder led forces of another Teutonic ribe, the Saxons, to rob and ravage ritish territory, and they too, were ollowed not long after by still another band of invaders, the Engles or Angles, which last were ultimately the most influential of all in moulding the destinies of our Mother Land.

It is interesting to note that it was not till well on in the sixth century when an Engle, Angle, or Englishman as now called, first set his foot on the sacred soil of what is now England. These three bands of invaders, Jutes, Saxons and Engles, all came to Britain from what is now Schleswig-Holstein, a part of modern Denmark, though all were part and parcel of the great Teutonic people of Central Europe. These three quarrelled intermittently with each other, but their main efforts were directed against the Celtic Britons, a stupendous struggle between these two great races. The Britons finally sought the aid of the Danes who came to their assistance, and repeating the history of former invasions succeeding in subduing all predecessors and made themselves masters of the land. Their great King Canute reached the height of Danish dominion and influence, but, they too were finally overpowered and driven out by a combination of Teutonic forces. The remnant of Celtic Britons withdrew to the wilds of Wales and Cornwall, Devon and Somerset, still largely populated by their descendants, and a succession of Anglo-Saxon rulers reigned until in turn defeated by Duke William, the Norman Conqueror.

I mention all these details to show the multiplicity of forces at work, the numerous peoples combining to make the modern English people, and the various legal ideals and methods of administration, that must have combined to form what is know known as the British Constitution, and this famous congeries of customs, the English Common Law. I say must, because it is not at all clear what actually did take place during those long centuries of constant struggle and bloodshed. It must be borne in mind that the Roman period was one of literature, which was succeeded by the period spoken of, when letters were unknown and is essentially an age of tradition. This covered about five hundred years and was of course followed by another age of letters, or literature, which has increased and developed to our own time.

But during all these centuries from the Roman invasion, and indeed before, minds and forces were at work, unwritten laws or rules were formed, recognized, and obeyed, and some elements of our Common law, varying of course in degree, came not from one alone, but developed from a combination of all. In this way we become the heirs of Briton, Roman, Jute, Saxon, Angle, Dane, and later, the Norman. We owe to each a debt and to no one alone can all the credit be given.

I think it is generally recognized that the greatest determining legal force was that of the Engles or English, and probably the least that of the ancient Britons. With the latter I am not wholly in agreement, for while it is true that their history is largely lost in the mists of ages, so that we must rely largely on tradition, yet tradition is not wholly without value, or underlying truth. It probably has had more to do with forming national character than authenticated history. National tradition indicates national aspiration and is a key to character, both national and individual.

The poetry of Homer is, of course, traditional, i.e., not written in the first instance, for its author could not and did not write, but he composed those wondrous verses, and recited them to his people, who in turn learned and recited them, the elders to the young, and in this way were transmitted through the generations what are probably the greatest poems known to humanity, and which were the inspiration and genius of the Great Grecian people. Similarly, the work of the Scotch bards, as portrayed by Sir Walter Scott, was purely tradition, but who shall say it had no basis of fact. It surely had, and, whether fact or fancy, inspired the Scotch with their great ideals of later days, and formed a basis of Scottish character.

The same thing applies to our ancient Celtic British ancestors, who exerted an indelible influence on our race, though probably not so much from the legal standpoint as upon the national and artistic tendencies of our people. Many years ago it was said by a great historic philosopher that there would have been no great painting, no great music, no great poetry, or indeed none of the greatest literature produced by our people, had it not been for the Celtic admixture in our blood and character. This may not be absolutely true, but without doubt it is very largely so, and yet the life and history of this people is largely a tradition. Macaulay said that all these characters, such as Vortigern and Boadicea, Henrist and Horsa, Arthur and Lancelot, Percival and Galahad, Merlin and Taliesin, were probably, or possibly all, mere myths and of purely legendary character. Possibly, perhaps, but probably most certainly not; as to this point we do not have to rely wholly upon tradition. We have the "History of British Kings" written by Geoffrey of Monmouth, amplified and adorned by the Norman poet Robert Mace, and subsequently enlarged and clarified by the English priest, Layamon, all written in the Norman and early Plantagenet periods. We have corroboration of these so-called histories in the French literature of the same date. It has been said that even these books were largely traditional. Perhaps so, to some extent, but he is a very rash man who will deny to them a large modicum of historic truth.

All this was consolidated and modernized by Sir Thomas Mallory's monumental work, which was so highly regarded that it was by universal request one of the first books printed in English by Caxton. Caxton's own preface to his edition of this book is intensely interesting and illuminating. These books have taught our people the ideals of courtesy, chivalry, and Christianity, as are found no where else in our literature (except, of course, Holy Writ), and have been the inspiration of many of our artists and poets. This age has permeated, illumined and inspired our literature as has no other theme. Spencer essayed to portray it; Milton dreamed over its beauty, but it remained for Wagner, in music and in poetry, for Tennyson, to give us the most satisfactory modern interpretation of the life and thought of this people and period. The traditional origin of this race as given by Geoffrey is interesting. Both nations and men in the childhood of humanity fondly claimed divine origin, or failing that, descent from mighty heroes. Greek heroes claimed descent from Zeus or Athene. Rome named as the founder and patriarch of its people, Aeneas, the mighty Trojan warrior, hence the recognition of Virgil's Aeneid as their National epic. Hengist and Horsa above spoken of, were declared the grandsons of the Norse Woden, the great God of War. All legendary, of course, but all indicating national impulse, pride and ambition. Little wonder, therefore, that our ancient Britons evolved an epic origin for their kings and themselves.

Geoffrey tells at length of the life and adventures of a grandson of Ascanius, son of Aeneas, both well known Trojan heroes and Virgilian characters. This grandson, Brut or Britte by name grew to manhood, a brave warrior and wise counsellor. After various wanderings about the Mediterranean, for he delighted in his ships and the sea (as have British heroes ever since), and after many fierce fights with various enemies, he desired a fixed place of abode for himself, his wife, children and followers.

To relieve his uncertainty and secure divine directions he retired to a temple sacred to the three Gods, Jove, Mercury and Diana. In the Holy place, with twelve elders surrounding him, he poured out a libation to the Gods and made prayer to them ending in the following words:

"Tell me what lands Thy will it is we dwell in,
What sure abode: Lo, there to Thee for ever
Temples I vow, and choirs of holy maidens."

That night in dream the Goddess stood before him, speaking as follows:

"Brut—past the relams of Gaul, beneath the sunset
Lieth an Island, girt about by ocean,
Guarded by ocean—erst the haunt of giants,
Desert of late, and meet for this, thy people.
Seek it. For there is thine abode for ever,
There by thy sons again shall Troy be builded,
There of thy blood shall Kings be born, hereafter
Sovran in every land the wide world over."

A promising prophesy indeed and a future well worth seeking. Nothing daunted he set sail to seek this unknown isle, and after many dangers of shipwreck and buffeting of great billows, he reached his promised land, and he with his band of heroes became the fathers of their adopted country. In honor of their brave and wise leader, Brut or Britte, the land was called Britain, the people Britons, and their tongue the British speech.

The people lived, flourished and multiplied, worshipping heathen Roman Gods, and later the Gods of the Oak Tree. Then a strange and beautiful tale is told of the introduction of Christianity among those primeval Britons. This is really the legend of the Holy Grail, by art, music and poetry, made fairly familiar to all. We recall how Joseph of Arimathea lent a beautiful cup, set with gems, for the last supper of our Lord with his faithful few the night before the crucifixion, how while our Saviour hung upon the Cross, Joseph, kneeling at His feet caught in this same cup or grail some drops of blood from His sacred side; how this blood did not congeal, or die, but kept ever living, ever beating, ever throbbing, as if pulsating from His loving heart, how it had many magic qualities, how it could be seen only by those pure in heart, how the Romans tried to rob him of his priceless treasure, and how to save it he too, with friends and followers, set sail and after many long voyages, under divine guidance and protection of the Grail, he reached the southern shore of Britain.

He determined to find a suitable place on which to build a Church as a receptacle of the Holy vessel, and a sacred place for worship of God and the risen Christ. He reached and climbed what is now known as Glastonbury Tor, to many known as Weary All Hill, whence he had a wondrous view of the beautiful surrounding landscape. This he determined should be the site of his sanctuary, and stopping to rest, drove his staff into the ground which marvellously began to bud and flower, a token of the Divine approval of the location. This staff, now a tree, grew and flourished, but unlike other trees bloomed twice a year, once in spring time and again at Christmas tide, "Mindful of our Lord;" as Tennyson describes it, hence still known as the Christmas thorn. This was the first Christian Church in Britain, its successor being now Glastonbury Abbey; within sight later on was the wondrous palace and city of Caerleon, the seat of King Arthur, who fought and won so many furious fights with the Danish invaders; also near by lies the magic isle of Avalon—"Where falls not hail, nor rain, nor any snow," where Arthur wished to retire "to heal me of my grievous wound."

Our early ancestors accepted all this in its entirety, but it is not necessary for us to do so to be impressed with the devotion and patriotism so beautifully delineated. Be all this as it may, there is no doubt that for many centuries Christian worship was held and celebrated at Glastonbury, and in recent years excavations on the hill-side have abundantly shown that there existed a church, and churches of great antiquity, almost certainly the oldest in the land. There is also no doubt that Christianity existed in England long before the advent of St. Augustine; we find various historical evidences of this fact, and that two distinct churches, or branches of the church, existed in England at a very early date. If proof be required, it is supplied by authentic accounts of a great theological or ecclesiastical controversy between them.

But through all these centuries of change and conflict, habits were being formed and customs certified, and the customs we find certified in the Norman and early Plantagenet period were the result not only of the combined wisdom of the people, but of all the peoples and races involved in those bitter years of struggle and extermination. But although it is difficult, indeed impossible to determine which people, if any, were mainly responsible for the formation and assertion of customs which became law, there is little or no doubt that for the promulgation and administration of this custom law, the Anglo-Saxon element had the largest part, and of this the Angle or English element deserves the greater credit. They seem to have established the first courts and made the earliest records. This, however, was not done till the later part of the period spoken of; of the early part there is no record of legal procedure, if such existed at all. King Alfred proclaimed what may be called the earliest English code of laws. He was a great king, a brave, able defender of his people, and an impartial and fearless administrator of the existing laws. Unfortunately, his book of law has been lost, though its existence for centuries has been amply proved and many quorations made from it still exist. The next great law-giver was Edward the Confessor; he was adored by the English people and a persistent public clamor for the retention of his laws was made throughout the whole Norman period; this clamor was largely assented to for the sake of peace, the result being that our law is English, not Norman, though administered by Norman lawyers and Roman priests, and in the Norman-French tongue, and many French expressions still adorn our legal diction. The Confessor's laws were finally assured and assented to by the Magna Charta, and it must be remembered these written laws were but a compilation of ancient customs, not of our element alone but of Briton, Saxon, English, Dane, and Norman, the result of their combined wisdom and experience.

The early Anglo-Saxon courts were most communal and were:

1. The Township Court.

2. The Court of the Hundreds, probably comprising two or more townships, the name given from the number of heads of families, either kindred or neighbors.

3. The Shire Court, presided over by the Shire Reeve, or Sheriff, and,

4. Lastly, the Folk Moot or Court which ultimately developed into the King's Court or 'Aula Regis.'

These communal courts, and especially the first two named, were more of the nature of a public meeting of the people of the community, rather than a court of modern days. They met, discussed and decided what the universal custom was and applied it to the individual cases arising before them. These courts were largely supplanted at an early date, and those of the Sheriff and even of the Barons later, by the exercise of the Royal prerogative; there was constant conflict as to the powers and jurisdiction of Royal and Baronial Courts; but the old system of adherence to ancient custom still prevailed, even under the changed conditions.

The wisdom of this is abundantly shown by the experience of more modern days. Custom is a regulation self-imposed on and by the community itself, as opposed to regulations imposed by force from without. For this reason it has a greater force, a more continuous sanction as it expresses the will of the community in which it originates; it is the common will, the best judgment of the people and all the people, hence more cheerfully obeyed and observed than laws decreed by royal or military authority, or even those enacted by our very prolific legislatures. All law is really but an alternative for physical force, and if a law is not respected, if it does not commend itself to the good sense of the community, even when strongly enforced, there will be disorder, evasion, and contempt, and intermittently a return to physical force.

Our English Common Law is these customs of ancient days, though modified by Roman rule and Norman science, also by ecclesiastic administration and the Mosaic code, which has its roots deep in the past. The laws of all primitive peoples so far as we can ascertain have a strange similarity. Even the Old Testament code does not differ very materially from many others we read about.

The outstanding feature of them all is private revenge for wrongs endured, the vendetta instead of a national or tribal public law.

In the earliest social life we do not find what we call modern civil law as distinguished from criminal. All their law was apparently either criminal or police law. The vendetta was the usual, indeed only law, as in Sicily and Montenegro until recently, and in parts of the Balkans and Afghanistan even now. If the injured person is dead or maimed, therefore unable himself to take vengeance, the responsibility devolved upon his kindred and was looked upon as a sacred duty. This applied almost indiscriminately to all wrongs, to the killing of a man, either intentionally or innocently by accident, and to the trespass of a cow on a cornfield. It all resolved itself into personal or family revenge, a private, persistent warfare, and so remained until the church and state combined in declaring a scale or degree of wrong affecting the state or public weal, and discriminated between a private wrong and a wrong against the community. The latter were designated as crimes, and then arose the first and chief distinction between civil and criminal law. Heretofore all offences were looked upon as private wrongs demanding personal satisfaction. All offences were what the Norman lawyers designated as torts: now those against the common public interest became crimes, for which the state decreed punishment, and for private personal wrongs or torts damages were awarded to the person injured. The change from crime to tort was a vastly important era in our jurisprudence. In the consideration of the scope and influence of English Common law it is interesting to note that in Great Britain, Scotland is an exception, like Quebec in Canada, and Louisiana in the United States, in that none of these three recognize or adopt its. Very naturally a great antagonism towards England and all things English arose in Scotland in the Edwardian wars in the 13th and 14th centuries. Then, too, France was her frequent ally against English aggression and she evolved in her jurisprudence a hybrid France-Roman system of law wholly peculiar to Scotland.

Even so, however, this system has been largely influenced and affected by degrees by the Common law, probably because of the common interest and propinquity of the two peoples.

On the other hand, Ireland and Wales are under the Common law and always felt greatly aggrieved over it, especially Ireland. In the very early days, Ireland had for a long period a very superior system known as the Brehon law, also unwritten, but said by high authority to have been superior to the contemporary systems of either England or Scotland, by which conflicting claims were equitably settled by a Brehon or judge. The Irish were deprived of a system of which they were both fond and proud, and a foreign, odious, English law imposed upon them. This change was made by King John, of evil memory, and resulted in bitter and vengeful hatred for centuries, but which now I presume is largely forgotten.

Then, too, looking backward, and a long way backward, we see an assembly of men solemnly investigating certain matters, and because they have taken an oath, are described as jurors, the assembly of a jury. These gentlemen were originally neighbors, called in from the immediate neighborhood to investigation and report. They were really witnesses, not judges. And their evidence became their report, or verdict. They usually knew little or nothing about it personally but acquired all possible information as best they could, and their deliverance therefore chiefly founded on suspicion only, though strengthened by evidence which too was mostly hearsay. By a gradual evolution we see the jury changing from witnesses to judges, hearing and determining from evidence adduced before them, the now prevalent system. Their duty was based originally on a royal decree directing settlement to be made by twelve knights instead of the ordeal of battle. The jurors must be lawful men, "legitimi homines," and each must be tried by his peers.

The baron or knight who knew the law and fear of God could judge each other, but no villein or other of the people might judge knight or clerk.

The duty was at times accompanied by danger. An instance is a case in the reign of Edward III., who, being convinced the jury had "taken a false oath, adjudged that they lose their free law for ever, their chattels forfeited, their lands and tenements to be seized into the king's hands, their wives and children to be thrust out and their houses and lands wasted."

No wonder jury service was not looked upon as a sinecure then any more than at present. Disagreement also was not encouraged. A jury reported to one of Edward II.'s judges they could not agree, who replied, "You cannot agree?" Then to the marshal, "Go put them in a house till Monday and let them not eat, nor drink." Monday, being some days distant, the narrator naively tells us that on the same day about vesper time they agreed. In more modern days they are allowed to disagree at the expense of the litigants, who must pay for the new trial.

The disappearance of the old Anglo-Saxon courts, and those of the sheriff and barons, being slowly supplanted by the increasing demands of royal prerogative is an interesting subject. The smaller jurisdictions gradually gave way to the larger, and notwithstanding the check on King John by the barons in Magna Charta, later legislation more than restored the balance of authority.

The underlying reason of all this was in the first place, a matter of revenue from the Courts. Both Barons and King desired the perquisites and royalty in the end prevailed. All this and the institution and purposes of the various modern English Courts, are a matter of great interest, but this paper is already too long.

Looking backward over so many years, we have seen something of the origin and development of our Common law which comes to us as part of our heritage, a heritage of untold value. Its growth and use seem coterminous and closely allied with human freedom, for it is undeniable that freedom flourishes most where the Common law prevails.

Though not philosophic, it is adaptable, though not scholastic it is elastic, conducive to the highest and best freedom of humanity. Though perhaps not always logical it contains and consists of something more valuable than either logic or philosophy; it is the composite reason of many peoples in many lands, and in many ages; it is the composite and concentrated, may I not say even the consecrated common sense of our fathers, still living and ever ruling in our new, as well as in the old Mother Land.

Looking backward over the whole Christian era it is our firm conclusion that English Common law is the pride and glory of our British people, and that our British Empire is the founder and protector of true freedom the wide world over.

No More Indigestion
After Mrs. Monette Took "Fruit-a-tives"

MRS. O. MONETTE

There's comfort for all who suffer from indigestion in this grateful note written by Mrs. Omer Monette, Montreal: "I hardly dare take 'Fruit-a-tives,' fearing my dyspepsia wouldn't vanish," Mrs. Monette frankly confesses, "but finally took two boxes. Now I can eat well and recommend 'Fruit-a-tives' to all my friends as the best remedy for dyspepsia." Mrs. Monette expresses the sentiment of thousands of people whose digestion came quickly back to normal under the healing influence of "Fruit-a-tives."

This wondeful medicine is a combination of intensified fresh fruit juices and tonics. Indigestion and biliousness often are due merely to lazy bowels, liver and kidneys. "Fruit-a-tives" overcomes these conditions gently and naturally. Get a box from your druggist, 25c or 50c. Relish your food again as Mrs. Monette does.

Every woman should use Dodd's Kidney Pills. They are the finest tonic in the world because, acting directly on the kidneys, they tone up those organs to do their full work of straining all the impurities out of the blood.

SAFEGUARDING MILK
BY PASTEURIZATION
(Report of M.H.O., Toronto, Continued from Thursday

The foregoing is a full endorsation of the statement in Bulletin No. 56, of the Bureau of Public Health at Washington, in which Professor Kastle states that proper pasteurization does not exert any deleterious influence upon the chemical or nutritive value of milk.

These facts have been demonstrated in many places by actual feeding experiences. One occasionally hears the statement made, even yet, that pasteurized milk produces scurvy or rickets. To this we may say that thousands of children under the supervision of careful and competent observers have been reared successfully on milk so treated without the slightest sign of scurvy or rickets.

Professor Roland Godfrey Freeman, of New York, demonstrated some years ago that such instances of scurvy and rickets have, in his experience, invariably been traced to mixed feedings and that heated milk has, in his judgment, no bearing on this matter.

However, there are a few physicians even yet who hold the opinion that raw milk has valuable properties that are destroyed by heat, and, therefore, oppose pasteurization. Their objections are antiquated and have long since been disapproved. Of interest in this connection is a recent publication of the Local Government Board of England on "Public Health and Medical Subjects," in which a summary is given by Dr. E. J. Lane-Clayton: "Of the available data in regard to the value of boiled milk as food for infants and young animals." In this report the following conclusion, which is absolutely in harmony with the data obtainable from both experimental and clinical observations, is presented: "When an animal is fed upon the milk of another species (which is precisely what is done when we feed human babies on cow's milk) such small differences, as have been found in the nutritive value of raw and boiled milk, have been in favor of boiled milk."

These observations have been recently confirmed by investigators in Europe and America, and yet boiling is going considerably further than we deem necessary—the boiling point being 212 degrees and our method of pasteurization being only 145 degrees.

LINDBERGH AND HIS PLANE

THREE BLOCKS ARE IMPROVED

Grounds at St. Peter's Cathedral and St. Mary's Convent Beautified.

VERY ATTRACTIVE.

Following out the idea of beautifying the city in every possible way, the grounds at St. Peter's Cathedral and St. Mary's Convent, and the grounds adjoining the Bishop's and the priests' residences, have been getting their annual going-over. The tulips in the Cathedral grounds, and those lining the walk at the priests' residences, make a bright spot of color at the brow of the hill, and St. Mary's Convent grounds have had a thorough renovation. The fence surrounding the playground was removed some time ago, and a modern substitute erected. This spring, the playground itself, and the lawn in front of the main entrance, have been levelled and sodded, the hedge removed, and two large circular flower beds planted. The whole effect of the three city blocks involved is very attractive and pleasing.

STORES OPEN BEFORE JULY 1

Commission Announces Location of Toronto Stores—No Frosted Windows.

BUSINESS TO BE OPEN.

TORONTO, May 21.—Chief Commissioner D. B. Hanna and his fellow-Commissioners, Hon. Dr. Manion and Stewart McClenaghan, considered the time ripe yesterday afternoon, and made a series of announcements respecting the location of stores, which will be opened, as the Chief Commissioner put it, "before the date of Canada's Jubilee on July 1." The date of June 1 has been stated as the day upon which the Toronto stores will open, but last night there was no actual certainty as to that. There is much work yet to be done, and the stocking up of the stores after the workmen leave them will also take some time. Chief Commissioner Hanna said that every effort is being made to prepare the stores for use as speedily as possible, but he could not fix a definite date at which they would be open to the public to make purchases.

No Frosted Windows.

"Business at the stores will be done in the full light of day," said Mr. Hanna in announcing that there will be no frosted windows or curtains to hide purchasers from the public gaze. Regarding the printing of the Price lists, the Chief Commissioner said beer "would be sold a little over cost, or what the ordinary merchant would call cost."

Location of Stores.

After announcing the Toronto locations, which will be ready for the first day of general sale, the Commissioners said that in Western Ontario the same day the following places will have stores in operation: London, Sarnia, Brantford, Kitchener, Windsor, and possibly Ford City.

Toronto will have stores at the south-east corner of Church and Lombard Streets, 402 Parliament Street, south-west corner of Gerrard Street and Pape Avenue, 170 Danforth Avenue, 615 Yonge Street, 969 Bloor Street West, 1271 Dundas Street West, 1271 Queen Street West, 1881 Queen Street East and 2222 Dundas Street West, which is the store nearest to the dry riding of High Park.

Information For Press.

"This Board will be most happy to furnish any information the press may desire," said D. B. Hanna, Chief Commissioner of the Liquor Control Board, last evening, in seeking to remove an unfortunate impression that had been created regarding the withholding of news of the Board's decisions.

Speaking, also, for his colleagues, Hon. Dr. Manion and Stewart McClenaghan, he assured members of the press that there was no reason why there should not be the fullest co-operation, and he went further, and invited help in solving the big problems which are already presenting themselves.

The Chief Commissioner told Manager A. H. Birmingham of the desire of the Board in this respect, and he promised to see that his staff assisted members of the press in carrying out their duties at the headquarters of the Liquor Control Board on University Avenue. "As far as possible, we will communicate frankly and fairly the facts, and the policy adopted on any question, when requested to do so," declared Mr. Hanna.

Flier's Mother Fights Battle Alone at Home Hears With Relief That He Is Near Ireland

DETROIT, Mich., May 21 (United Press) — Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh whose boy, Charles, is flying to Paris, the popular hero of the hour, fought her battle alone to-day, just as Charlie is doing. Secluded in her little home here she slept late having retired at 10 p.m. after hearing that her boy had swooped between the hills at St. John's, Newfoundland, and plunged over the Atlantic.

She was preparing for her breakfast when the United Press brought her the confirmed news of a ship sighting the lone flier who is her son out at sea some 200 miles west of Ireland.

"What a God-sent miracle, I hope it's true," she said fervently.

Yesterday she had spent with her chemistry class at Cass Technical High School, refusing to hear any reports about the flight. She had gone home from school and remained indoors, as she planned to do to-day, with only her close relatives around her.

Apparently Charles Lindbergh inherited from his mother the philosophy which teaches him to keep himself alone when the strain is greatest.

RED HOT PIPES CAUSE OF FIRE

Firemen Forced To Tear Up Floor at Brock Street House.

ANOTHER FALSE ALARM.

At 8.28 this morning the Fire Department was called to a chimney fire at 51 Brock street where small damage was done to the floor when it was necessary for the firemen to tear it away. The fire was caused by overheated pipes. Improper ventilation made the pipes red hot, setting fire to the flooring.

Chief Gimblett wishes to call the attention of the citizens to any firetraps that they may have in their residences. If they suspect anything that may result in a fire he requests that communication be made with him and he will go to the respective houses to inspect them to see if any real danger might arise.

At 4.02 p.m. yesterday someone pulled box 31, which turned out to be a false alarm after all the apparatus of the Department arrived on the scene. Chief Gimblett thinks that it was probably some children and warns the parents in the city to tell their children the danger of this practice, for the first culprit caught in the act of pulling a box for a false alarm will receive a heavy penalty at the hands of the law, because an act of this kind endangers the lives of the firemen.

In Zuzuland the air is so clear that objects of fair size can be seen seven or eight miles by starlight.

A fog in the Atlantic ocean is generally about 30 miles in diameter.

SEPARATE SCHOOLS KEEP EMPIRE DAY

Programme of Patriotic Songs and Addresses is Arranged.

In line with the celebration of Empire Day, which is taking place in the Public schools of the city, a similar commemoration is taking place in the various Separate schools, which have prepared a programme of patriotic songs, exercises and addresses on Confederation and the progress of the Dominion since 1867. Through an error, this information was not incorporated with the report on Empire Day celebration which appeared in yesterday's paper.

ILLUSTRATED TALK ON NORTH COUNTRY

F. L. Roy Tells of Trips He Made in New Ontario Last Year.

An interesting lecture was given in the auditorium of George Street Sunday School last night by Fred L. Roy on the wonders of the northern country, namely Hudson Bay and the district around Lake Timagami. The pictures shown by Mr. Roy were either taken by himself or one of his party and therefore he gave a running story as the pictures flashed upon the screen. These pictures were taken by the new motion picture scenic camera, and although the screen was a trifle small the hall was not filled to capacity and thus everyone was able to get a good view of every picture shown.

Before beginning his lecture Mr. Roy told the audience that all the pictures were made from an amateur point of view and that when taking them had no idea that they would be shown outside his own home, but at the request of many people who saw them at his house he has shown them at different clubs and finally at the lecture held last night.

The picture of the Timagami district was taken last summer, showing everything at the height of the holiday season. Scenes of the different towns on the road to the north country, including Orillia and Huntsville, were shown, with their different sites for restful tourist camps, which are free of any charge for camping over night or even longer. "Here," said Mr. Roy, 'we met many interesting people who were all out for a real vacation and were finding it up in those particular picturesque spots."

Going farther north scenes of cabins were shown and the small huts of the fire rangers, always on the look-out for any trace of the Fire Demon that lurks in the forests of the vast ranges of the north country. Famous mines such as Kirkland Lake and Tech Hughes were shown and also the town of the former.

The picture of winter scenes in Hudson Bay were taken last winter by Mr. Roy and a French nobleman when they took a trip away back in the north by dog sleighs from a point where the railroad ends. Their farthest camp was situated forty-two miles from any railroad or town. Mr. Roy told of the great pride that the northerners take in their dogs. Dogs in that country, he stated, were worth the price of a good horse here.

Then pictures were shown of the great trek from civilization to the tiny cabin in the woods. In speaking of the cabin Mr. Roy remarked that it was but fourteen feet square, and all they had to eat was a meat and flour diet for Indian women had no idea of other methods of cooking whatsoever.

Although the thermometer was sometimes thirty-five degrees below zero Mr. Roy remarked that they never felt cold for the exercise taken up there was so brisk that it did not seem to affect a person in the same way.

This concluded the lecture on the north country, but Mr. Roy also showed some local views that were very interesting.

A musical programme was also given, solos being rendered by Mrs. Doig and Mrs. Turner, with accompaniment by Miss Gwen. Donnelly and Mrs. Lewis. A male voice quartette composed of the Messrs. Cunningham, Thompson, Bryan and Lillow also sang two very good numbers. Little Miss Maynard gave a whistling solo, astounding the audience with her talent in that respect.

The Rev. J. E. Todd, chairman for the evening, thanked all the participants in making it a success. A vote of thanks was moved by the president of the Ladies' Aid, Mrs. Smith, and seconded by J. C. Smith.

Drive a CHRYSLER "70"

That's the way to find out how much better it is

WE'LL gladly arrange to give you a real ride in a Chrysler "70"—you to drive the car in the way you are accustomed to drive.

Such a demonstration, we are confident, will convince you of its genuine superiority.

That's the sure way to learn the results of the constant progressiveness which maintains today's finer Chrysler "70" as far ahead of its field as on the day of its introduction.

Not by a brief half-hour's ride over a prescribed route. Not by just a smart dash over smooth concrete. Not alone by its lightning spurts of acceleration through traffic. Not only by experiencing its marvelous riding qualities over cobblestone or ruts.

But by all of these things in an extended drive—with you at the wheel.

We can recite to you the advantages of its speed of 70 miles plus, its astonishing pickup of 5 to 25 miles in 7¼ seconds.

We can tell you what its scientifically balanced 7-bearing crankshaft and impulse neutralizer contribute toward greater smoothness; how much more easily you ride because of its low chassis design, its unique spring suspension and its Watson Stabilators; what greater handling ease results from its pivotal steering; and how much safer you feel because of its four-wheel hydraulic brakes.

But the real way for you actually to discover these things for yourself is to learn them by this kind of a test.

Come in today. Let us place a new, finer Chrysler "70" at your disposal in this manner, for you to drive in your own way.

UNWEPT, UNHONORED, UNSUNG, FOUR POINT FOUR DERIDED ON ITS SECOND BIRTHDAY

No One Has Good Word To Say For Widely Heralded Beer.

ALMOST FORGOTTEN.

Hotel Men Who Made Changes Demanded By Act Are Wroth.

Two years ago today, the much-heralded 4.4 beer was released for sale in Peterborough and other towns of the province amid much metaphorical sounding of trumpets and beating of drums and with high expectations on the part of its promoters. Today the beverage is listed among the great failures of the age. Nobody has a good word for it; hotel-keepers, bar-tenders or customers.

Possibly the superstitious might find some food for thought in the fact that the inauguration of the beverage in this city was attended by a number of hitches. The arrival of the permits was delayed on the opening day. The Munro Hotel was the only place where sale commenced at the stipulated time, 8.30 on the eventful morning. Two hours later the Windsor and Albion Hotels were enabled to commence operations.

The complaint that the new liquor did not get a fair trial is one that certainly cannot be made in the case of 4.4. Provision was made for its sale either in bottles or on daught. At one hotel no fewer than seven kegs were broached within the first afternoon of the sale. Another vendor had no time to read the label until a let-up gave him a breathing spell in the afternoon. All the hotels reported brisk business, and the prediction was freely made that the 4.4 was going to bring back prosperity to the city and province.

Even then, however, there were a few complaints which were merely the distant rumblings of the coming storm. One man early on the first forenoon was heard to say, "As far as I can see it is no better than the stuff we got before. I got two bottles and they gave me heartburn."

Gives Heartburn.

Four point four has given many people the heartburn. The very mention of it is apt to give the average hotel-keeper in the province an uncanny feeling. From the Munro Hotel, where such good business was done on the first day, comes the report that the liquor is very little in demand to-day, and, worse still, its sale has had an adverse effect on the sales of soft drinks and lunches which was brisk in pre-4.4 days. At the Munro Hotel also a costly bar was torn down in compliance with the requirements of the legislation passed in connection with the introduction of the beverage — and returns were very meagre.

Al Johnston at the Windsor Hotel to-day declared the liquor had failed entirely to win the favor of the public. Nobody, he said, now deluded themselves into believing that the liquor had a potent effect. The sales were not even up to those of the two and a half per cent. beer on sale before the advent of 4.4. "It was more reasonable," he declared. "We could give a man 12 ounces for eight ounces of 4.4. There is practically no demand for it; in fact you could hardly begin to give it away. It has been a complete failure. There is absolutely no doubt of that."

This criticism was entirely endorsed by all the vendors interviewed by The Examiner. Chris Graham, seen at the Empress Hotel by an Examiner reporter, said the beverage was a joke. Nobody wanted it, he said, and from no point of view could it be regarded as a success.

Robert Maitland, manager of the Montgomery House, said that the sales of the liquor were no better to-day than they ever were. "And they were never good," he added.

Age Didn't Improve It

At the opening day when some complaints were made as to the quality, the hope was expressed by some of the drinkers that the liquid would improve with age. This hope was not realized. According to Ernest Griffin, proprietor of the Montreal House, the keeping of the liquor on draught resulted in not inconsiderable losses to the dealers on account of its aptness to deteriorate when kept for some time. People who came in for a drink complained of the quality of the liquor when taken on draught. The arrival of 4.4 killed outright the lucrative branches of trade such as soft drinks. The sales of 4.4 were not a quarter of those of two and a half per cent beer. Indeed it had killed a great deal of the trade of the country. He had tended a bar for many years and remembered when he had a turnover of 400 dollars a day in the sale of beer, but it was hopeless to look for anything like that under 4.4, especially in view of the amount of bootlegging which was prevalent. The whole liquor problem he though had been mishandled, largely by people who did not fully understand what they were about. Nor did he think that the Government Control scheme, sponsored as it was by Premier Ferguson himself, contained the solution. The restrictions with which the Act was hedged would dmilitate against its success; especially that portion which forbade the consumption of the liquor in any place other than the dwelling place of the consumer. Evidently the task of finding one who has a good word for 4.4 is about as difficult as that of finding a needle in a haystack. Four-point-four is unwept, unhonored and unsung—and also "undrunk."

FLYER CROSSES

loaded, out on the long trans-Atlantic course.

Lindbergh's Ryan Monoplane, "Spirit of St. Louis," followed a great circle in its trans-ocean trek. Through the heart of Nova Scotia it went; over Newfoundland at St. Johns and out into watery space over the broard Atlantic. An eight hundred mile fog bank greeted "Lucky" as he left the Newfoundland coast, but he plowed steadily on into it to the clear weather area promised in Government weather reports.

A Canadian Pacific liner was the first to sight him, reporting the great bird at 12.40 a.m. eastern standard time just one third of the way from Newfoundland to Ireland. Later the steamer Hilvesun definitely reported the plane going full speed 500 miles off the Irish coast. Subsequent messages from many points bore out the early report that "Lindy is over' and that the worst of his journey was past.

That the new brought a sigh of relief from end to end of the Dominion and clear across the U. S., wire reports indicated. "Lucky' had enjoyed his greatest good fortune. His plane, on which flowers dropped as he left America, was "coming through" and the flowers were flowers of the victor, not funeral tributes to the vanquished.

Germans Help.

In additon to the British squadron which escorted Lindbergh across the channel, the German North Atlantic squadron had also been ordered by the German admiralty to keep on the watch for the intrepid flier. Four British destroyers off Cobh, Ireland, also lay watching for him through the night.

Lindbergh struck rain when he reached the Irish coast, a report said but the wind was light, and flying, though unpleasant, for him after his long vigil, was not rendered more dangerous.

Afternoon papers went on the streets here to-day with jubilant lines "Lindbergh nears Paris, report aviator crossing English Channel under official escort."

He had been in the air only 27 hours at 9.51 eastern standard time to-day and was running far ahead of the schedule he had mapped out for himself. At this time he was reported near Valentia, Ireland, flying high and fast at an average speed of 100 miles an hour. "Lucky" was 900 miles from his destination at that hour.

Twenty-two thousand Nebraska club women, headed by the State Federation of Women's Clubs, have inaugurated a state wide movement to improve living conditions in Nebraska homes.

A record in quilt making is claimed for Mrs. B. F. Parker, an 86-year old woman of Brockton Mass., who has just completed a beautiful bit of needlework which has 1792 pieces in it.

BULLETINS ON THE FLIGHT

Doesn't Smoke or Drink.

The lone young eagle whose daring has thrilled the world, from all indications was winging fast before noon to-day over 1900 mile stretch of the Atlantic Ocean between Newfoundland and Ireland on his 3800 mile New York to Paris flight.

Behind him was New York and the dangerous Atlantic; before him was Paris, fame and fortune.

Captain Charles Lindbergh—"Slim" to his pals, "The Flying Fool" to his friends — quit the Newfoundland coast at 6.15 Eastern standard time last night ,and with his "Spirit of St. Louis" humming its challenge to storm and the Atlantic, the young flier entered the most hazardous stretch of his journey.

As he headed towards Newfoundland there came reports of fog but the mist soon lifted and a strong breeze arose behind him as he turned towards the Irish coast.

A compass is Capt. Linbergh's sole guide across the Atlantic .

He doesn't smoke ,drink nor chew, and his life of flying, stunting, barnstorming and rigid discipline have made him near immune to ordinary physical fatigue.

Little Food—No Protection.

B. F. Mahoney, 26 year old president of the Ryan Air Lines, builders of the "Spirit of St. Louis," to-day stated that Lindbergh is carrying two ham sandwiches, two roast beef sandwiches, and one hard boiled egg sandwich, and one gallon of water, but no coffee or liquor .The reserve rations he carries are small cakes of highly concentrated food sufficient for one week. The plane has also a device for making water out of the moisture of one's breath. The plane is not ensured and so far as Mr. Mahoney knew, Lindbergh carries no special insurance, nor has he a life preserver or a parachute.

Over County Cork.

The French Cable Company this afternoon announced receipt of official advices from the French government stating that Lindbergh was over Ireland, heading in the direction of Cork, at 5.20 this afternoon, Irish time.

This announcement coincided with receipt of an Associated Press Despatch from Belfast reporting the sighting of the plane over Dingle harbor, County Kerry, and saying that Lindbergh was headed for Cork. The time checks with the schedule of flight as computed here, and Dingle harbor is on the course as plotted by Lindbergh.

Rumored over Dover.

The naval communications office at New York gave out "for what it was worth" an unofficial report that had come to their office that Capt. Lindberg had been sighted flying over Dover England, at 11.30 this morning. When asked to divulge the source of the report the office however declined to do so.

The French Cable Company whose name had been mentioned as the source of the report that Lindbergh was over Dover, and also that he was being escorted across the channel by English fliers, said they had picked up the rumour to this effect.

Reports Confirmed.

LONDON, May 21. — The Exchange Telegraph reports that an aeroplane believed to be Lindbergh's, passed over Smerwick harbor, county Kerry, late this afternoon, headed in a southerly direction.

This would take him over Dingle Bay as previously reported, Smerwick harbor being on the other side Lingle harbor from the Atlantic.

CORK, Ireland. — Civic Guard headquarters here has received confirmation that Captain Lindbergh's New York-Paris aeroplane passed over Smerwick Harbor County Kerry, toward Cork.

Over English Channel

Despatches from three points in South-western Ireland late this afternoon confirmed that Captain Lindbergh, intrepid United States' aviator, had spanned the Atlantic ,with the most hazardous part of his New York to Paris flight behind him.

The plane was sighted by a collier off the southern Irish coast, later over Smerwick Harbor, and then over Dingle Bay.

The despatches indicate that, in leaving the Atlantic behind at Smerwick Harbor, he went south over the peninsula separating that harbor from Dingle Bay and then altered his course slightly, proceeding in a south-easterly direction toward Cork.

The distance from Dingle Bay to Paris is about 435 miles. From Dingle Bay, Lindbergh's course lies over Ireland for 75 miles to a point near Cork, whence he heads, over 160 miles of sea to the south-western tip of England, with the crossing of the English channel to Cherbourg, France. Then a run of 200 miles over France to Le Bourget flying field and the long journey is over.

Crosses French Coast.

The French Cable Company announces receipt of official advices saying Captain Lindbergh's transAtlantic plane passed over Bayeux, on the French coast at 8 o'clock tonight, French time.

Bayeux, near the coast of Seine Bay, an arm of the English Channel, is about 150 miles by air line from Paris. At the rate of speed Lindbergh is making, according to despatches thus far received, he should be at the Le Bourget flying field, his destination, in slightly more than an hour after passing Bayeux, shortly after 9 p.m. Paris time.

Paris Ready.

PARIS, May 21. Canadian Press. (3.30 p.m.) — Everything is in readiness for Captain Lindbergh's reception. The crowd at Le Bourget flying field has been thinned by a short lived storm which passed over the flying field late this aftrenoon. A very stiff breeze is blowing from the northwest, and airmen said if it continued it would make landing somewhat difficult .

By early evening big crowds gathered in front of every newspaper office waiting patiently for the posting of bulletins. They seemed heartily joyful when early advices reported him nearing the Irish coast.

The exultant cry: "He has made it!" spread rapidly from mouth to mouth this afternoon, as the waiting crowd at the flying field heard the report.

None but passenger aeroplanes took the the air, but two planes were made ready to take photographers out to meet Captain Lindbergh as soon as he was reported off the French coast to try to film him on the way to Le Bourget.

CHERBOURG, May 21.—An aeroplane, believed to be Captain Lindbergh's, passed over Cherbourg in the direction of Paris at 8.30 p.m.

Landing Conditions Good.

FLYING FIELD, Le Bourget, 8.45 p.m. — The sky was almost clear after the late afternoon rain, and Lindbergh seemed assured of a fine safe landing. The wind had fallen considerably during the evening.

Broadway's Hermit

NEW YORK, May 21—(United Press.)—John G. Tucker, 48, who lived like a hermit in the midst of the brightest and busiest centre of Broadway, has died of starvation.

In his little room in the Times Square Hotel, which he had occupied for four years without allowing another human being to enter, Tucker's body was found near neatly arranged rows of 400 empty bromo seltzer bottles. Although Tucker's eccentricity had made him an object of curiosity to the hotel employees, they learned little of him during his four years' residence. He stipulated when engaging the room that no employes should be allowed to enter it.

He said he was an accountant. Every morning he rode away in a taxi cab. Every night he returned in a taxi cab. He paid his bills.

It's Here at Last— The First Straw Hat

Who was the dashing Beau Brummel seen on George Street to-day with a straw covering on his head? Men have for the last two weeks crept into the semi-darkness after supper with a worn out straw hat to indulge in the tedious work of planting radishes or beans, or to hoe a row of potatoes, but to think that anyone would have the audacity to "step out" with a covering such as the one seen this p.m. before even the twenty-fourth of May is almost incomprehensible.

But Spring calls and who would not cast off the woollen ear laps to don a beautiful coloured bleached straw hat and defy the wind and rain. But let everyone honor the young gentleman for setting the fashion to the more backward generation who gaze at straw hats through the plate glass ,but have not, shall it be nerve?, to be among the pioneers of the straw hat season. Probaly the new style style ,according to the hatters, will be "Black Bottom Straws."

MANITOBA VOTES ON SALE OF BEER

Opinions To Be Taken On June 28 at General Election.

WINNIPEG, May 21. — (Canadian Press).—The Manitoba Provincial election will take place on Tuesday, June 28. Voters will express their opinions on the sale of beer questions at the same time. Announcement of this was made here last night by Premier John Bracken at the close of the conference of Government supporters from all constituencies.

In discussing the proposal of a system of old age pensions which was gone into at considerable length, the Premier said that it was to be introduced at a cost estimated at one million dollars a year. It should be submitted to the people by means of a referendum before being undertaken by the Government.

ARMADALE IS READY TO GO

Has a Record of 2:05¼ and Will Be Seen in Action On May 24.

Armadale is one of the many outstanding horses that will be seen in action at the Exhibition Grounds on Tuesday next. He has a record of 2.05¼ and will be in the 2.14 Class with other horses of note, such as Jacke Abbe, Alfred Elk, Jim Todd and Major Hall.

There has been an addition to the 2.14 Purse made and a very interesting and spirited event is certain.

The Peterborough Turf Club has gone to a great deal of expense and has been particularly fortunate in being able to gather together such a notable array of talent, especially in view of the counter attractions.

The club is to be congratulated on the excellence of the card which merits the support of the home talent who have been asking for holiday entertainment right here in our beautiful city.

All of the events promise considerable competition, so you had better join the throngs who will make their way to the Exhibition Grounds on Tuesday, May 24.

Under natural conditions only from 1 to 15 per cent. of fish eggs are fertilized and hatched. On the other hand by the artificial methods used in Canadian hatcheries the average proportion of fish eggs hatched runs from 50 per cent. to 95 per cent., depending on the species and the conditions under which the eggs are taken.

Setting Firecrackers Off on Street Illegal

The police department has received several complaints recently about boys setting off firecrackers in public places. Last night on George street south a horse was scared, which nearly caused a runaway.

Setting off firecrackers in public places is contrary to a city by-law and the police are determined, in the interests of public safety, to enforce the by-law.

DOGS WITH TAGS MAY NOT ROAM

Will Be Impounded If Found Running at Large.

NO RABIES IN CITY.

There has been considerable confusion lately in regard to the city dog by-law. No longer is Rover allowed to wander at will over the streets of the city, for the by-law says that all dogs not accompanied by their owners shall be impounded. Dog tags will not keep them free from the meshes of the dog catcher's net.

Other cities in Ontario have been forced to pass similar by-laws, but their reason was for a protective measure, for rabies has broken out in several districts. As far as this city is concerned, there have been no cases of rabies this year, according to R. C. Smith, Humane Society officer. Mr. Smith said that last year he had one case of rabies, but the dog affected had been imported to the city from Eastern Ontario.

TOURED U.S.A. BY MOTOR CAR

C. S. Thompson Tells of Trip Across South From Coast To Coast.

CROSSED FLOOD AREA.

C. S. Thompson, 31 Dennistoun avenue, returned this week to Peterborough after spending several months in the States during which, in company with his parents and some other relatives, he made a motor trip from St. Petersburg on the Western Coast of the Florida peninsula to San Diego in California and from there to Toronto.

Setting out from St. Petersburg on March 8, the party followed the old Spanish trail across the continent. They travelled in a high powered car and most of the equipment was carried in a two wheeled trailer, six feet long, four feet broad, and four feet high. Trailer and equipment weighed in all 1500 pounds. One side of the trailer opened out and within it was a special mattress which went a long way towards solving the problem of sleeping accommodation when none other was available. On approaching New Orleans, car, trailer, and passengers had to be ferried over no fewer than five waterways. When El Paso was reached they decided to cross the border for a brief visit to the Mexican town of Juarez, where they saw the ancient Jesuit buildings of the Guadalupe Mission, 378 years old. This building, built largely by Indians and used by the missionaries in the conversion of the aboriginal inhabitants to Christianity, is described by Mr. Thompson as being constructed mostly of hard, hand-carved mahogany brought specially from Spain. The ancient structure, according to Mr. Thompson, shows evidences of the warfare between the contending parties in Mexico. The building has been repeatedly struck by shells during the internecine warfare of the country and bears many marks of bullets. The holes made by the shells have been carefully filled in but the scars remain.

Another interesting episode of the visit was a visit to the jail. The prisoners, confined in single cells during the night, are allowed freedom of movement in the courtyard—the "patio"—during the day. They are assigned no tasks and fill in the time in playing cards and in gossiping.

On leaving El Paso the travellers again journey along the Spanish trail through Texas and Arizona into California. Much of the journey was through the arid sandy plains of Arizona and New Mexico covered with sage, cactus, or greasewood and in some cases entirely destitute of vegetation of any kind. Across the Yuma Desert, 80 miles broad, the car travelled along a paved road, the laying of which became necessary on account of the difficulties encountered by cars passing through the sandy wastes.

The intention had been to drive from California along the coast to Vancouver but the fact that some of the roads in the mountainous regions were snow-bound induced a change of plans and the course was shaped northward and inland to Denver, Kansas City, St. Louis, Chicago, and Detroit to the Canadian border.

An interesting part of the journey was through the areas now flooded by the Mississippi. For hundreds of miles, said Mr. Thompson, the levee is from fifteen to thirty feet above the level of the road. In passing through Kansas they noticed signs of trepidation on the part of the inhabitants who watched with misgivings the rise of the waters. In the outskirts of the city the road was protected by barriers of sandbags and for about a hundred yards the car had to pass through a foot of water. A further rise of the rivers was predicted by some of the people —predictions which have been terribly verified since.

One of the features of the Southern States which struck Mr. Thompson was the large number of fine camping grounds containing well kept cottages which were let out to tourists at rates ranging from one to two and a half dollars a night—thus furnishing a type of accommodation peculiarly suited to the needs of the tourist who is travelling over large stretches of country in a car. These cottages are in every case run as private enterprises and the standard of accommodation falls very much north of Denver. The presence of these cottages and the evident appreciation of them by the multitutdes of tourists, said Mr. Thompson, point a useful moral to Canadian municipalities bent on increasing the numbers of tourists. Tourists who are attired in the garb most suitable for travelling long distances daily in motor cars are disinclined to go to hotels where there are guests dressed in the height of fashion, and the existence of cottages where they can be accommodated supplies an obvious necessity.

Crop Damage Reports Cause Rise In Wheat

CHICAGO, May 21. — (Canadian Press.)— Wheat furned sharply upward to-day after a wavering start, enlarging crop damage reports from the south-west and unfavorable weather indications north-west were decided bullish factors. Opening unchanged to 1-2c. off, wheat later showed material gains all around. Corn, oats and provisions were relatively weak, corn starting at 1-8c. to 1 1-8c. decline, but afterwards scoring rallies.

Opening prices were: Wheat, May 142 5-8, July 138 1-4. Corn, May 88 1-2, July 91 7-8. Oats, May 48, July 49 1-8.

Nickel Only Feature On Toronto Stock Market

TORONTO, May 21 (Canadian Press).—With practically all other issues deserted, the Toronto Stock Exchange today witnessed an unusual Saturday market when International Nickel displayed unexpected strength and the heaviest dealing it has experienced for some time.

Approximately seventeen thousand shares of the issue changed hands with changes in price coming faster than could be recorded. Nickel opened slowly at 59 and held this figure for some little time. Then trading opened up and until the noon bell rang the market resounded with the cries of traders anxious to buy and others equally anxious to sell. The issue rose slowly until at 12 o'clock it had reached the pinnacle at 63½ and receded to 63⅜ a net gain of 4⅜ points over yesterday's closing price. Industrial Alcohol gained ¾ at 28¾ Massey Harris was up ⅛ at 36⅜ and Page Hersey Common declined ⅝ at 74½. Davies "A" was also weaker being down ⅛ at 42⅝. Toronto Leafs Win First 1927 Victory Over Bisons

LEAFS TAKE LONE VICTORY

Stage Rally To Overcome Four Run Lead of the Bisons.

HOMER FOR LAWRY.

NEW YORK, May 21 (Canadian Press).—Staging a cyclonic rally after two hands were away in the ninth round, the Toronto Leafs overcame a four-run lead and squeezed out a 7 to 6 verdict over the Bisons at Buffalo yesterday for their lone victory of the four-game series. A scorching home run drive over the right field fence by Lawry with two men on was the big gun in the victorious rally and gave the Leafs the tying and winning runs off Mangum, who had handily mastered the Leafs up to this stage. Bratchi's homer over the left field fence also gave the Leafs their first pair of tallies in the second round.

Syracuse made a clean sweep of the Rochester series by taking the final game, 5 to 2, with Sylvester Johnson, former St. Louis Cardinal's hurler, stopping the Tribesmen, as relief man for the third time during the series. Johnson relieved Stout with two on and no outs in the ninth and Rochester was unable to get a ball out of the infield.

Jersey City closed their four game series at Newark with a double victory over the Bears, breaking even on the series. The first game was a long drawn-out affair, with both teams hitting the ball hard, the Jerseys winning by the score of 12 to 10. Joe Zubris hurled great ball in the nightcap to lose by the score of 1 to 0. Zubris fanned seven and allowed five hits.

The Reading Aces wound up their four game series at Reading by losing their twenty-second straight game, 12 to 3, leaving the Orioles more firmly entrenched in first place than ever. The local boys hammered Noble for sixteen safeties while Jackson held the visitors to seven and finned five. Brower and Sheedy tallied homers for the Birds.

Over a period of two short years, Tony Lazzeri of the New York Yankees has experienced almost every thrill that comes to a ball player during his entire career.

During the 1925 season, as a member of the Salt Lake club of the Pacific Coast League, Lazzeri made 60 home runs, topping Babe Ruth's record of 59. Coming to the same club as the Babe, the fans looked for him to rival Ruth for home run honors. It was a tough spot in which to drop a youngster.

Lazzeri, in an effort to live up to the expectations to the fans, pressed throughout the year in an effort to hit the ball outside of the lot every time he stepped to the plate. Only eight players in the American League batted in more than 100 runs; Ruth led the list with 155, Lazzeri was second with 114. So it is apparent Tony did a pretty good job.

However, in trying to emulate the deeds of Ruth last season, Lazzeri in making 28 doubles, 14 triples and 18 home runs, struck out 96 times in between, to lead the American League in that rather undesirable role. To this, Tony added another-strikeout when Alexander whiffed him in the final game of the world series.

Despite these thrills, pleasant and otherwise, Lazzeri was just about the most valued recruit in the majors in 1926.

Inside Sporting Dope

By A Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, I suppose by this time you got 1 of Mister Hanna's permits in your pocket, and you're just waiting for the starting gun to be fired. I ain't going to try to tell nothing to a old-timer like you, but you and the rest of the customers don't want to forget them stores is going to be here a long time if you use them right. And if you don't you won't need to go round complaining if some day a long thirst is voted in again. Al. Jolson says it in 1 of his song hits in Big Boy, "It All Depends on You." Anyway, I seen my duty and I done it by broadcasting this warning.

Sporting news opened weak and ain't showed no strength since. However, I'm glad to report the birds which ain't going to take a chance on going broke at the Woodbine or getting broke motoring in the holiday crowd will have a pretty fair Victoria Day here at home, thanks to the Peterborough Ball Club and the Peterborough Turf Club.

In the a.m., at Riverside, the baseballers is going to hoist the lid off of the season by a game with the Acadians of Toronto. The Queen City Senior Leaguers is bringing their whole outfit from their ace pitcher down to the bat boy, and as they have been playing for some weeks they oughta to be good. The home guard is not in bad shape, however, and they hope to give the visitors something to worry about. Mister Ansaldo, who was the pepper box of the team several years ago, is going to help them a lot this season, and Mister Swanston's boys expect to give the fans a lotta good baseball this season.

The p.m. doings is put on at the Exhibition Grounds with 3 harness races, under the allspices of the Turf Club. They made a movie out of "The 4 Horsemen," but Peterborough has about a dozen of them, and right now there is a flock of good horses here what oughta give the customers a exciting afternoon. The ball game and the horse races'll make a good day's sport for them that plan to keep the home fires burning.

The biggest excitement this week, Mac, has been trying to guess which was the lucky birds under the plum tree when it was shook. In other words, whose getting all the jobs that go with Mister Perguson's cash and carry system? Mebbee everybody'll know by the time this gets into print, but anyway they ain't nothing to stop nobody guessing. It won't be any of the officials of the Prohibition Union anyway.

Well, that's enough hair tonic for this week, so I'll knock off here.

Sportfully yours,

A. WISE CRACKER.

BREAK EVEN IN TENNIS MATCHES

U. S. and France Play Opening Matches Franco-American Tournament.

ST. CLOUD, France, May 21 (Canadian Press).—The biggest crowd which ever watched tennis played in France saw the United States and France break even yesterday in the opening matches of the Franco-American tournament. William T. Tilden renewed his tennis rivalry with Rene Lacoste and overthrew his rival in straight sets, 6—4, 7—5, while Jean Borotra "the bounding basque," beat Tilden's team mate, Francis T. Hunter, 4—6, 6—4, 6—4. The matches were decided on a best two out of three basis.

More than 7,000 tennis enthusiasts turned out at the prospect of seeing Tilden in action. They were rewarded with an exhibition which few believed that the six times American champion ever had excelled in his career. The crowd gave Big Bill an ovation after he had overthrown Lacoste with a diversified attack and, since honors were even in the tournament, went home happy.

EVEN SERIES WITH YANKEES

Uhle Betters Opponent in a Pitchers' Battle For 2-1 Victory.

ALLOW SEVEN HITS.

NEW YORK, May 21 (Canadian Press). The Indians evened the series with New York at Cleveland yesterday when Uhle took a pitchers' duel from Hoyt, 2 to 1. Each pitcher allowed seven hits. Uhle passed six men but struck out five, including Gehrig twice, once with two on base and two out. In the second inning the Yankees filled the bases with only one out, but could not score, Gehrig popping to Summa in short right and Duret lining out to Jamieson.

Philadelphia hammered three Chicago pitchers hard and defeated the Sox at Chicago 12 to 5. The Athletics scored seven runs in the first inning, driving Blankenship and Jacobs off the hill before a runner had been retired. They let loose another barrage in the third inning with Connally on the hill for four more runs.

Drummer to Colonel Old Officer Retires

MONTREAL, Que. May 20. — (Canadian Press).—Thirty years ago Lieut.-Col. Victor Tardif, V.D., entered the ranks of the 65th Regiment Carabiniers, Mont Royal, as a drummer boy. Wednesday evening, as the sky darkened, the Colonel marched his regiment, 400 strong, all ranks, into the Champ de Mars, passed them in review before the commanding officer of the local military district, and made his last appearance on parade with the troops which he has commanded for some years. Major Rodolphe Bedard will succeed in the command of the regiment.

PIRATES WIN FROM GIANTS

ROBINS DEFEATED 7-5.

NEW YORK, May 21 (Canadian Press).—Pittsburgh took another fall out of the Giants here yesterday by coming out on top in a 12-inning battle, by 8 to 3. Lee Meadows had a slight edge on his New York opponents and won his fifth straight game of the spring. Thus far he has not been charged with a defeat. The Pirates won out on Greenfield's wildness in the twelfth, when he walked three men and yielded three hits, including a home run by Traynor with the sacks full. Eddie Farrell, Giant shortstop, continued his remarkable batting streak with a homer, a double and three singles in five times up. Smith of the Pirates hit a homer with none on base in the fifth.

Lose Two Straight.

The Chicago Cubs made it two straight over the Robins at Brooklyn yesterday in a long drawn-out game, knocking Jim Elliott out of the box in the fourth inning and winning eventually by 7 to 5. Brooklyn used four pitchers. Babe Herman, Robins' first baseman, hit two home runs, bringing his total for the season up to six, but he cost his club two runs with a wild throw in the eighth inning.

The first double-header of the Philadelphia season resulted in an even break yesterday afternoon, Cincinnati winning the first game, 6 to 3, and Philadelphia pounding out a 15 to 2 victory in the second game.

Cy Williams starred at bat with three home runs and a triple. The third homer coming with three on base. This ties him with Ruth and Gehrig of the Yankees with nine home runs each for the season.

Altogether, Williams drove in six teammates and scored four times himself, accounting for ten of his team's 18 runs.

In the first game "Long George" Kelly hit a homer with three men on base.

St. Louis at Boston, postponed, rain.

SHARKEY WINS BY KNOCKOUT

Boston Ex-Sailor Gains Decisive Victory Over Jimmy Maloney.

FIGHT ENDS IN SIXTH.

NEW YORK, May 21—Displaying an unexpectedly crushing attack, Jack Sharkey, giant ex-sailor, knocked out his Boston rival, Jimmy Maloney, last night in the fifth round of a 15-round match that upset all calculations. While a pop-eyed crowd of 30,000 looekd on in astonishment, Sharkey mastered Maloney with a bewildering drive from the start, knocked down the chubby Irishman just before the end of the fourth round and finished him in the fifth with a slashing right-handed assault that left the beaten man a gory and battered figure.

Maloney, bleeding from the left eye, nose and mouth, had plunged to the floor from a vicious succession of right handers to the head. He fell over the lower strand of rope, tried to struggle gamely to his feet, but fell back. Once again, gamely, he staggered up half way on one knee, starting toward his foe, but plunged headlong again to the canvas, courageously going forward, but "out" as completely as any fighter ever was. The finish, as dramatic and exciting as it was entirely unexpected, came after only 52 seconds of the fifth round had elapsed.

Tunney was a witness to Sharkey's prowess last night, watching the battle with absorbing interest from a ringside seat. Between "Gentleman Gene" and a title bout only Jack Dempsey looms in Sharkey's path, for it was Tex Rickard's announced plan to match last night's victor with the former champion in August to determine Tunney's opponent.

POLAND DEFEATED.

Beligum Wins Both Singles in Opening Day Tennis Tourney.

BRUSSELS, May 21 (Canadian Press).—Belgium defeated Poland yesterday in both singles of the opening day's play of their Davis Cup tennis tournament. Washer defeated Kleinadel, 6-0, 6-1, 6-3, and Botsford beat Czertwertynski, 6-2, 7-5, 4-6, 6-2.

Washer is playing a greatly improved game and is considered here the "best player in Europe."

Seized Liquor 'Sold' By Confidence Men

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 20. — (United Press).—Even Barnum might have been surprised at the gullibility of the New Jersey farmer who has purchased all liquors stored in the Federal seizure room for $1,900 cash. Major Chester Mills smilingly explained yesterday that a pair of con. men had spotted the agrarian when he arrived in the city. After introducing themselves as Federal men in need of a little cash, they took him to the seizure room and turned over a deed of ownership. The farmer has not recovered the $1,900.

NEW ZEALANDERS GET SECOND DEFEAT

Lose To Cambridge University By Five Wickets at Tenner.

LONDON, May 21 (Canadian Press cable)—The touring New Zealand cricketers ran into their second consecutive defeat yesterday when they were obliged to yield at Fenners before Cambridge University to the extent of five wickets. The antipodean batsmen did not fulfill the promise they had given in their earlier games, and they found the University bowlers something too much for them. The contest was featured by a trio of centuries, two of which were scored by Cambridge when E. W. Dawson ran out with 107 and F. J. Seabrook was only one run behind that figure. One of the New Zealanders reached triple figures, M. L. Page. Twelve centuries were scored in the contests that ended yesterday, with Hammond of Gloucester topping the list and Norman Kilner of Warwick second.

For the fourth and fifth time this season, team scores of over five hundred in one innings were made, the honors going to Warwickshire with 507 for six wickets (declared) against Middlesex, and Gloucester with 510 against Lancashire. Curiously enough, however, each of these heavy-batting teams was defeated by first innings victories for their opponents.

The score-board:

Hammond, Gloucester (vs. Lancs) 187; N. Miller, Warwickshire (vs. Middlesex) 167; Hendren, Middlesex (vs. Warwickshire) 156; M. L. Page, New Zealand (vs. Cambridge) 134; Smith, Warwickshire (vs. Middlesex) 132; T. Arnott, Glamorgan (vs. Surrey) 126; Waddington, Yorkshire (vs. Worcester) 114; O'Connor, Essex (vs. Sussex) 107; E. W. Dawson, Cambridge (vs. New Zealanders) 107; F. J. Seabrook Cambridge (vs. New Zealanders) 106; Bowley, Sussex (vs. Essex) 102; Maurice Tate, Sussex (vs. Essex) 101.

Cricket Scores

LONDON, Eng., May 21 — Cricket results yesterday were: Middlesex xs. Warwickshire at Lords — Middlesex won on the first innings. Scores—Middlesex—490 for nine wickets, declared. Warwick—237, followed on, 507 for 6 wickets, declared. (Norman Kilner 167, Smith 132, Croom 75, not out). Middlesex, 70 for no wickets.

Surrey vs. Glamorgan at the oval: Surrey won by 37 runs. Glamorgan —254 and 375 (Arnott 126, Davies 50, Clay 51, not out). Surrey—297 and 369.

Lancashire vs. Gloucestershire, at Manchester; Lancashire won on the first innings. Scores—Lancashire—336, Gloucester—235 and 510 (Dipper 78, Parker 53, Hammond 187.)

Cambridge defeated the New Zealanders by five wickets. Scores were: Cambridge — 255 and 267 for five wickets (Dawson 107). New Zealand—315 and 205.

Car of "Pulpwood" Packed in 100 Barrels

ROCHESTER, N.Y., May 21—Customs agents yesterday made the third seizure of freight cars containing Canadian ale in two days when they confiscated a car on the ferry arriving here from Cobourg, Ont., billed as "pulpwood," but carrying also 7,200 bottles of ale packed in 100 barrels.

The shipment was destined for the Castanea Paper Company of Johnsonburg, P.A., but the Customs officers said they believed the firm knew nothing of the ale in the car, as the liquor evidently had been hidden in the pulpwood somewhere en route.

The agents have under guard in the local freight yards two other cars containing ale, one seized yesterday near Fulton with 25,000 bottles aboard, and the other confiscated during the night near Rome with 40,000 bottles. Both shipments, billed as "shavings," are valued at more than $85,000.

MONTREAL, Que., May 21.—(Canadian Press.) — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Demand $4.34 13-16.
Cables $4.85 1-4.

Every Nash owner notices that he has very little gear shifting to do on hills, no matter how steep the grades may be.

Nash is a very powerful motor car. There is nothing half-hearted or sluggish about its response—the motor never "talks back" at you—even though you are climbing mountains.

One reason is the more than adequate power designed into every Nash motor car. Nash engineering has provided reserve energy for situations that tax the resources of other cars, and extend their engines to the point of strain.

Another reason for the powerful performance of Nash is 7 bearings. 7 bearings in every Nash model, instead of 3 or 4, means that power is not thrown away by crankshaft "whip." Proper bearing support throughout the entire length of the crankshaft conserves energy that older motor types waste.

Quick acceleration — powerful responsiveness—such as Nash provides, is a safety factor you cannot overlook. It is invaluable on the hills, very handy in traffic.

When you select your next car, be sure to see how unfavorably the power and pick-up of other cars compare to Nash, before you decide!

ACADIANS TO BRING STRONG OUTFIT HERE

Toronto Crew Will Arrive in Peterborough on Monday Night.

IN GOOD SHAPE.

But Manager Swanston's Crew Hope To Surprise Visitors.

The holiday morning game between the Acadians of Toronto and the Petes, promises to attract a big crowd to Riverside Park on Victoria Day Morning. The Toronto team will arrive here Monday night with their full line up, and in the best of shape for a real battle which same the Petes expect to give them. Manager Swanston's crew have been practising for several weeks and while they are not in mid-summer form, are in good condition, and will make the visitors show all their stuff. It is likely the Peterborough pilot will use all his pitchers against the Acadians, who have the reputation of being a hard-hitting gang. Alex. Kay and Edgar Lebarr will get the game away, at 10.15 o'clock sharp, and the hard ball season of 1927 will be ushered in.

MANY RUNS FEATURE GAME

De Laval Defeats Seven Oaks in Great Slugging Match.

SCORE 32-28.

Both teams hit the ball often and hard, and the fielders, when they did have it in their mitt, usually dropped it, letting the runner on the runway score. The final score was 32 to 28, which required two score keepers to keep tab on the runs, and it would have taken a dozen if all the errors had been checked up.

The game provided plenty of fun for the spectators, who got a real thrill out of the boys hitting the old pill for home runs. Harry Cheu connected for two homers and K. Miller and G. Ham for one each. Real softball was played in the fourth innings when the batters were retired in a row on each side. The Seven Oaks took the lead and held it until the sixth innings, when the De Laval scored twelve runs on two hits.

De Laval— Fowler, B. Miller, G. Ham, K. Miller, J. Cooper, Williamson, B. Jones, E. Jones, Dyer, R. Fleming and Murray.

Seven Oaks—T. Lebarr, K. Mein, McDonough, Board, Corkery, Barnett, J. Lebarr, Dwyer, Cheu, McGraw, Piercy.

OBITUARY

THOMAS YOUNG
The death took place at eight o'clock last evening of one of the oldest and most respected residents of the city, in the person of Thomas Young, who died at the home of his son, William J. Young, 564 Charlotte Street.

The deceased, who was one of Peterborough's nonagenarians, having reached his ninety-first birthday on November first of last year, was a man of exceptionally bright intellect and youthful outlook. He had mastered the art of "growing old gracefully" and his cheerful demeanor and interest in life made him a delightful companion to his family and friends. He was born in the Township of Smith and spent all his life in this district, coming in to the city about wenty years ago to reside with his son. He was one of the pioneer settlers of the county and could relate many entertaining anecdotes of early days and ways, remembering well when oxen were the only means of transportation in these parts and when the present thriving city was little more than a village. In religion the late Mr. Young was a Presbyterian, joining the United Church at the time of its establishment, and was a lifelong Liberal in politics. He was keenly interested in affairs of the day and would be the first of the household to read The Examiner from cover to cover, doing this without the use of spectacle, for the past eight or nine years. Up to a short time ago, he took long daily walks. He took pride in his athletic ability and was able to do gymnastic stunts which are impossible for many younger men. He was up and about the house on Wednesday morning, taking sick later in the day, but retaining full possession of his faculties until the time of his death, two days later.

Survivors of the late Mr. Young, whose wife died about eleven years ago, are one son, Wm. J. Young, 564 Charlotte Street, and four daughters; Mrs. E. Westlake and Mrs. E. Archer of Smith Township; Mrs. Alex. Scott and Mrs. J. M. Mann of the city. Another son, the late Thomas D. Young of Monaghan, passed away last summer.

The funeral will be held on Monday from the residence of his son to the Litle Lake Cemetery, at half-past two o'clock, Rev. J. W. Gordon officiating.

JOHN E. RICHARDSON.
LAKEFIELD, May 21.—The death occurred suddenly Friday morning of John E. Richardson, aged 74 years and 5 months. Mr. Richardson was born in Oldmeldrum, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, the youngest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Richardson, coming with his parents to this country at an early age. He was an old resident of the village, and was always deeply interested in everything connected with its welfare.

Mr. Richardson's idea of citizenship was service, and he lived up to his principles. To his friends he was constant and sincere. While a young man he married Celia Wynn, who predeceased him 20 years ago. He is survived by one son, Fred H. Richardson, of Lakefield, and two brothers, Alexander of Peterborough and Frank of Twining, Alta.

Mr. Richardson was a member of the municipal council of the village, of the Canadian Order of Foresters and of the Sons of Scotland. For years he was connected with the Lakefield Canoe Co. He was a staunch Liberal in politics, and he was always prominently identified with his party. He was associated with the Regent Street United Church. He had been in poor health for some weeks, but his condition had been improved, and his passing was a severe shock.

The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the family residence, Prospect Street, leaving at 2.30 for the Lakefield Cemetery, where interment will be made. The Rev. S. A. Kemp will be in charge.

PERMIT SALE HAS DECREASED

Only Ten Purchased Yesterday —Office Closed on Monday.

MUST APPLY IN PERSON.
The second day of issuance of liquor control permits under the new Government control scheme saw a drop in sales, only ten permits being issued yesterday from the office of Col. F. L. Bradburn, as against sixteen on the first day. As one man put it this morning, "There is no rush, because a man wants to see some prospect of an early delivery of the goods before he spends his money."

Col. Bradburn has decided to keep the office open this afternoon from 2 till 5. No permits will be issued on Monday or Tuesday of next week on account of the holidays.

Must Apply Personally.
In accordance with section forty of the Liquor Control Act, every citizen is being required to apply in person for his permit and no proxies or written applications are being accepted for the present at least. The suggestion that the Board might accept instead an affidavit made before a notary has been drafted in the form of a regulation. This, however, has not yet been definitely decided upon and in event of it being approved will apply only to those residing at points in the province where no issuer is available.

Stirling Pays Honor To Its Great War Heroes

BRITISH FLIERS ARE RESCUED PERSIAN GULF

Here on Non-Stop Flight From England To India.

PLANE TOTAL WRECK.

Opinion Expressed Met With Adverse Winds or Lost Their Way.

SIMLA, British India, May 23. — (Canadian Press.)—Lieutenants C. R. Carr and L. M. S. Gillman of the Royal Air Service, who started May 20 from England on a non-stop flight to India, have been rescued in the Persian Gulf. Their plane was forced down and is a total wreck.

More Than 33 Hours in Air.

LONDON, May 23. — (Canadian Press.)—Although great disappointment was manifest here this evening over the news that Lieutenants Carr and Gillman had failed in their attempt to make a non-stop flight to India, their performance is considered highly creditable.

The air ministry confirmed that the two airmen were forced to alight at sea, 45 miles south-east of Bender Abbas, in the Persian Gulf. They were rescued by a ship and are now en route to Abadan. Their machine, a special Hawker-Horsley plane, fitted with Rolls Royce motors, is a total wreck.

Their total time was 34 hours and 33 minutes and for just an hour on Saturday they held the long-distance non-stop record until Captain Lindbergh breezed into Le Bourget. They had flown 3,400 miles and are believed to have covered more mileage than the two Frenchmen, Coste and Rignot, who by flying to Yask, Persia, last October, were credited with the world's long distance non-stop flight record. Lindbergh, however, beat both these marks by his 3,600 mile air epic. Lieutenants Carr and Gillman were actually in the air one hour longer than Lindbergh.

Air Commodore Halahan declared while no details were available as yet he considered it a good performance. He expressed the opinion that it was possible that they met with adverse winds or missed their way in thick weather. This would have made it necessary for them to retrace their route in part and by doing so used up their fuel supply.

Lieut. Carr and Lieut. Gillman, both veteran airmen, started from Cranley, England, last Friday, with Harachi, India, as their destination. They hoped to reach their goal in 40 hours.

Carr accompanied the late Sir Ernest Shackleton into the Antarctic, while Gillman was navigator in the first Cape to Cairo flight.

Champion Pianist Named at Convention

GENEVA, May 23 (United Press) — A world's champion piano player was named yesterday by the delegates to the International Exposition to Music which is in session here.

Claudio Arrau, Chilean pianist, received the title and with it a first prize of 5,000 gold francs (approximately $200) after competing against various other contestants in a piano playing contest. Arthur Robinstein and other leading musicians publicly congratulated the Chilean player on the honor he had received. Later he will give a public concert in Geneva in recognition of the award.

ONLY BALDWIN HAS POWER TO PREVENT BREAK

Prime Minister Would Have To Fight Almost Entire Cabinet.

MAY DEMAND REVISION.

Changes in Trade Agreement May Be Asked—Soviet Little Feared.

LONDON, May 23 (United Press). —Prime Minister Baldwin is now the only person with the power to prevent a complete break between Great Britain and the union of Soviet Republics, according to Lord Beaverbrook, who is straining every effort to smash Lord Rothermere's campaign for the severance of diplomatic relations. The question agitating political circles is whether the Premier will have the courage to oppose almost the entire Cabinet, particularly in view of the fact that it is now reported that even the Foreign Secretary, Sir Austin Chamberlain, who hitherto has urged a moderate policy toward Russia, is also in agreement for drastic action.

Once before, it is pointed out, Mr. Baldwin fought the entire Cabinet over the first Trade Unions Bill, but whether he will do so again is considered an unknown and remote possibility. While the majority of political correspondents forecast a definite rupture, some political observers believe that the Government will first demand a revision of the trade agreement between the two countries, owing to the Soviet's abuse of the privileges accorded them.

Should the latter decline to consent to this proposed revision then the break would automatically follow.

If diplomatic relations are actually severed, France will find herself in a delicate position owing to her own negotiations with the Union, and there appears to be some hostility in the French papers at any attempt on the part of Foreign Minister Briand to follow Britain's example. The countries bordering on Russia are also in a state of nervous excitement, but opinion in London is that Soviet power, although great in numbers and on paper, is not really formidable because of a lack of money.

FRANCE HONORS YOUNG AVIATOR

President Doumergue Decorates Lindbergh With Legion of Honor.

INVITED TO SWEDEN.

PARIS, May 23. Canadian Press.—President Doumergue, of France, receiving Captain Charles Lindbergh in the Elysee Palace at noon to-day, decorated him with the Legion of Honor for his epoch-making flight from New York to Paris.

The President congratulated the young American most warmly on his great achievement.

The news of the decoration spread quickly and crowds which lined the Faubourg Saint Honore greeted him enthusiastically and cheering and shouting girls tossed flowers and kisses at him.

President Doumergue created a precedent by permitting motion picture operators to film the act of decoration.

SWEDES CONFER DECORATION.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, May 23. — Canadian Press. — Everybody in Sweden is proud of Charles Lindbergh, as he is of Swedish descent. The Royal Aero Club of Sweden has awarded the flier the highest gold decoration and invited him to come and receive it.

PINEDO HOPS OFF.

TREPASSEY, Nfld, May 23. Canadian Press. — Commander Francesco de Pinedo, the Italian flier, hopped off for Horta, Azores, on the last leg of his round trip from Rome, at 4.38 to-day.

FLIER RECEIVES GREAT OVATION ON ARRIVAL AT FRENCH CAPITAL

Plane Stormed By Crowds of People on Landing Field.

PAYS SOCIAL CALL.

Puts in First Private Telephone Call Between France and States.

PARIS, May 23 (A.P.).—Sheltered in the United States Embassy from a world filled with praise of him, Captain Charles A. Lindberg awoke yesterday afternoon from a sound ten hour sleep seemingly innocent of the fact that the whole earth was eager to honor his exploit of flying alone from New York to Paris.

Soon after he had had breakfast the courageous and charming young man from the Middle West telephoned to his mother in far away Detroit. It was the first time a private telephone call had linked France with the United States, but it was only one of the many precedents that the world set yesterday in the general desire to show its admiration for the sandy-haired, soft-spoken aviator who made the trans-Atlantic flight in his little monoplane and in solitary glory.

Hanging up the receiver at the end of the conversation with his mother, Lindbergh placed himself in the kindly care of Myron T. Herrick. The ambassador led him to the balcony of the Embassy to please the crowd that had been standing in the street clamoring for a sight of him ever since the word went forth that at last the young hero had arisen from his sleep. After that, two score cameras had to be accommodated; then Lindbergh told the story of his flight to a group of newspaper men eager to send his words around the world. As his first act outside the Embassy since his arrival the young man did a thing that made him even more beloved in the hearts of the French, who already had given him such praise of tongue and pen as no man has known for years.

Visits Nungesser's Mother

With the ambassador as an escort the birdman went to call upon the sorrowing mother of the gallant French aviator, Captain Nungesser, who set out to fly the Atlantic a fortnight ago and has not been heard of since. All France has been deeply touched at this act of young Lindberg's in making the visit to express his sympathy to the mother of the Frenchman, who is believed to have sacrificed his life in attempting the perilous adventure that Lindbergh was later to achieve.

While Lindbergh was sleeping soundly all morning Paris heaped honor after honor upon him. Even before dawn the city began to be aflutter with the flag of his homeland.

The government has the United States flag flung to the breeze on many public buildings and for the first time in honor of a private citizen, a foreign banner waved from the mast of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. This homage by custom is reserved for sovereigns and the heads of governments.

By afternoon there were flags flying all over Paris and seemingly no conversation concerned anything but Lindbergh. No praise seemed too high either as a sportsman or an aviator.

All day long men and women whom the flyer had never seen in his life sent flowers to the Embassy to express their admiration. One vast room was filled with them—great bouquets and baskets of flowers. On one of these Lindbergh's name and address were scrawled in the uncertain writing of some little schoolgirl.

Messages from all the world poured steadily through the Embassy doors:

ARMY LEADERS ARE WELCOMED BY CITY CORPS

Mayor Holloway Also Greets Them on Behalf of Citizens.

HERE FOR WEEK END.

Commissioner and Mrs. Maxwell Pay First Visit To Peterborough.

Crowds of citizens thronged the C.P.R. station on Saturday to welcome Commissioner and Mrs. Maxwell of the Toronto Salvation Army to the city to conduct services at the Temple here yesterday. From the station the crowds went to the Temple on Simcoe Street, where speeches were given by Mayor Holloway and Alderman Cotton on behalf of the municipality, and members of the local Army also addressed the visitors.

Brigadier Bloss expressed his thanks to the Mayor and Aldermen for consenting to take a part in welcoming the Commissioner and his wife and stating how the city was always ready to do anything it could in connection with any activities that the Salvation Army had, and that the co-operation was warmly appreciated.

Mayor Holloway

"The people of Peterborough have given the army a great deal of assistance, said Mayor Holloway, "but not a bit more than it deserves." He then went on to say that few of the citizens realize the splendid work that is being carried on by the Army organization and especially by Miss Wood, who, he remarked, is a splendid lady, doing good for everyone that comes to her for aid.

"There has been many changes in the Salvation Army since I came to Peterborough," stated His Worship "and they have been all for the best, especially the idea of building such a beautiful Temple as this is, after the disastrous fire that would have discouraged the hearts of nearly every one." He then went on to mention how the Army, and especially the band, had always been ready to assist the city in any celebrations that had taken place in the past. "It is indeed a great privilege for me to take part in this welcome service," said the Mayor, "and I wish you every success for a splendid week-end with your Commissioner and his good wife."

Alderman Cotton

"It is indeed a great honor for me to be able to represent the citizens of Peterborough at such a gathering," said Alderman R. S. Cotton. "I have been looking forward to this occasion for a long time, because it is an honor for our municipality to have the Commissioner and his wife visit us, and I am only sorry that their stay cannot be prolonged." Speaking of the boys of the Army, Alderman

THE WEATHER

Sunday was a very warm day for the month of May. The temperature in the afternoon was up to 87 degrees in the shade. While this is not a record, it has only been exceeded once or twice in over thirty years. On May 22 and 28, 1911, we had it 92. Last week we had five days on which rain fell to the amount of 1.29. Last night there was another shower of about ¼ inch. Up to the present the rainfall for May is three times that of April.—W. P.

Atlantic Flier Pays Call on Mother Of Nungesser As First Act in Paris

PARIS, May 23 (Canadian Press) — The mother of Charles Nungesser clasped Charles Lindbergh to her breast, when the victor in the race which her own son so courageously undertook.

"I wanted to make my first call on the mother of my valiant friend, Captain Nungesser," Lindbergh proferred haltingly, twisting his hat in his hands. "I knew Charlie in New York and admired his courage. I still hope for him."

Then the young man added: "I ask you to have confidence that he will yet be found—my own mother had confidence that I would be safe at the end of the journey."

They then embraced "with the whole American people I regret that the searches made for Charles up to now have been unfruitful," pursued Lindberg more and more moved, "but I ask you to keep on hoping."

Mme. Nungesser, receiving her son's namesake in the same dining room where she had had her last meal with her lost one, replied: "I am a mother—that is all. I have not lost hope of seeing my son again. My heart of a French woman knows how to support suffering and anxiety."

Thereupon Mme. Nungesser's voice broke. She sobbed how sorry she was she could not be at Le Bourget last night to welcome and see her boy's comrade of the air descend in triumph. He confusedly tried to comfort her, but was unable to reply—simply hugged her, as he might his own mother in Detroit.

When Lindbergh left, his blue eyes, still tired from the strain of his momentous trip, were dimmed with tears.

WHERE CHILDREN PERISHED

This telephoto picture shows ruins of the left wing of the Bath, Mich., school where huge blasts of dynamite planted by Andrew Kehoe, deranged school trustee, blew 41 persons to death and cruelly injured nearly half a hundred more. Thirty-six of the dead and all of the injured were school children. Had dynamite planted under the right wing gone off, the death toll would have run into hundreds.

SPLENDID WAR MEMORIAL UNVEILED AND DEDICATED WITH BEAUTIFUL CEREMONY

Brigadier-General A. E. Ross Le ts Veiling Flag Drop After Roll of Fallen is Called by Lie ut.-Col. D. Green — An Effective Answer.

PRIDE AND SORROW MINGLE AMONG THOSE WHO LOST LOVED ONES IN THE GREAT WAR

"They Gave Their Today for O ur Tomorrow," Says Inscription Accompanied by Eleven Names—Flame is Symbol of Undying Mem ory and Devotion.

(By Examiner Staff Reporter)

STIRLING, May 23.—Impressive services marked the unveiling yesterday of Stirling's memorial to soldiers of the village who fell in the Great War, and today the granite cenotaph stood revealed amid its banks of flowers as a symbol of Victory through Sacrifice.

Hundreds of ex-service men were among the thousands of people who participated in the ceremony. The uniforms of veterans, officers and men of the Militia units, High School Cadets, and Boy Scouts, with the glistening medals and bright ribbons, gave a military touch to the proceedings quite in keeping with the recalling of Canada's days at war, and especially the part that these eleven Stirling boys played when they made the great sacrifice.

On the outskirts of the crowd were many who came because of curiosity; or to hear the band; or attracted by the uniforms. But in the centre, near the monument, —ah!—there was renewed all the sorrow of those days of a decade ago when news came that this and that young village lad had gloriously died for his brother's sake. These were the mothers and fathers of the eleven whose names are inscribed on the memorial.

The young girls in their gay dresses might make of the occasion a joyous celebration; the young men might look on indifferently and without understanding; but these parents, and perhaps lovers, of the eleven knew yesterday the anguish of an old wound reopened, the sadness of an old and treasured memory recalled, be it ever so kindly done. Many wept.

There was not only sorrow, however, among those who grouped near the cenotaph and looked past its crowning torch to the cloud-flecked sky in a sure and certain faith that those who sacrificed so greatly have achieved immortality. There was pride in their eyes, in their very carriage. Not to everyone is the honor of giving a son to his country, and it was with justifiable pride that these parents saw raised to the memory of their boys this community stone—an enduring reminder of the acts of those who "Gave their Today for Our Tomorrow", and a sure evidence that the people of Stirling do not forget.

Behind the cenotaph flows Rawdon creek, with its perpetual murmuring, and beyond that is the old elm tree, 300 years old, with its wide spread of living green. In the bathing pool that has been built within a few yards of the memorial, will disport themselves this summer and many summers to come, the children whose future these eleven died to protect. They should know, these children of today and tomorrow, the meaning of the monument and the respect that is due these other Stirling boys who enjoyed just as much the pleasure of the old swimming hole but who were ready to give up that, and home, and parents, and love, and life itself, for the sake of a great ideal.

Tribute to Comrades.

Yesterday's ceremony was peculiarly a military affair. Reeve T. Mongomery presided, but it was veteran companions of the eleven who most effectively expressed the spirit of the occasion These men had carried many a blanket-wrapped comrade to his resting place in France and Flanders. They knew the horrors of war and the sorrows of loss. And there was not a veteran on parade yesterday but saw in this cenotaph a reminder, if not of the eleven then of some others of Canada's sixty thousand dead.

Lieut.-Col. D. Green called the roll of those who were not present to answer. The people of Stirling unitedly answered "Here, sir," when Brigadier-General A. E. Ross, C.M.G. unveiled the memorial and revealed the names chiselled in granite. These names are engraved on the hearts of those who erected the monument and through it the memory of the men shall be for ever present in the village.

MEMORIAL AT PARK FINISHED

Gates Erected in Memory of Mrs. Nicholls Now Completed.

APPROACH TO BE ALTERED.

The work on the Memorial Gates at Nicholls Oval has been completed and the following inscription appears at the entrance to the grounds:

"East Nicholls Park
Presented to the citizens of the city of Peterborough by the late Mrs. Charlotte Jane Nicholls Died 1890."

The foundations for the pillars were laid last fall and the work, which has been carried out by Ernest Henry, a local contractor, consists of a large main gate and a smaller side gate. The pillars are of field stone, with a concrete top.

The City Engineer, R. H. Parsons, purposes to make several alterations in proximity to the gates, one of which will involve the making of a curve which will be a fitting approach to the gates besides having the effect of enhancing their appearance.

NEIGHBORS SEEK MISSING FARMER

Drummond Township Man Was Last Seen on Friday.

PERTH, Ont., May 23 (Canadian Press)—Residents of the Township of Drummond have been deeply stirred by the disappearance of George Widenmaer, aged 21 years, farmer of the district, who was last seen on Friday afternoon between one and two p.m.

No effort was made to find him until after he had failed to return for supper. The whole neighborhood was then aroused to start search for the missing farmer.

Servants Prevent Household Prayers

LONDON, May 23 (United Press).—Family prayers have practically disappeared in England as a result of the servant problem and other obstacles which have developed since the war, delegates reported at the annal conference of bishops. In many cases servants have objected to families beginning the day with prayers because the custom interferes with cooking the breakfast and other housework, said J. P. Percival of King George's domestic chaplains.

The royal family continues the old custom as does the National Club, which begins the day with the same service it has used 79 years.

TEMPLE BAND IS GIVEN HONOR

Local Musicians To Play at Great Festival in Massey Hall.

ONE OF FOUR BANDS.

A signal honor has been conferred on the band of the Salvation Army Temple here in its selection as the aggregation to represent the Eastern section of Ontario at the great musical festival of the Salvation Army to be held in the Massey Hall on June 16. Three bands, two from Toronto, one from Hamilton—each the topnotchers of their district — will share with the Peterborough combination the programme of the festival which represents a new departure in the enterprises of the Army.

Each band will play one march and one selection. These items were chosen by Commissioner Maxwell, himself a talented musician, from lists of eight pieces submitted by each of the bands. Towards the end of the festival the massed bands, 250 musicians, will play a march and the Hallelujah Chorus from Handel's Messiah.

There will be nothing competitive about the proceedings of the day and no official attempt will be made to adjudicate the relative merits of the bands which are to share the programme.

HIGHWAY GANG NEARER KENDRY

The work of surfacing the Government Highway has been temporarily suspended in the neighborhood of the city, and the crew is engaged in operations at a point about 4 miles further from Peterborough. Some of the trucks on the job were withdrawn by their owners, and with the reduced transportation facilities available it was considered advisable in the meantime to lessen the distance from the base, which is in the neighborhood of Kendry.

The result is that a gap about three-quarters of a mile in extent of unsurfaced road separates the spot at which work was left off from that where the men are now engaged.

Local men are busy at present on the highway between Monaghan Road and Albertus Avenue, between which points a sewer is being laid under the supervision of the City Engineer.

AVIATOR RESUMES JOURNEY TO WEST

Kenneth Guthrie Delayed at Winnipeg By Poor Visibility.

SUDBURY, May 23.— (Canadian Press.)—Kenneth Guthrie, Canadian air force pilot, who hopped off from Ottawa on Friday en route to Winnipeg, landed at the Sudbury base of the Ontario Forestry Air Branch on Saturday evening. The young aviator took off again yesterday but was forced to return owing to poor visibility. He resumed his flight this morning. Kenneth Guthrie is the nephew of the Hon. Hugh Guthrie.

BYRD PLANS FOR OWN HOP ACROSS OCEAN

Says Planning Trans-Atlantic Flight For Purely Scientific Purposes.

NOT FIXED DATE.

Backers of Bellanca Monoplane Plan Record Breaking Distance Flight.

NEW YORK, May 23.—(A.P.) — Commander Richard E. Byrd, while enthusiastically proclaiming Captain Lindbergh's flight one of the "greatest feats in history," was carefully going about his own preparations for a trans-Atlantic flight at Roosevelt field yesterday.

"We may not take off for a week," he said.

In the meantime, backers of the endurance record-breaking Bellanca monoplane, thwarted from entering the New York to Paris contest by disagreements between themselves, were looking about for new worlds to conquer, while the Columbia lay idle in its hangar.

Charles A. Levine, head of the company owning the Columbia, declared that it had not been the intention of either Charles D. Chamberlain, pilot, or himself, when the plane was taken from her hangar Saturday night, to attempt to duplicate the feat of Lindbergh, but that Chamberlain, with his unidentified navigator, was planning to fly as far into Europe as possible, hoping to reach Rome. He said a record-breaking distance flight was still being planned.

Continue Test Flights.

Commander Byrd's big Fokker monoplane, the America, was taken up on another test flight yesterday. Preparations are being made in a thorough, scientific manner, without hurry. "We want to continue our tests for speed and gasoline consumption before taking off on a distance flight," said Byrd.

Commander Byrd, who is to receive the degree of master of aeronautical science from the Pennsylvania Military College June 15, has explained that he is planning a Trans-Atlantic flight for purely scientific purposes.

The Bellanca monoplane, which, it was announced, would take off on a Trans-Atlantic flight Friday night, and again last night, has been ready for several days. Last night it was actually taken from its hangar, but as on the previous night, the flight was given up because of adverse weather conditions.

Flier Offered Half Million Dollars To Sign a Stage and Screen Contract

PHILADELPHIA, May 23 (Canadian Press)—An offer of half a million dollars for his services for screen purposes and stage appearances for one year was cabled to Captain Lindbergh yesterday by John J. McGuirk, president of the Stanley Company of America and also president of the First National Film Corporation.

Mr. McGuirk announced last night that he had cabled the Paris representative of the Stanley Company, J. McKeen, to make every effort to obtain Capt. Lindbergh's signature to the contract. Mr. McGuirk stated that the contract would cover only screen and stage appearances and that the youthful aviator would be free to make any other contracts that he saw fit.

OFFERS CONGRATULATIONS

SASKATOON, Sask., May 23 (Canadian Press)—Outspoken admiration for the feat of Captain Charles A. Lindbergh in flying across the Atlantic Ocean was expressed here in an interview yesterday by Captain Roald Amundsen, first man to fly across the Arctic Ocean.

"Such wonderfuul courage inspires my deep admiration," declared the veteran conqueror of both the North and South Poles. "It is not merely the fact that Captain Lindbergh has crossed the Atlantic in an aeroplane. That has been done before. But it is the cool, daring and gallantry with which he set off alone on his great quest, which excites my interest and admiration.

"I cannot express my pleasure upon receiving the news that this brave young man had succeeded in his endeavor," said Captain Amundsen.

Captain Amundsen has never met Lindbergh, whom, until a few weeks ago, was practically unknown in his travels, but he hopes to meet the latest addition to the list of heroes of the century.

STARS FROWNING UPON AL. SMITH

Are Against Candidacy For Presidency of U. S., Says Astrologist.

(By William J. McEvoy, United Press Staff Correspondent).

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The stars are against Al. Smith for president, Mme. Marcia, astrologist, told the United Press Saturday in an exclusive reading of the New York governor's horoscope.

In June, 1928, when Democratic convention selects a standard-bearer, the planets will not be propitious for Smith, Madame Marcia said.

"From a general survey of the planets," she said, "I cannot see Governor Smith as president. I wouldn't say that he would even get the Democratic nomination."

Madame Marcia based her predictions on location of the planets at the time of Smith's birth and their position at convention time and next election day.

Through the skies, Madame Marcia sees Smith's religious and prohibition positions as obstacles to election, she says.

WITHROW LEAVES FOR PENITENTIARY

Toronto Doctor Seems Somewhat Improved in Health.

TORONTO, May 21 (Canadian Press).—Dr. Oswald C. Withrow left Toronto with sheriff's officers for the Portsmouth Penitentiary, Kingston, by the Canadian National Railway train at 10 o'clock this morning to serve his sentence of seven years in the penitentiary, imposed following his conviction on the charge of performing an illegal operation on Ruth Dembner.

B. J. Brooks, sentenced to five years in connection with the same case, did not accompany Dr. Withrow to Kingston.

Dr. Withrow was not manacled. He appeared somewhat improved in health since he twice collapsed on hearing sentence pronounced.

REFUGEES CONTINUE FLOCK INTO HANKOW

Radical Nationalist Government Issue Statements Telling Numerous Military Victories.

HANKOW, May 23 (Associated Press).—Refugees continue flocking into the foreign concession area of this capital of the Radical Nationalist Government which last week seemed in danger of being encircled by the forces of its enemies. Apprehension among the people has been somewhat alleviated, however, by statements given out by the local government claiming military successes.

These statements assert that General Feng Yu-Hsiang, military leader for the Hankow Government, has captured Honanfu and that Marshal Wu Pei Fu has retreated to Chenchong, whither Feng's forces are following him.

It is further stated that the forces of the Hankow Government operating in Honan Province are officered by Russians, and that all the foreign military advisers of Marshal Wu Pei Fu have left him.

Despite the reported successes and despite intimidation and threats of beheadings, business here continues at a standstill. Merchants are refusing to accept the new issue of bank notes, while copper coins have vanished, following the proposals of the authorities to withdraw them from circulation and issue paper money instead.

The Central Executive Council of the Kuomintang, the political organization of the Nationalists, has issued a manifesto pointing out that merchants, manufacturers, peasants and laborers are important factors in the Nationalist revolution. The manifesto has caused comment that the Hankow Gogernment is endeavoring to conciliate the merchants, pending adjustment of the financial difficulties.

Rear-Admiral Tyrwhitt, commander of the British naval forces in China, has arrived here.

GIRL GUIDES GO TO CHURCH

Campbellford Companies Attend United and Anglican Churches.

INSPIRING SERMONS.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 23. — While the spring sun shone through the leafy buds of the beautiful trees guarding faithfully the lawns of Christ church and St. John's United Church, Nos. 1 and 2 Companies of the Girl Guides "fell in" on their respective parade grounds — the lawns.

No. 1 Company, under the command of Captain Grace Payne, with Lieut. Verna Sanders, and Lieut. Essie Casson in charge of their respective platoons, paraded to the United Church with a parade strength of 60. They were accompanied by the dainty little Brownies, with Brown Owl Evelyn Irwin and Tawney and Irene Davidson as leaders. The Girl Guides were in full Girl Guide uniforms, and the Brownies in the full uniform of their order. Both made a very attractive showing. Their every movement reflected great credit upon the officers in charge. At the conclusion of the service the troops formed a hollow square on the beautiful church lawn, and after being congratulated by their commanding officer, were dismissed.

This was the signal for Lieut. Essie Cassan to get busy with the camera, and the Guides and Brownies were photographed in their different groups. When the Dafodils faced the camera Lieut. Casson instructed them to "look pretty"—an entirely unnecessary command.

At Christ Church.

No. 2 Company, under command of Captain Mrs. J. H. Bell, with a parade strength of 25, attended divine service at Christ church, where they listened to the story of the little captive maid who showed such great sympathy toward Naaman, captain of the host of the King of Syria.

The rector, the Rev. N. Clarke Wallace, in welcoming the Guides, stated that in 1906, the Earl of Meath conceived the idea of Empire Day. His idea was that the Friday before the 24th of May, the school children should be taught just what the Empire is. Wherever the British flag floats in the air, men are today celebrating Empire Day.

"Your aim, ideals and traditions," said the reverand gentleman, "are as noble as the Empire to which you belong—and that is saying a great deal." Continuing, he said, "Never be ashamed of the term 'British Empire.' The term has no precise meaning but everybody knows what it means. It did not receive any sanction from an act of Parliament ,or League of Nations, but it did receive the sanction in the hearts of the people."

Concluding the very interesting story of the little captive maid, the eloquent rector said: "This little girl got her opportunity, and grasped it. She got her opportunity by being carried away. Perhaps you will get your opportunity by being members of the Girl Guides—that opportunity may be in your own home, city or the Empire. You are now at the age when you are able to do things for others. The training you give yourself now is what is going to count, and your training in the Girl Guides is going to teach you your duty to your God, Country and King.

The sermon was concluded with the singing of the National Anthem.

DEMPSEY THINKS SHARKEY IS GOOD

Could Stop Title Holder, He Believes—Ready For Bout.

LOS ANGELES, May 23 (Canadian Press).—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, believes that Jack Sharkey has shown himself by his defeat of Jim Maloney, "just about good enough to stop Gene Tunney, the title-holder, right now."

"While I think I can take Sharkey, a Sharkey fight should draw a big purse," Dempsey said.

SPLENDID WAR

Major The Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, an overseas chaplain, dedicated the stone; the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment Band played a selection; and addresses were given by Col. L. T. McLaughlin, C.M.G., D.S.O., V.D., Lt. Col. C. F. Boggs, V.D., and Lt. Col. Vandewater, D.S.O., V.D.

Then the soldiers' salute to the dead was given, the firing party directing the three rounds over the memorial as if it were the grave of the men whom it recalls. "Last Post" stirred the depths of sympathy with its wailing message of a day's work done; two minutes' silence was observed, and "Reveille" sounded a new hope.

Thus was Stirling's War Memorial unveiled and dedicated.

Floral Tributes.

Soon after the flag dropped from around the monument many representative men and women of the village, and officers representing many units, approached and heaped flowers around the base. There were wreaths from: Stirling Horticultural Society; I.O.O.F. 239; L.O.L. 110; Belleville Branch of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League; St. James Roman Catholic Church; the United Church, Women's Canadian Club; St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church; and many bouquets and sprays without names attached. Mrs. Green of Belleville, wearing her son's military medal and other decorations, added a spray.

The Memorial.

The predominant thought of the cenotaph is "Victory through Sacrifice." On each side is a sheathed sword, significant of peace and victory. On the front is the dedicatory inscription, "They gave their to-day for our to-morrow." On the side facing the creek are the names of those men from the village who made the supreme sacrifice, and, around the base, the battles in which they took part.

At the very top of the memorial is the flame, an inspiration to keep alive and alight the memory of the men who gave their all.

Mr. Montgomery, Reeve.

In stating the significance of this beautiful War Memorial, Mr. Montgomery, Reeve of Stirling, remarked that all the people in the vicinity should honor the men who gave up their lives for their country and families. Mr. Montgomery went on to say that it was a soldier's day, and he would call on the military men for the speeches, but that he welcomed all the participants in the service, and also the large crowd that gathered to see the unveiling ceremony.

Lieut.-Col. Green.

Lieut.-Col. Green was called upon to read the names of the Stirling boys who had fallen in the great war. He remarked that relatives of these heroes were gathered on the platform to see the tribute that Stirling was paying to those that had given up their lives for others.

Brig.-General A. Ross.

"Permit me to congratulate the village on the idea of erecting a War Memorial," said General Ross, "and I feel it a great honor to be given the privilege of taking part in the unveiling of the beautiful monument that the village has erected to the boys that died for their country in France. It is a very fitting thing to build such a monument to those boys and to keep green their memory by such a cenotaph, for the generation that is now growing up should realize that they are living in a great country built up by people who suffered great sacrifices; that is the United Empire Loyalists. Then when the war came these great heroes that you are now honoring fought for the liberty of the country; thus it is up to the present generation to catch the torch and carry on that which pioneers have dropped at their feet."

In speaking on militarism General Ross remarked that militarism does not provoke war or disaster, but the wearing of the uniform is the preservation and protection of the country. Speaking to the boys and girls, General Ross stated that Canada is their country, and will continue to be their country, if they will uphold the traditions that have been built up by their forefathers. He reminded them when they passed the flag at the foot of the cenotaph not to joke about it, but to remember that the flag that is placed there is the same flag that their fathers and mothers followed to gain liberty and also to keep green the memory of all those who will not return to this life.

Major Payne, Chaplain.

Major Payne remarked that it was a great privilege for him to be able to attend and to join in the cenotaph service. "No occasion could give me greater joy," said the Chaplain," for it is for such a noble cause, and I congratulate the citizens of Stirling upon the monument, and the beautiful site chosen beside the running water, for that is a significance that the memory of these Heroes will be always in your minds."

"The first monument heard of," said the minister, "is away back in the time of the children of Israel when God commanded them to set up stones so that their children and children's children would be able to tell what they had accomplished and thus this monument tells all generations to come what our heroes of France did for us."

He then went on to say that the boys had thrown the torch to those to come, and that all must catch it and carry on with a resolution and determination to face any danger that might arise.

Colonel L. F. McLaughlin.

Colonel McLaughlin, the next speaker, said he considered it a great honor to be able to speak to his comrades of other days in France and during the war. He remarked that the turn-out yesterday was in itself a tribute to the boys that had given their lives that friends might live. "Lest we forget' is the inscription on this monument," stated Col. McLaughlin, "and nothing could be more appropriate, for this cenotaph is a tribute in which you show the esteem of a great loss sustained by the losing of such excellent citizens. To-day," he remarked, 'brings back our minds to devotion to duty, for the boys over there met the enemy with bravery, and at this moment they return with a message of courage and patriotism, for they displayed courage and were faithful unto death."

In closing, Colonel McLaughlin stated that these men gave up their lives for God and country, and he gave the following benediction to their honor: "Eternal glory give to them, who died that we might live."

Lieut.-Col. C. F. Boggs.

Lieut.-Col. Boggs remarked that he was glad that Stirling did not forget her men that had died so bravely, for they measured up to the United Empire Loyalist race and built up a tradition when they so bravely went forth to the battle fields'. "The boys were a credit," declared Col. Boggs, "and may the generations to come be as loyal to God and their country as they were, for no finer men were in the army than those from Hastings County."

Colonel Ketcheson.

Col. Ketcheson, "an old soldier of Queen Victoria's reign," was called on to speak a few words to the people gathered to pay tribute to the fallen heroes. He remarked that it was a great honor to be allowed this privilege, and was glad to see so many in uniform. "Military training is a great thing for the boys," he said.

Lieut.-Col. Vandewater.

Lieutenant-Colonel Vandewater, the last speaker on the programme, said the words of any man could not express the tribute that should be paid to those men who gave up their lives for their country, and only a monument such as the one unveiled yesterday could show the real sympathy that was in the hearts of those who now mourn their loss. He expressed his wish that everyone would stimulate the present generation of children to do what those brave boys did, to drop everything for love of country and fellow-men if such a necessity ever arises again.

Peterborough Represented.

Peterborough was represented at the ceremony by Major H. Dodds, of the Machine Gun Corps, and Lieutenants J. Turnbull and J. R. Heron.

Campbellford There.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 23. — 'Eyes Right!" was given to the town of Stirling yesterday afternoon, by almost the entire population of Campbellford. Every available car was requisitioned to convey the multitude desirous of doing honor to Stirling's illustrious dead. The local troops in command of Major Bygott, made a splendid showing at the unveiling of the Soldiers' Monument in our sister town.

Lindbergh Planned Flight To Australia

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 23.—Ambitions more audacious than the New York to Paris flight, are cherished by Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, who has planned to be the first man to fly from the United States to Australia, it was said here Saturday by Harry A. Knights, one of the backers of the youthful air mail pilot. First, however, Lindbergh planned to return here and attempt to break the Chamberlin-Acosta endurance record, of 51 consecutive hours Knight said.

The Australian flight, Knight pointed out would carry the flier over more than 6,511 miles. He would cross the equator and fly over many groups of the South Sea Islands if the project were attempted.

As Lindbergh planned it, the flight across the broadest of waters, the Pacific ocean, would be made in two hops, the first from the United States to the Hawaiian Islands, and the second from Honolulu to the western coast of Australia, slightly above Sydney.

DAIRY CLOSED AT MONTREAL

Taken as Means of Checking Typhoid Epidemic in City.

AGAIN ACTIVE.

MONTREAL, Que., May 23 (Canadian Press).—Following upon the failure of the Montreal city authorities to take necessary action, the Provincial health department on Saturday closed down the National Dairy, Ltd., and gave instructions for the Montreal Dairy Company, Limited, to be operated upon certain conditions which call for complete supervision and control by M. H. McGrady, chemist and assistant bacteriologist of the Provincial Department of Health. These measures were taken in an effort to check the typhoid epidemic in Montreal which, after having been dormant for some weeks, has again shown signs of becoming active. Dr. Alphonse Leesard, director of public health, took this action following failure of the executive committee of the City Council to take this step which had already been ordered by the Department.

In a statement announcing the putting of this into effect, Dr. Lessard outlined the conditions under which the Montreal Dairy Company would be permitted to function. These are drastic and in brief require that no milk or cream will be sold by that company except with the approval of the health officer.

PINEDO POSTPONES FLIGHT TO AZORES

Italian Flier Encounters Many Difficulties in Preparations For Flight.

TREPASSEY, Nfld., May 23.—(Canadian Press.)—Commander Francesco de Pinedo, Italian four-continent flier, postponed his flight for the Azores Sunday because of delays encountered in his preparations. He now plans to start between two and four o'clock Monday morning.

The commander's plan to fly yesterday was upset by the slowness of the motor boat towing his plane down the harbor for the start. Because of a shortage of fuel it took the boat two hours to make the tow and, as it takes a long time to get the plane properly started, the commander decided it would be too late to go yesterday.

De Pinedo started the engine at 4.25 a.m., circled the harbor three times, ran out of the Narrows three times, and then came to rest at the head of the south-west arm of the lower coast.

He was deeply chagrined at the delay, but said that, weather permitting, he would surely get away to-day.

A tug left St. Johns, Nfld., to-day to tow de Pinedo's plane into position for the start to-morrow.

With the arrival here late yesterday of a tug from St. Johns, which will tow his plane into position for the start, Commander de Pinedo announced that he would board the Santa Maria II about midnight in readiness for taking off for the Azores three hours later.

Canada 48 Hours Trip From Mother Country

LONDON, May 23 (United Press).—Canada will be brought within forty-eight hours of the Mother Country when Commander Binley's airship is completed, the aviator has announced.

The airship will be devoted to Empire routes, and although it was previously stated that the craft's main activities would be in the East, it is now revealed that Canada will also be one of its objectives

When the airship will be ready it is impossible to tell at present owing to Government tests and other delays.

The latest earrings are made from flowers, flat circular posies of mixed blossoms being worn over the ears instead of dangling ornaments of precious stones.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

ONLY A LITTLE LONGER.

"Only a little longer," I tell myself each day;
My faith grows even stronger the more that things delay.
Whatever I would find me, whatever trail I tread,
The more the miles behind me, the less the miles ahead.

For every path leads somewhere, however far the gates,
And sometime we shall come there, in spite of all the fates,
Shall come who do not falter, shall come who do not tire,
For faith that does not alter shall find its heart's desire.

I, too, have dreams within me, old dreams that knew defeat,
Have heights I want to win me, and friends I want to meet,
And, though the heart may hunger, the more that things delay,
"Only a little longer!" I tell myself each day.

(Copyright, 1927, Douglas Malloch.)

OLD MASTERS

Lord Rameses of Egypt sighed
Because a summer evening passed;
And little Ariadne cried
That summer fancy fell at last
To dust; and young Verona died
When beauty's hour was overcast.

Theirs was the bitterness we know
Because the clouds of hawthorn keep
So short a state, and kisses go
To tombs unfathomably deep,
While Rameses and Romeo
And little Ariadne sleep.

FEWER HOUSES ARE BUILT HERE YEAR BY YEAR

Only 25 Put Up Last Year, Compared With 55 in 1925.

INCREASE THIS YEAR.

Many More Advertised For Retiring Than in Years Gone By.

The real estate for the city seems to be at a lower level each year, for statistics at the City Engineer's office show a decrease yearly in the building of houses here, though prospects are brighter in 1927. In 1924 there were sixty-five new houses erected with an approximate value of $207,750. In 1925 there were fifty-five houses built with a value of $163,650.00, showing a decrease of ten houses and a commercial value of $44,100.00. Last year there were only twenty-five houses built, with a value of $77,350.00, indicating a large decrease. Thus far in 1927, however, there have been fifteen new houses put up, and 108 permits issued, the greater part of these being made up of additions to houses or garages already erected.

Reports from City Clerk S. R. Armstrong show two hundred and six marriages for the past year, and the fact that only 25 houses were built indicates that more young couples are living in cars than homes of their own.

The vacant houses are also attracting attention for the number advertised last night in The Examiner surpasses any former year, and with fewer houses being built. In the advertising column of May 10th, 1917, only six vacant houses were advertised for sale or rent. In the edition of October 29th, 1920, eight houses were advertised, but in last night's paper forty-eight houses were either for sale or to rent. This shows a decided decrease in the demand for real estate on the whole in Peterborough.

MANY OFFERS MADE AIRMAN

Lindbergh's Backers Say All the Money Goes To Aviator.

BIG CONTRACTS OFFERED.

NEW YORK, May 23.—(Canadian Press.)—A million dollar pot of gold at the end of his 3,800 mile rainbow to-day awaited Captain Charles A. Lindbergh.

While world-wide acclaim continued to mark the achivement of the youthful New York-Paris airman, there came offers which would enable him to get back his $2,000 investment in his flight many times over.

Within twenty-four hours after ending his epochal flight, the 25-year old flier received definite offers of $735,000 in movie and commercial contracts.

A fortune more than $1,000,000 would be within his graps should he be able and willing to fulfill an elaborate array of motion picture, vaudeville, advertising testimonial, writing, and other contracts.

But what the young captain will do is not known. Of the $20,000 which the flight cost, Lindbergh contributed his own savings of $2,000. St. Louis business men made up the balance.

He is free to do what he chooses about the flattering proposals, Harry K. Knight and other sponsors of the flight said in St. Louis. "To the victor belong the spoils," his backers said in announcing that Lindbergh may keep the $25,000 Orteig prize and all other money which may accrue to the venture.

Movie contracts, $200,000; vaudeville $400,000; radio $50,000; his story in book form $50,000; magazine and newspaper articles $50,000; advertising concessions $75,000.

BRAIN CONTESTS.

We ought to have more brain contests and fewer beauty contests, says Rev. L. W. Edwards, of Denver. He laments the "hysteria" of pulchritude competitions and wishes there were more intelligence tournaments.

All well and good, if we must have contests. The business of living, however, offers a nice contest of brains. He who wishes to make his brain work will find plenty of opportunity every day without entering contests. But the finding of a standard for such intellectual pageants is another matter. Questionnaires as we know them are useless. Highly developed intellect runs to specialty, and usually to the exclusion of other knowledge, which would clog it rather than help it. The man with a general education is not a specialist. He has no time to be. And vice versa. There are plenty of good ideas, for instance, which would be worth fortunes if commercialized. But their creators have one-track minds, so to speak. They are so busy originating that they have not learned to exploit.

Contests and brains are not really companions. We have contests because of the childhood that remains in us. We have brains in spite of it.—Border Cities Star.

DEPENDS UPON THE PEOPLE.

A message from the Canadian Red Cross Society puts the reason for the campaign for more funds for the organization compactly into one sentence:

"The service which the Red Cross can give to the people of Canada will in the future depend entirely upon the people themselves."

The Canadian Red Cross has been carrying on most of its activities since the war largely because of the generosity of Canadians during the years of warfare.

The balance left over when hostilities ceased has, however, disappeared.

The time has now come when Red Cross service must be greatly diminished—perhaps even discontinued—if support for it is not forthcoming.

Those who know what that service has been, what it has accomplished in the improvement of health, what it has saved in the prevention of disease, and what it has meant to hundreds of our fellow-citizens in the mitigation of suffering know that its cessation is unthinkable.

Canada would no more want to try to get along without Red Cross service than a community would want to find itself without doctors or druggists.

The need of funds is urgent, and The Examiner hopes that Peterborough will, as usual, contribute its quota when the local appeal is made.

A SAFE HOLIDAY.

Victoria Day, the first holiday of the summer, has always been a popular anniversary for Canadians, ushering in as it usually does the warm weather recreations, inaugurating the picnic season and taking all Canada out of doors.

If the weather conditions are favourable tomorrow will see every road alive with motor cars, and the lake and river resorts populated as they have not been since the first chill days of last autumn.

A note of warning on this account seems necessary.

Too often tragedy stalks among the pleasure-seekers on such occasions.

The traffic conditions on the highways are hazardous to inexperienced drivers and to the careless and the reckless; similarly many people with little or no knowledge of how to handle a boat are tempted on holidays to experiment, often with tragic results.

There should be a general resolve to be careful tomorrow.

Motorists should realize the unusual conditions and drive with more than ordinary care, and those people who have not learned to paddle a canoe should be made aware of the danger that lurks even in smiling waters.

Make Victoria Day a safe holiday.

"FULL OF POTENTIAL ILL-HEALTH."

The police warning in regard to shooting off firecrackers on the street or in public places should be acted upon or it will have to be followed up by action on the part of the Police Department.

Leniency has been shown in connection with this matter for some years because there was a natural reluctance to interfere with innocent fun.

Unfortunately, too many boys—some of them well on the way to the voting age—have been abusing the privilege, and it has become necessary to put a stop to the practice.

Several brands of firecrackers sold in local stores seem to have an undue amount of explosive content, and when these miniature bombs are used, as they have been during the past week, tossed into motor cars or thrown near a pedestrian the results are far from pleasant.

In fact, these "salutes" are, to borrow an expression from Irvin S. Cobb, "full of potential ill-health," and their promiscuous discharge might easily cause a serious accident.

Steps taken by the police to protect the public against such explosives have been made necessary by lack of thought on the part of the offenders, and if youngsters are deprived of some of the fun associated with Victoria Day, the blame can be placed upon the shoulders of those who have been foolish or careless.

A NEW PAGE IN AIR HISTORY.

The epoch-making flight of "Lucky" Lindbergh was a triumph for an American flyer, but the feat was international in the world-wide interest it aroused and in the universal joy that exists over the fact that Lindbergh did not have to pay for his daring with his life.

It would be necessary to use the whole battery of adjectives to properly describe the extraordinary accomplishment of the young flyer.

A noted French aviator said on Friday that if Lindbergh succeeded in reaching his object his feat would be "fantastical."

It was exactly that.

Without a companion, carrying no wireless, preparing himself for the record-breaking flight by taking but two hours of sleep, the iron-nerved Lindbergh hopped off on Friday morning for his 3,600-mile air voyage as nonchalantly as the average man takes his car out of the garage.

Neither the thought that he was attempting a flight that no one had ever made before and that many crack flyers declared could not be completed, nor the realization that two of France's foremost airmen had lost their lives in a similar endeavour daunted Lindbergh in the least.

Confident of his own ability as a flyer and cheerfully reliant upon his engine to stand the unprecedented test, the young flyer calmly took the air and proceeded to add a new page to the history of aerial navigation.

The percentage against his chances of successfully completing the long journey was apparent even to the laymen, but the Flying Fool and his "Spirit of St. Louis" accomplished the impossible.

The world loves a brave man, and Lindbergh's name will be hailed the globe around as that of a hero.

Many an individual has won that title by a feat that could not possibly be compared with that of the American flyer for sheer audacity and indifference as to personal safety.

10,000,000 CANADIANS SOON.

According to the latest estimate of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, the population of Canada has increased by 600,807 since June, 1921, the date of the official decennial census, and now stands at 9,839,300. Should the same ratio of growth continue, the population will be over the 10,000,000 mark two years hence. As matter of comparison, it is interesting to note that in 1830 the official census of the United States placed its population at 9,638,453, and that in the succeeding decade it had risen to 12,806,020, about 2,000,000 more than the Dominion total is expected to be one hundred years later. Because of the fact that the doors of the United States are no longer wide open and that Canada holds the promise of offering greater inducements in future than at any previous period of her history, the hope is not too sanguine that Canadian development will at least equal and may, possibly, exceed the ratio of expansion of our great neighbor a century ago.

Canada, in a general way, has duplicated the history of the United States, with this striking difference, of course, that within a century world conditions have been completely transformed and bear no resemblance whatever to those prevailing when the neighboring Republic reached its first ten million. But the parallel exists even in the fact that the rate of expansion has neither been uniform among the Provinces and States, nor has it followed any regular line of advance. Certain of the Canadian Provinces, like certain of the States south of the border, have experienced sudden expansions; the older Provinces, in contrast to the newer, have lagged behind or tended to become stationary; urban growth has been more rapid and some places show an actual drop in the number of inhabitants. This century has seen the most rapid expansion in the Western Provinces, Manitoba in twenty years having trebled its population; Saskatchewan had 91,279 residents in 1901, in 1921 they increased to 757,510; Alberta grew from 73,022 to 633,464 in the same period.

On the other hand, one Province, Prince Edward Island, and two territories, Yukon and the Northwest, have a smaller population than was listed twenty years ago. In the United States the parallel case to Prince Edward Island is Vermont; Nevada corresponds to the Yukon and, possibly, also to the Northwest Territory. Mining booms were responsible in the three instances for the sudden expansion of population, followed by a decrease when the original lure lost its potency. Mississippi is the other State of the Republic that reports a loss of population, explained by exodus of the negro element to the industrial North with its better opportunities for employment. As regards urban expansion, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver, to name only four cities, reveal a similar robust expansion to that of the populous centres of the United States.

In 1921 the density of population in Canada was 2.41 persons to each square mile, and is now rated at 2.6. Including Alaska, Hawaii and Porto Rica, the corresponding figure of density in the United States seven years ago was 35.5, over fourteen times that of Canada. The population of Canada, however, is very unequally distributed, and rapidly thins north of the earlier settled districts. Such huge tracts as Ungava, Keewatin, Mackenzie and even the Yukon, are exceedingly sparsely inhabited and possibly never will have a large white population, but the limit of settlement has been pushed so steadily northward, and so much remains to be known about their natural resources, that it would be rash to dogmatize. It is humanly probable, however, that the ratio of expansion will increase more rapidly in the future than it has done in the past.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

CHILDREN'S DAY
By Dr. Frank Crane.

Of all the special days and weeks set apart during the year, and there are so many of them now they overlap the calender, it seems to me that Children's Day is one of the most important.

The child is the most vital issue of the public.

It is probably because children keep coming in from the infinite and refreshing humanity that it keeps up as well as it does.

Old people have a tendency to give up, they grow blase, they lose their enthusiasm. If it were not for the children about our knees they would yield to the forces of pessimism.

It has been said that the Chinese and other ancient nations worship their ancestors, while we in America worship our children. The two points of view represent the backward and the forward look.

Whatever plans we have and whatever struggles we make we largely owe it to the children. It is for their sake that we strive to go on.

When the fires of passion have died and other interests have cooled the children come on and hold the family together. Most men's ambitions are centered about their children.

It is a good thing that the Creator has implanted in us the instinct of mother love. It is one of the most ineradicable of the human frame.

Every right-minded man hopes for his children better things than he had himself and we doubtless struggle to make the world better for their sakes.

The problems that confront us now must be met by our children, and the institutions that are now formed must be carried on by them. They are citizens of the future.

Children's Day is a deliberate turning of our attention to these little ones that hold our interest. It is quite fitting that one day in the year should be set apart to consider them and their welfare.

People keep young by keeping in touch with children, and whoever has lost interest in them has lost his interest in the progress of the race.

It is said when Geo. Francis Train grew old he quit speaking to grown people and devoted all his time to children. His theory was that children were the only people worth while.

Some day the school teacher will be properly honored and those who have charge of the training of our children and the development of their character will be duly respected.

THE MARKETS

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, May 23 (Canadian Press).—There was no improvement in the foreign demand for grain in the Montreal market on Saturday and business generally was dull, local trade was also slow, the demand being only for odd cars to meet immediate want. The market for corn was weaker in sympathy with the demline in Chicago futures and prices were reduced 1 cent per bushel. Sales of Argentine corn were made at $1.0' American No. 3 Yellow at $1.02, and Sample Corn at 99c per bushel.

A moderate amount of business was transacted in Spring and Winter grades of flour and prices were firm.

The millfeed market continued active and the undertone was steady. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was of a limited character, but values were unchanged.

The demand for eggs was good and prices were firm. The receipts were 1,432 cases.

A feature of the potato market was the further strength that developed and prices were marked up another cents per bag. Sales of car lots of Quebec White B grade were made at $2.30 per bag.

A fair trade was done in butter and values were again irregular. The receipts were 1,926 packages.

The undertone to the cheese market was stronger and price scored a fractional gain, which was attributed to the better demand. The receipts were 1,679 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Ills. May 23 (Canadian Press).—Wheat went up yesterday and corn down, with much buying of wheat against sales of corn. Wheat was stronger owing largely to unfavorable crop reports from the southwest and to estimates of greater reduction of seeded acreage in Canada. Wheat closed firm 1¼ to 1⅞c net higher, corn at 1c to 1¾c decline, oats ¼ to ⅝c off, and provisions varying from 5c drop to an equal gain.

Better weather for corn planting in the Central West brought about heavy sales in the corn market, largely of a profit-taking character, as well as spreads against wheat. Oats were influenced by the action of corn.

Provisions showed an irregular trend, but averaged a little lower with corn and hogs.

DOCTORS ADVICE TO THE SICK

To feel your best day in—and day out, no more headaches, indigestion, gas on stomach, bilious attacks, rheumatism, kidney pains, bad breath, you must bathe your self inside. Start today by taking one Tanol Calomel tablet before meals or two at bedtime, then next morning drink a glass or two of hot water to wash from the stomach, liver, kidney and bowels all the previous day's waste, poison and toxins before more food is taken in. Get a few Tanol tablets from F. C. Weber, Charlotte street, Peterborough. They are harmless to take, do not nauseate, no bad after effects, no salts or seidlitz next morning, like ordinary calomel. Then you can eat better, sleep better, work better, think better and look better.

PSYCHO-AWALYSIS IS NOT A CURE-ALL

There are a thousand and one factors which are responsible for the development of disease in the human body. Those who read my column each day know that important part food has in producing disease. You know also, by this time, that I consider mental causes have a certain place in creating the various ailments.

I thoroughly believe in the science of psycho-analysis, which simply means the science of analyzing the mind. Many cures have been affected through this method of examination which is also a treatment in itself.

Those who become interested in psycho-analysis, however, often expect too much from it, and many who have only a slight knowledge of what may be called "mental cure" will refuse to study further when they read in the paper about some famous psychologist who has died from organic or functional disease.

Dr. Sigmund Freud, one of the leaders in the psycho-analytics movement, has just been operated upon for cancer of the tongue, and many will say, "I told you so! He could not even cure himself." Dr. Freud is now over 70 years of age, which is at least twelve years over the normal expectancy of life at the present time. Chances are he has lived and will live a great many years longer than the majority of his critics. His life has been intensely interesting and completely filled with long hours of work in teaching others to adjust their emotional disturbances and in helping them to help themselves mentally.

Any man who accomplishes much constructive work in one life must apply himself assiduously to such work during most of his waking hours. It is the rule that successful men always overwork and probably shorten their lives thereby. I am sure such over-work would not be so harmful if it were not for the fact that busy men are usually careless in their eating habits, giving little time to the selection of proper food and not spending enough time masticating their food properly.

Many of our leading mental scientists, who have helped thousands to happiness and health, have themselves died of some preventable disease which could have been avoided if they would have also studied and practiced the principles of food chemistry.

We are living in a body made of material substances and we cannot expect to remain in perfect health unless we recognize the rules of physiology as well as of psycho-therapy.

The food cure and the mind cure will both be used by the progressive physician of the future who is earnestly trying to help his patients in the prevention and cure of disease.

Who uses IMPERIAL ETHYL and why?

IMPERIAL ETHYL GASOLINE

IMPERIAL ETHYL Gasoline is an exceptionally high grade motor gasoline treated with Ethyl brand of anti-knock compound, the chemical ingredient developed by General Motors to make gasoline a more efficient fuel for internal combustion engines. The chief advantages of Imperial Ethyl are:

Elimination of "knock" under all driving conditions—transformation of carbon from a liability into an asset—more power on hills and heavy roads—quicker acceleration—less gear shifting—reduced vibration—freedom from the trouble and expense of carbon removal.

Imperial Ethyl thus combines every feature of the ideal gasoline—amply worth the small premium the motorist pays for it.

AEROPLANES
THE Royal Canadian Air Force and the Ontario Government Forest Patrol both use Imperial Ethyl because it develops all the power and efficiency of the engine.

RACING CARS
MOST racing car drivers (including Major Segrave, who drove 203 miles an hour) use Ethyl Gasoline because it develops the maximum power their engines are designed to deliver.

CARS, BUSES AND TRUCKS
BUSINESS concerns operating cars and trucks use Imperial Ethyl because its superior performance reduces running and maintenance costs.

What It Means to YOUR Car

Throughout Canada, passenger-car owners like yourself are turning to Imperial Ethyl Gasoline for exceptional engine performance and motoring satisfaction. Whether your car is a service-worn veteran, or a brand new automobile, you will see a marked improvement in its power and flexibility immediately after a tank-filling of Imperial Ethyl. Put it to the test today . . . we know you will acknowledge our claims to be moderate . . . once Imperial Ethyl has a chance to prove itself to you.

CRICKET GAME FOR TO-MORROW

Bell Telephone Team of Toronto, To Meet Local Cricketers.

SHOULD BE GOOD GAME.

The Peterborough C. C. team plays one of their most important matches of the season to-morrow at the Oval, when it meets the strong Bell Telephone team of Toronto. This team is considered one of the best teams in Toronto, and was runners up in the district championship last season. The local club is fielding its strongest eleven and intends to make a real game of it. The match will commence to-morrow morning about 12.00 o'clock and stumps will be drawn about 5.30 or 6 p.m.

All members of the local club are asked to turn out to-night at the Oval. The team for to-morrow's game will be as follows:

Thorpe (capt.), Dunkerley, Hammond, F. Dyer, R. Dyer, Elliott, Monkman, Manning, Jefferson, Smith and Hamilton. Reserves, Stuart and Ryland. Umpires, Massey-Cooke and A. N. Other.

On Saturday afternoon the local club met the Lakefield C. C. at the Oval, but the match had to be left drawn on account of rain.. The Peterborough team scored 44 runs and the Lakefield team 20 for 4 wickets. The rain and bad light spoiled the game, the batsmen finding it difficult to time the ball, and the bowlers also had trouble controlling the wet ball.

IN POLICE COURT.

Two brothers from Nassau were charged with being intoxicated on Saturday evening in an automobile in Ashburnham. The driver was given seven days in jail and his brother was fined ten dollars and costs or ten days in jail. A policeman saw them on Saturday night just in time, for they were heading for the C.P.R. footbridge at the end of Maria street and had they reached this a serious accident might have occurred.

TEUTONS FOND OF CANADIAN FICTION

Canada's Native Literature Liked by North European Peoples.

TORONTO, May 23 (Canadian Press).—Canadian fiction dealing with nature and the great out-of-doors enjoys a wide popularity in Teutonic and Scandinavian countries, despite the handicap of the necessity for translation. A survey of the catalogues issued by German, Danish, Norwegian, Swedish, Dutch and Czecho-Slovakian publishing houses will discover the titles of many books by Canadian writers, steeped in Canadian atmosphere.

Czecho-Slovakia has, during its brief career as a nation, developed a lusty appetite for Canadian stories; so that the rights of translation for that country must now be considered as a possibly important item by any author who chooses the forests and rivers of Canada as setting for his tales.

Discussing this apparent affinity of taste between Teuton, Scandinavian and Canadian, Dr. Charles G. D. Roberts points out that the races under consideration all look upon the life of the wilds with the same interest, in counter-distinction to the attitude of the Latin races. For them, he continued, man's struggle with nature in the vast arena of the Northland provides vital material for literature.

Dr. Roberts' animal stories are translated into half-a-dozen European languages. Germany and Czecho-Slovakia are particularly eager for these sagas of fox and bear and beaver. Such novels as "The Forge in the Forest," and "The Heart That Knows," in which humans work out their destinies in rugged Canadian environment, are also widely popular on the continent.

Some of the works of Ernest Seton Thompson, who is Canadian-born, though many readers look upon him as an America, prosper in the translated editions, while the name of Ralph Connor is also to be found on the Scandinavian publishers' lists.

Canadian native literature evidently does not make the same appeal to the Latin races. Translations of a few poems by Dr. Carman's work has been done into Spanish for South American magazines. But Canadian fiction seems to hold no attraction for the Southern palate. It is the Northern people who call for tales of the tall timber, in which men pit their strength against nature, and animals play leading roles in dramas of the forest.

The attempt by Italy to regain the lost province of Tripolitana and the machinations of a rascally territorial governor who plotted against his own countrymen, are the main features of "Fighting Love," which Nils Olaf Chrisander directed for Cecil B. DeMille and which will be on view at the Regent Theatre to-day.

"Fighting Love" should be one of the screen's most unusual pictures for the five principal players in the play have almost equally important roles demanding of them the most virulent characterizations possible.

The firm story was adapted from a novel by Rosita Forbes and was prepared for the screen by Beulah Marie Dix, noted novelist and scenarist. Jetta Goudal is the star and Victor Varconi and Henry B. Walthall are featured in her support.

The scenes of "Fighting Love" are laid in Italy in the drawing-room of a princess, and then shift to the bleak, sandy stretches of the Sahara, where a small army outpost conducts a hopeless warfare against an Arab horde.

MANUFACTURES 1,800 CLOCKS IN CITY EACH DAY

Western Clock Company's Progress Is Referred To By J. H. Vernor.

ADDRESS TO ROTARY.

60 Per Cent. of Company's Output is Exported, He Explains.

If all the alarm clocks made in Peterborough last year were placed side by side, the lineup of clocks would extend from Peterborough to Burleigh Falls, according to J. H. Vernor, of the Western Clock Company, who delighted the Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon to-day with a breezy talk on the activities of that company.

Mr. Vernor, who was introduced by Rotarian Rev. Father Costello, told his hearers that alarm clocks were being manufactured in Peterborough now at the rate of 1,800 per day. Forty per cent of these were required to take care of the Canadian market and the remaining sixty per cent supplied England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, The Straits Settlements, India, the British West Indies, British Guiana and other countries. In all parts of the globe it was possible to find alarm clocks made in Peterborough, said the speaker, who in referring to the growth of the local plant from its modest beginning in 1920, paid a high tribute to the qualities of his assistants and staff. "I am happy to say," remarked Mr. Vernor, "that the personnel of the Peterborough plant is 98 per cent Peterborough-Canadian."

Two hundred and twenty people were employed by the company here, the speaker explained and he proceeded to give some interesting statistics as to the quantity of material used in the manufacture of the alarm clocks turned out here last year which, he said, would if placed side by side, reach from Peterborough to Burleigh Falls. "And if they all went off together," remarked Mr. Vernor smilingly, "I would have to make tracks for Florida."

Mr. Vernor, speaking of the alarm clock industry generally, said that repeated experiments had shown that what the public demanded was a nickel-plated clock, round in shape. They refused to accept other materials. As for the Western Clock Company it was the result of the development of one man's idea back in 1887 and the method brought forward then had been successfully inaugurated and carried out by the company while competitors still adhere to the older methods. The speaker emphasized the policy always followed by the company in giving service to its customers after the clocks left the shipping room doors.

The thanks of the club were extended to Mr. Venor by President A. L. Killaly.

It was announced that owing to the fact that business would call Rotarian Walter Blackwell out of the city frequently, his place on the directorate of the club would be filled by Rotarian Lou Potvin.

DO YOU REMEMBER THE FAMOUS CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE AND THE CRIMEAN WAR? IT WAS THIS WAR WHICH RESULTED IN HENRY BESSEMER'S INVENTION OF HIS CHEAP STEEL PROCESS. BESSEMER HADN'T KNOWN A THING ABOUT STEEL EXCEPT THAT THE SWORDS AND CANNON IN THE CRIMEAN WAR WERE INFERIOR. THEY BENT EASILY AND WERE DEFECTIVE.

BESSEMER FELT THAT IT OUGHT TO BE POSSIBLE TO MAKE BETTER STEEL, BUT HE HAD NO IDEA HOW TO GO ABOUT IT. SO HE DID THE LOGICAL THING. HE BORROWED OR BOUGHT SCORES OF BOOKS ON METALS AND READ OTHER MEN'S EXPERIENCES IN MANUFACTURING IRON. HE SPENT 18 MONTHS IN STUDY AND VISITS TO IRON FOUNDRIES.

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

BESSEMER REALLY HAD ACCUMULATED A WONDERFUL KNOWLEDGE OF IRON WORKING WHEN IN 1855 HE DISCOVERED SOMETHING WHICH NONE OF HIS BOOKS DESCRIBED. HE DISCOVERED THAT AN ACCIDENTAL DRAFT OF AIR HAD CHANGED THE MOLTEN IRON INTO STEEL AND THAT IT WOULDN'T BE NECESSARY TO WORK THE IRON EXTENSIVELY.

OF COURSE KELLY, THE KENTUCKY MAN, HAD PRECEDED BESSEMER IN THE DISCOVERY BY SEVERAL YEARS. BUT BESSEMER HAD THE ADVANTAGE OF IMMEDIATE PUBLICITY. THE ADVANTAGE OF ADVERTISING CAN BE APPRECIATED IN THE FACTS THAT BESSEMER EARNED MORE THAN TEN MILLION DOLLARS FROM HIS DISCOVERY AND RECEIVED A KNIGHTHOOD, WHILE KELLY, THE ORIGINAL INVENTOR, GOT SCARCELY ANYTHING.

MISSION CIRCLE HEARS REPORTS

Membership and Finance Are Discussed By St. James' Branch.

MANY LIFE MEMBERS.

The May meeting of the XL Mission Circle of St. James Church was held at the home of the President, Miss Marion Wagar.

After the devotional opening exercises, the chief items of business were the reading of reports. Miss May Ritchie, the treasurer, reported that out of a membership of twenty-two, there are sixteen life members. For the year ending in March, $90.00 was sent to the branch treasurer. This money was raised as follows: fees, mite boxes, talent money and the proceed of a play.

Two of the sixteen life members were made at the close of the year, when Mrs. (Rev.) J. D. Richardson and Mrs. Ernest Kitney were presented with life certificates in the Mission Circle.

Miss Greta Welbourn gave a very interesting report of the Presbytenal, at which she was a delegate. She regretted that very little of the work of Mission Circles was discussed, and though several successful Circles were cited, telling the number of members and the amount they had raised, they did not state their plans for gaining new members, or tell their methods of raising their money. "And this," she said, "is the greatest need of the Circle today." A lively discussion on the finance question in the Circle followed, and several interesting plans were evolved for this year's work.

A social half-hour at the close of the meeting was enjoyed in a musical contest, after which refreshments were served. The June meeting will be in charge of Miss Edith Wright and Mrs. Earl Eakins, and will be held on the regular date, the second Monday evening of the month.

WATCH THE KIDNEYS

Fatigue and that tired feeling is the result of poison in the blood. When the kidneys fail to remove this poison from the system it leads to backache, rheumatic pains and sometimes to that fatal ailment known as Bright's disease. When this condition exists, don't delay, go to your druggist and get a box of Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills and they will quickly correct the cause of your trouble.

Mr. Arthur Pinch of Smith Township states that Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills give him more speedy relief than any other preparation that he had tried.

18 CANADIANS ENTER CONTEST

Forty-three From United States Wish To Compete in Swim.

AT C.N.E. IN AUGUST.

TORONTO, May 23 (Canadian Press).—Eighteen Canadians have written for entry blanks for the $50,000 swimming marathon which will take place in Lake Ontario on August 31. It would appear that if all start the United States strongest competition will come from the Dominion. Of the male entrants, George Young, of Toronto, will be favored to annex first prize.

The United States has the largest number of entrants by far. Forty-three Americans have written for entry blanks and it is expected that more will enter soon.

CASTROL OIL GETTING WIDE DISTRIBUTION

Can Now Be Obtained in Most Garages and Service Stations in City and District.

Motor owners of this city and district will be delighted to hear that the famous English motor oil, Wakefield Castrol, is now being sold by local garages and independent service stations.

Travellers abroad, in fact in all parts of the world, have found very general use of this famous oil. It is used by millions of motorists in Great Britain, and all over Europe, India, Africa South America and Australia.

Last summer, producers of this motor oil, C. C. Wakefield and Co., Ltd., opened a Canadian office in Toronto, and are now marketing their oil from Quebec right through Canada to British Columbia.

Castrol is the lubricant used by Major Segrave recently when he shattered all world's speed records, travelling at 207 miles an hour over the Daytona Sands. Major Segrave insisted on Castrol as his lubricant, because when he climbed into his monstrous Mystery Car to make this test he was staking his life most certainly in the attempt and could run no risks in the vitally important matter of lubrication. It is a matter of interest that 99 out of every 100 speed and reliability tests in Europe are won by cars using Wakefield Castrol Motor Oil. It is interesting to know that Castrol was the lubricant chosen by the Royal Air Force, Royal Navy and Army during the War, when tens of thousands of Canadians first made its acquaintance. Commander de Pinedo, the great Italian flying man, Sir Alan Cobham, Raold Amundsen and other famous airmen all insist upon Castrol.

The Canadian manager of C. C. Wakefield & Co., Ltd., is Mr. Charles D Browne, of London, England, who served with distinction in the war, attaining the rank of captain in the Royal Field Artillery, and being decorated with the Military Cross and Russian Order of St. George.

Tremendous Expansion.

The firm's first works were at Liverpool, and the premises have three times been enlarged and rebuilt to cope with the growing business. With the further expansion which took place after the war it became clear that the company's Liverpool works alone could no longer handle the increased business, and that another factory would be required. Land was purchased and a factory built at Hayes, Middlesex. Here the new works were opened in the summer of 1926.

Almost immediately fresh extensions were put in hand and are now almost completed, whereby the Hayes plant will be able to deal with more than twice the volume of business that was contemplated at the outset.

Mr. W. H. Howard, well known in the city and district, is organizing the territory here and has secured distribution through the majority of the best garages, service stations and others in the trade.

Those who have been using it have found it to live up to all representations made.

CONTINUES SEARCH.

Toronto Airman Leaves For Gulf of St. Lawrence To Seek Fliers.

TORONTO, May 23 (Canadian Press).—Capt. F. Vernon Robinson, airman, of this city, left last night for Montreal, from whence he will go to Eskimo Point, on the Island of Anticosti, on the north shore of the St. Lawrence, to start a search for Captain Charles Nungesser.

Modern Women's Hygiene

Ends worries of old ways
Discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND
Registered Nurse

SHEER gowns and gay frocks, business and social exactments under the most trying of hygienic handicaps are a comfort women of today enjoy.

This because old hygienic ways are being widely supplanted by a new way called Kotex.

It's 5 times as absorbent as ordinary cotton "pads." Thus you wear lightest frocks; dance, motor, go for hours without a moment's doubt.

Deodorizes, too; thus ending all fear of offense. 8 in 10 better-class women now employ this way. Doctors advise it. Nurses widely urge it. Obtain at any store without embarrassment simply by saying "Kotex."

Try today and you'll never again risk the uncertainty of old ways. Box contains 12. Be sure you get the genuine. Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

SACRED HEART CHURCH.

"Amen, amen I say to you. If you ask the Father anything in My name, He will give it you." These words, taken from the Gospel of St. John, were used as the text for the sermon on "Prayer" at the morning masses yesterday.

"As was given out in the announcements," said the speaker, "Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week are known as Rogation Days, from the Latin word Rogar, meaning "to ask." These are special days of prayer when we petition God for spiritual and temporal favours. In England, in the time of Alfred the Great, these days were considered as sacred as the Sunday, and processions were held. Our Catechism tells us that prayer is an elevation of the soul to God. It may be described as a conversation with God when we give to him all our thoughts and affections, thinking of Him alone. We must pray well if we wish to please God. If in talking to a companion you let your mind wander he will not be interested in your conversation. Thus is it the same when we pray in an indifferent manner. Why is it hard to pray? We sometimes find it hard to pray, possibly because we cannot see God, but if we put ourselves in the proper disposition before we begin our prayers, by reflecting on our Lord, our minds will not be distracted.

God cannot be expected to speak to us in an audible manner, as the way in which he spoke to Moses and Abraham, but if we pray well He will speak to us through the inspirations and graces which He showers upon us.

Many people think that there is no need for prayer. Why then do we pray? Again our Catechism tells us that is is our duty to discharge some of our obligations to God through prayer. God has also asked us to pray when He said to His disiciples in the Garden of Gethsemane, "Watch and pray that you do not fall into temptation."

Our Lord has said, 'Ask and you shall receive; seek and you shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you. If we expect graces and blessings we must ask for them. We may often become discouraged because we do not receive an answer to our prayer for some temporal favour. God in his great wisdom does not always grant a petition unless it is good for the soul as well as for the body.

ALL SAINTS' ANGLICAN

Yesterday was particularly a young peoples' day at All Saints' Church. Those who were confirmed last Sunday night, made their first Communion at the morning service, while the members of the Boys' Club took Communion in a body. Boys' Sunday was observed at the evening service, having been postponed from last week on account of the Confirmation service. Members of the Boys' Club acted as ushers at both services, and George Gimblett and Chris. Jay read the lessons in the evening. The preacher at both services was the Rev. Canon G. O. Troop, and the rector, the Rev. J. Douglas Paterson, was in charge.

Speaking to the recently confirmed young people at the morning service, the Reverend speaker chose as his text the words of St. Paul, "For me to live is Christ." His address was of a most inspiring and helpful character. In the evening he chose two texts from the Book of Revelations: "And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony; and they loved not their lives unto the death," from the 11th verse of the 12th chapter, and "These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them, for He is King of Kings and Lord of Lords; and they also shall overcome that are with Him, called, and chosen, and faithful," from the 14th verse of the 17th chapter. The subject of the address was "The Victorious Life," and it was addressed particularly to the young people. The speaker urged them to enlist for the war under Christ's banner with as much loyalty and devotion as the soldiers showed in enlisting under the banners of the king during the recent war.

ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL.

Rev. Father Muckle, of St. Michael's College, Toronto, spoke at St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday, on the subject of Catholic extension work.

"Do you ever stop to consider, my brethren," he said, "that you share in material ways in the fruits of the labors of many men? This is true of labours with regard to your clothing, food and amusements. The efforts of nearly one thousand men, from first to last, are required to take you safely on a train journey."

Mutual co-operation, in labour is necessary in all works of civil society, went on the speaker, and money is simply the book-keeper. A certain amount of money is exchangeable for a certain amount of service, and the man with the most money commands the greatest amount of service for his fellow-men.

Those of us who live in the present time are debtors to the past and to the multitudes of men who have built up the structure on which civil society rests. So with the spiritual society of the church. The foundation lay with Jesus Christ, but the building up of the edifice was in the hands of the men and women who have gone before, who preserved and handed down the Divine gifts and who spent their lives in preaching the Gospel to our pagan forbears. There is an obligation of the faithful of to-day to give something back for what they have received in these spiritual ways. The assistance of the laity is a vital necessity in the spreading of the Word of God. The clergy alone are powerless to do all. The paying of the spiritual debt lies in the hands of the faithful, who were adjured by the speaker to give aid to the work of the Catholic Extension Society, which he commeded to their consideration.

"Ignorance of the real truth of Catholic doctrine and prejudice with regard to it constitute a stone wall, a barrier which keeps the true faith from the hearts of many."

D.D.G.M. VISITS MARMORA LODGE

Pleasant Banquet Held By Local and Visiting Masons.

MARMORA, May 23.—Marmora Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 222, received an official visit on Monday evening from Right Worshipful Bro. F. E. Brown, D. D. G. M., of Prince Edward district. Following the lodge session, a banquet of first-class order was given in honor of the Grand Lodge representative in the town hall, the menu being provided by the Ladies' Guild of St. Paul's church. Wor. Bro. A. V. Yates, as master of the lodge, was in charge of an auspicious toastlist. After giving "The King and Craft," he called upon Wor. Bro. W. A. Sanderson to submit the toast to the "Grand Lodge of Canada." In so doing, Bro. Sanderson touched in an interesting way upon the institution of the Grand Lodges of the various provinces. Replying to the toast, the D. D. G. M. outlined what Masonry should be and stressed the fact that the progress of Canada's Grand Lodge had been in keeping with Canada's rise and growth. He referred also of the tendency of Freemasonry toward religion, impressively stating that it was impossible for one to be a good Mason unless he holds to religious principles. He remarked that Freemasonry was a universal brotherhood. Charity, he said, is the distinguishing characteristic of the Freemason's heart.

Proposing the succeeding toast, "Canada and its Future," Bro. H. T. Berry, Senior Warden, brought out the picturesqueness of the Dominion, referring to the splendor and glories of its creation. His message was that we should not merely behold but live and feel the Canadian spirit. The response to this toast was forthcoming from a distinguished visitor in the person of Bro. Brigadier-General, Hon. A. E. Ross. General Ross declared that the future of Canada was quite safe because it depended upon her people. Her natural resources were of great value only in one way and that when at the command of a great people. It took a great people for example to see the purpose of Niagara and to translate it into a valuable power.

General Ross pointed to great anticipation for Canada because her people have in their hands the traditions of great people. He referred to the sacrifices made by the pioneers and furnished the gathering with personal observations of pioneer work yet going on. "The days of pioneering are not by any means over," he said.

He hoped that the old spirit and blood were not dying out, though strange things were being taught our children to-day. Along with the development of Canada, he could say that the Masonic Order had marched. He instanced names in Hastings county which bore Masonic associations. The Order he declared was not a church but might be called the handmaid of the church.

The next toast on the list was "Visiting Brethren," being ably proposed by Wor. Bro. G. B. Airhart and responded to by Bro. Dr. C. W. Drury of Cataraqui, Bro. Dr. Bowlby of Tweed, and Bro. S. T. Tummon of Winnipeg. The final toast, "The Ladies," was given by Right Wor. Bro. T. E. Laycock, and responded to by Bros. Rev. W. P. Woodger, C. J. Beckley and A. B. Caldwell, the last named, in his remarks, expressing thanks to St. Paul's guild for their labors in connection with the banquet. The toasts of the evening were interspersed with vocal and instrumental numbers by Bro. Ernie Bruce of Toronto.

A large number of ladies accepted the invitation to be present, and added to the brightness of the function, and, with visiting brethren representing twenty distant lodges, the event may be considered one of the pleasantest and most successful of its kind in the annals of the local lodge.

NO BALL GAME TO-MORROW MORNING

Grounds In No Condition After the Extensive Rain of Saturday and To-day.

Fans will regret to learn that the James Stevenson Park is so saturated with water that it is impossible to hold the ball game scheduled for to-morrow morning.

It has been only on rare occasions that the park was fit for a game on May 24th, but it was thought this season, owing to the fact that the water has not been on the park for some time that the field would be all right. However, recent and many rains have again made it so that it would be a mistake to try to use the grounds and the game advertised has been cancelled.

A game will likely be scheduled for Saturday next.

CHEESE MAKER WINS HIS CASE

Judge Huycke Allows Harry McMillan Full Amount of Claim.

AGAINST EMPLOYERS.

His Honor Judge Huycke, has delivered judgment in a case of considerable interest both to cheese makers and proprietors of cheese factories, the action being tried at Havelock on May 12th, without a jury.

Harry McMillan, of Dummer Township, a young man of about nineteen years of age, contracted in writing with the Victoria Cheese and Butter Factory in the Township of Belmont, near Havelock, to make first-class cheese for the 1926 season, and agreed in the event of the cheese not proving to be first class on the Montreal market that a deduction should be made from his wages to meet the loss.

During the season of 1926 some of the cheese made at the factory did not pass as first class cheese on the Montreal market, and the factory deducted the loss from the cheesemaker.

The cheese maker brought action against the factory to recover $100.00 urging that the loss was not caused by him and that any defect in the cheese was caused by the conditions of the factory and appliance and not by reason of negligence or incapacity on his part.

Evidence was given by several cheese makers and by Mr. Bailey of Madoc, Cheese Inspector for the district, that the plaintiff was a first-class cheese maker.

After hearing the testimony judgment was reserved and it has now been given in favor of the plaintiff for the full amount of his claim and costs.

F. D. Kerr, K.C., reupresented the plaintiff, McMillan, and J. A. O'Brien acted for the defendant cheese factory.

CHEERIOS PRESENT MUSICAL COMEDY

Splendid Production is Staged By Lakefield People.

LAKEFIELD, May 23.—The return engagement of the "Lakefield Cheerios," who last year presented "The King of Timbuctoo," was greeted with a large audience, despite the threatening weather, for the new musical comedy, "Oh, For Pity's Sake." It was advertised as being even better than last year's success and it fully lived up to the expectations. The stage setting was exceedingly attractive, presenting an interior scene with fireplace in which a realistic fire burned. The stage furnishings were from T. B. McMaster, Lakefield, and the electrical fixtures from Grant and Thorpe, Peterboro'.

The cast of characters was: Marion Stanton, a boarding-school girl, Mrs. A. M. FitzGerald; Ruth Ripley, her friend; Miss Angela Osborne; Dr. Ferguson, principal of the young ladies' seminary, Mr. E. M. Grier; Mrs. Ferguson, his wife, Miss Gwendolyn Simpson; Miss Agnes McPhail, an instructor in the seminary, Mrs. Bailey; Charles S. Smith, a swimming instructor, in love with Marion, Mr. A. M. FitzGerald; Cicero Socrates Smith, a professor of botany, Mr. Osborne; Simpson, Dr. Ferguson's model butler, Mr. L. W. Dunsden. Chorus—Mesdames J. A. Creasor, E. M. Grier, C. R. May and K. A. Mackenzie, and Misses Margaret Strickland, Muriel Strickland, Florence Mackenzie, Winifred Payne, Maxwell Hamilton, Loretta Gibson, Lilian Stuart, and Nila Bogue.

The scene was laid in a young ladies' seminary and the plot revolved about a case of mistaken identity. A professor of botany was expected, Cicero Socrates Smith, and on the same day a new janitor was also expected. The latter was Charles S. Smith, who had fallen in love with Marion the summer before, and in order to be near her gets a place as janitor in the seminary. Simpson, the immaculate butler, brings in a card bearing the name of "C. S. Smith," and naturally Dr. Ferguson takes him to be the earned professor of botany. It is Charles S. Smith, who is puzzled by the references to his laboratory and his classes. Later, the professor, an eccentric figure, laden with boxes, suit-cases and umbrella, arrives and is taken for the janitor and hustled to the basement, and his remarks regarding his laboratory and apparatus are looked on as ridiculous affectations. The professor is afflicted with bronchitis and resorts to cough lozenges to alleviate his sufferings.

The play is interlarded with songs with tuneful choruses which added greatly not only from a musical point of view, but from the scenic effects which were cleverly arranged. The musical numbers of the first act included a sunshine chorus, in which the curtain rose, showing a bevy of pretty girls in sports attire. The solo part was taken by Miss Winifred Payne, whose sweet soprano voice was heard to advantage.

The telephone song and chorus with Marion, Ruth, and the chorus, was pretty, each girl having a tiny toy telephone with paper streamers attached. "Let Me Show the Way to Happy Land" was a pretty chorus, and the duet of Mrs. Ferguson and Miss McPhail, "Get Away, Old Man, Get Away," was amusing and sweetly sung, urging the girls "never to marry an old man," but to take the young man "whose heart is full of love."

"Let's Get Together" was sung by Charles Smith and the chorus, and included a pretty dance.

The duet between the two Smiths, "He's a Small Town Sport," was a comedy bit which included local hits at several popular young men.

"The Old-Fashioned Garden" was one of the best musical numbers, and was sung by Miss McPhail and Cicero Socrates Smith.

The concluding chorus of the first act was sung by Marion and Charles with the chorus, the latter carrying multi-colored lights which were waved to and fro and provided one of the prettiest scenic effects of the play. Just before the curtain fell, Donald FitzGerald presented a bouquet of flowers to Mrs. Osborne, to whose untiring efforts much of the success of the entertainment was due. A bouquet was also presented to Mrs. E. R. Tate, the musical director, who had spared neither time nor effort to ensure success.

The curtain rose on the second act showing the girls in evening dress, seated on the floor singing "Honolulu Moon," a tuneful song, with a haunting melody.

C. E. Strickland contributed a solo, "Out of the Dusk," his beautiful tenor voice showing to advantage in the selection.

The girls then presented a pageant of the customs and costumes from the landing of the Pilgrim fathers to the present day, the accompanying stanzas being read by Mrs. Bailey and Miss Simpson.

Naturally, the first to appear was the Puritan maid, demure and modest, in a real Priscilla costume; she sang a solo in a sweet voice, "Cuckoo." This part was well taken by Miss Mila Bogue. Then followed the stately minuet, given by Mrs. A. M. FitzGerald in scarlet coat, knee breeches and white wig, and Miss Angela Osborne with powdered hair, patches and hoop skirt. The graceful movement and courtly dignity recalled the stories of the old days of chivalry. Then came a gavotte danced by Miss Margaret Strickland in a flounced skirt, and her sister, Miss Muriel Strickland, in the costume of eighty years ago. This, too, was a splendid example of the days when dancing was a graceful art. The costumes and stage setting admirably set off these dances which were perfectly done by the young ladies.

An old-fashioned square dance followed, with the girls in calico and sun bonnet, and the boys (?) in smocks and "cow breakfast" hats. This showed the period when the dance was a frolic and the audience thoroughly enjoyed it. Those taking part were Mrs. Grier, Mrs. K. A. Mackenzie, Miss Loretta Gibson and Miss Maxwell Hamilton, Mrs. Creasor, Misses Winifred Payne, Muriel Strickland, and Angela Osborne.

A polka followed, showing the vogue of the 80's when dancing was more of the "spinning top" variety. This was well carried out by Mrs. Osborne and Miss Florence Mackenzie.

Then came the stately Gibson girl with her graceful figure and trained skirt with its small waist. Mrs. Elsa May took this part perfectly and danced with C. E. Strickland an old-fashioned waltz. To represent the present day came little Miss Mary Strickland in a silver frock, silver bandeaux in her bobbed hair and rolled stockings to give a solo Charleston. She was loudly encored and kindly responded.

The pageant was one of the features of the performance, being novel, graceful and extremely pretty, every part being perfectly taken.

Other musical numbers of the second act were a duet between Miss McPhail and Cicero Smith, "Gee, I Wish I Had a Sweetheart Just Like You," and a duet with chorus between Marion and Charles, "A Game That Two Can Play." The curtain descended on the last verse of the "Sunshine Chorus."

During the last act all the wrongs are made right and all ends well. Simpson is caught in burglarizing the silver by Charles, who had just been turned out by Dr. Ferguson who discovered him making love to Marion, and who returned in time to frustrate Simpson's burglarious intentions. Professor Cicero Smith is given his proper place, and although his feelings are sorely wounded and his bronchitis increased by the enforced sojourn in the damp cellar, he forgives the mistake and finds consolation with Miss McPhail, with whom he falls violently in love. Their love-making is one of the best comedy touches of the play.

The receipts at the door amounted to something over $100, which was gratifying to those who had worked so hard for the evening's success.

The scenery was manufactured by Donald FitzGerald and was a genuine masterpiece. He was assisted by his wife in its manufacture and it added tremendously to the setting of the play. The flickering firelight in the darkened room when Simpson was engaged in his nefarious schemes was a master stroke. K. A. Mackenzie operated the spotlight which was a valuable addition. Mrs. Tate ably filled the role of musical director. The performers all filled their parts admirably, co-operating to make a successful performance. Cicero Socrates Smith really deserves premier honors in the play, taking the comedy part in an inimitable manner; Mrs. FitzGerald was unaffected and winsome in her part as Marion. Mrs. Bailey, Miss Simpson and Miss Angela Osborne each filled her part well. Mr. Grier, as the rather pompous headmaster, and Mr. FitzGerald as the modern young man in love with a pretty girl, were admirable, and Mr. Dunsden, as the butler, impassive and respectful in the presence of his employers, and in their absence conspiring to rob them, was also excellent. The Cheerios are to be congratulated on this, their second successful musical comedy.

INSTITUTE HOLDS PUBLIC MEETING

Report of Year's Work and Address By Mrs. Lowe Feature Meeting.

MILLBROOK, May 23.—The public meeting, held in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the Women's Institute, drew a fair-sized audience, the President, Mrs. Charles Thorndyke, taking the chair.

The acting secretary, Mrs. Will Armstrong, gave a brief but comprehensive outline of the year's activities in the local branch, showing 44 members now on the roll; 9 regular meetings held with an average attendance of 13; flowers had been placed about the Soldiers' Cenotaph in front of the Town Hall; 4 signboards erected at the municipality limits for the direction of tourists; a box of fruit (preserved) sent to the Sick Children's Hospital in the fall; a special exhibit, with prizes in several classes, shown at the fall fair; an enjoyable picnic held in July; some needy families remembered with baskets of cheer at the Christmas season; a piano purchased and placed in the Town Hall; a very successful social gathering held on Saint Patrick's Day, and a concert recently given under Institute auspices which added to the funds of the organization.

The play which was being prepared for the night of the 24th of May had been unavoidably postponed owing to the illness of one of the characters, and will be put on at a later date.

The annual meeting will be held at the home of the treasurer, Mrs. T. H. Aiken, on Saturday, May 28, at 8 p.m., when full reports will be received, the officers elected, and fees paid.

A recitation (in costume), "Aunt Jemima's Courtship," by Miss Dorothy Crossley, preceded the address of the evening given by Mrs. M. E. Lowe, R.N., of Toronto, who was introduced by Mrs. Thorndyke, and who has been speaking at all the branches in the district during the week, her tour not concluding until Friday, May 27, the final meeting of the series being at Charlecote.

Mrs. Lowe spoke chiefly on the many advantages of Institute work, emphasizing the social side, the educational features, the fact that it is international in its scope though Ontario has the honor of originating this branch of women's activities, which has now so wide-reaching an influence. This year the Women's Institute will celebrate its thirtieth birthday, Mrs. Hoddless having started this great work at Stoney Creek, on February 19, 1897.

There are over 7,000 Institutes now in the world, and any girl over 14 is eligible for membership. "Unity of effort, efficiency of methods, and making the most of what we have at hand, are outstanding characteristics of our organization, and we should cease hiding our light under a bushel, and speak with pride of what we have accomplished."

The formation of a "Home and School Council," locally, and the election of a lady member on the school board, were two things stressed by Mrs. Lowe, as she detailed what might be done for the betterment of schools, and child welfare.

At the close of the gathering, Miss S. Muir, Principal of the Continuation School, spoke briefly, fully endorsing this suggestion of Mrs. Lowe's, and promising the utmost co-operation 'both in what we can do for you, and what you can do for us,' should a Home and School Committee be formed at the Institute's annual meeting this month.

Demonstrations, and some of the instruction courses, such as home dress making, domestic science, first aid, etc., assisting the Agricultural Representative by offering prizes, and possibly providing a judge, at the annual school fair, taking advantage of the 'packet library' at Guelph, when lectures or other forms of public entertainment, are in view, with every member giving ready help in some form at the regular meetings, were some of the helpful points stressed by the speaker. The appointment of a press reporter was also advocated.

Mrs. Lowe had a special message for the large number of Continuation School girls present, presenting her theme under five heads, "Knowledge, Conscience, Work, Charity, Moderation," the head, the hand, the will and the heart.

A chorus, "Canada, My Home," by the Glee Club, concluded the programme. Before the National Anthem was sung, Mrs. J. R. Eakins, District Secretary, moved the formal vote of thanks to the speaker, and Mrs. Will Armstrong seconded it; a hearty hand-clapping showed the appreciation of the audience.

The social hour at the close gave opportunity for the members to meet Mrs. Lowe, and during this time the executive provided a generous treat of home-made candy.

MEMENTOES OF OLD PIONEERS AMONG PAPERS

La Salle Maissoneuve and Others Are Recalled in Archives.

MANY AUTOGRAPHS.

Names of Many Fur Traders Found in the Records.

MONTREAL, May 23 (Canadian Press).—Some of the most vivid chapters of early Canadian history lie tucked away among the closely-packed files which make up the archives of the district of Montreal, presided over by E. Z. Massicotte. The records preserved here cover almost every phase of the life of French-Canada from the founding of the settlement at the foot of Mount Royal in 1642.

The story of Canada's oldest province is here written in facts and figures. Entries of births and deaths in parish registers, notarial deeds recording transfers of land and permits to trade in furs supply the nebulous material for innumerable romances. Here are the biographies of daring pioneers, men whose lives brimmed over with adventure, glory and shame, compressed into a few closely written lines.

Scattered thickly through the century-yellowed pages are the signatures of men whose perspicacity and daring have gained them places in every school history book. One of the most interesting of these historic autographs is that of the Sieur de Maisonneuve, founder and first governor of Montreal. Its authoritative scrawl closes many of the documents housed here. Each page of the first notarial deed issued in the district is thus honored.

This unique document, one of the oldest notarial deeds on the continent, transfers to one Pierre Gadoys, forty arpents of farmland situated in what is now a commercial district in the great bi-lingual metropolis.

Another signature which would be highly prized by any collector is that of the famous LaSalle, explorer of the Mississippi river. Before setting out on his epochal journey into the wilderness LaSalle, in conformity with the law governing all such expeditions whether for trade or exploration, was obliged to record the name of each member of his party. His name, inscribed by his own hand, may be read on this register of adventures to-day.

The roster of the fur trade, which is one of Mr. Massicotte's most treasured charges, runs into thousands of names, for not only the generals and captains of that far-scouring army, but each private soldier, each wild courier-de-bois, had his name inscribed in the seignorial register before he bade farewell to what the young colony boasted of civilization.

Many of these men never returned to their pioneer homes, some fell victims to hostile Indians, to the death-dealing rapids of upper Ottawa, or to privation. But many hundreds, according to the archivist, settled by them nameless lakes and rivers in the wilds of the North and Southwest. They established family groups and became the pioneers of now populous districts.

Thus, many families now prominent in Central Canada and the Mississippi states could, if they chose, trace their histories back through the centuries to the French colony on the St. Lawrence. They would find the names of their wood-running ancestors inscribed in the archives of the district of Montreal.

Teeth Made White —Glorious, Gleaming

Please accept 10-day tube to try

Remove the dingy film, to which scores of Tooth and Gum troubles now are traced.

Modern dental science now has found a way that restores "off-color" teeth to clearness, that gives toneless gums a healthy coral tint.

Famous movie stars use this way before going on a scene. That's why movie smiles glisten so. Leading dentists urge it widely. For it protects the teeth and firms tender gums.

It is called Pepsodent—a new-type tooth paste that works by removing the dingy film coat from teeth that old-time dentifrices did not clear off successfully. That's why brushing fails you.

Run your tongue across your teeth and you'll feel that film. A slippery coating that absorbs discolorations and keeps your teeth off color, that breeds bacteria by the millions and invites tooth decay, gum troubles and pyorrhea.

Remove it and you will be amazed at what you see. Discard old ways now. Get Pepsodent at any drug store. Or send coupon for 10-day tube to try.

MANY HONORS ARE CONFERRED ON LINDBERGH

Young Pilot Becomes Honorary Alumnus of Superior Normal Club.

GETS AERO CLUB MEDAL.

Greatly Moved When President Tenders Compliments To His Mother.

PARIS, May 23 (Canadian Press).—France to-day gathered "Slim" Lindbergh to its heart. The young American pilot who traced a glorious arc through the skies from New York to Paris to the plaudits of the entire civilized world, was received in the Palace of the Elysee by President Doumergue and there decorated in the name of the Republic with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

Lindbergh also was unanimously named an "Honorary Alumnus" of the Superior Normal School, the highest institution of learning in France, at to-day's session of governing board. He will be presented with a diploma at a ceremony yet to be arranged.

It was a day of glory for the modest boy. The Aero Club of France arranged to confer its great gold medal on him late this afternoon. Premier Poincare was to receive him immediately afterward. Lindbergh was still dressed in ill-fitting borrowed clothes, the tailors and shirt makers still being busy supplying the wardrobe which he left behind in favor of more fuel for his beloved plane, but the President of France pinned the Cross on his breast as though he were arrayed in splendor, and then swept him into his arms and kissed him on both cheeks in the traditional accolade.

"Slim" was moved—even more so when the President presented through him the compliments of himself and of all France to the flier's mother, back in Detroit. The bird man's eyes were moist as, accompanied by M. Doumergue, Myron T. Herrick, United States Ambassador, and others, he was escorted to the gardens of the Palace, where the camera men awaited to record the historical incident.

Once a School Teacher—Later a Famous Physician

A young man who was brought up on a farm in Western Pennsylvania, qualified for district school teacher. Further pursuing his studies and teaching, he managed to save enough money to put him thru medical college. He began the practice of medicine in the new oil section of Pennsylvania, and often rode horse-back through the woods to reach and relieve those who were seriously ill. He was a student of nature, knew and easily recognized most of the medicinal plants growing in the woods.

Finally, he moved to Buffalo, N. Y., where he launched his favorite remedies, and, in a short time, they were sold by every druggist in the land. Today, the name of this man, the late Dr. R. V. Pierce, is known throughout the world. His Golden Medical Discovery is the best known general tonic for building up strength, restoring impaired tissues and enriching the blood. More than fifty million bottles have been sold in the U. S. If your druggist does not sell it, in liquid or tablets, you can obtain a trial pkg. of the tablets by sending 10c to Dr. Pierce's Laboratory in Bridgeburg, Ont.

ARMY LEADERS

Cotton said that it was his belief that they were good boys, not only when they were inside the temple, but when they were among themselves. "I have always been interested in the Salvation Army in Peterborough," he remarked, "and my full appreciation is given to the work accomplished by this great organization in our city."

Mrs. Maxwell.

In a very pleasing manner Mrs. Maxwell addressed the congregation gathered, thanking all for the hearty welcome that the Commissioner and she had received.

"I have always wanted to come to Peterborough since our arrival in Toronto from the Old Country," said Mrs. Maxwell, "for I have heard of the people here; how fine they are, and of this wonderful hall, and I am glad already that I was able to come, for everything is all up to my expectations, and at our services to-morrow I will try and help to the best of my ability."

Commissioner Maxwell.

Commissioner Maxwell expressed his thanks for the warm welcome that had been tendered to his wife and himself in a strange city, and to the Mayor and Alderman Cotton for speaking on behalf of the citizens in such a sincere manner concerning the activities of the Salvation Army. "I am a great Salvationist," said the Commissioner, "and when I arrived in Canada ten months ago I knew that the people here would be appreciative of my teachings, and in my opinion Canada is a great country.

"The people of Canada attract me very much, and I study the people in this grand country with a great fascination." He then went on to say that he loved to tell of persons converted at his meetings, there finding Christ as their Saviour.

"These conversions make me realize the grand old truth that God still lives and that Jesus is not a myth, and I believe that the hearts of men are changed and that He is becoming a real person in their hearts. I thank God, said the Commissioner, "for the belief that Jesus gave up His life for us, and when we repent we will be forgiven, for we must hang together to get our souls converted.

"I want this stay to be one of complete happiness, and with the hope that this visit will be by no means the last."

Band Sergeant Hill welcomed the visitors on behalf of the band, and thanked the Mayor and other speakers for the bouquets that had been showered upon the band in connection with their services on different occasions.

Brigadier Bloss then proposed a vote of thanks to Mayor Holloway and Alderman Cotton for so graciously attending this service of welcome to Commissioner and Mrs. Maxwell.

Selections by the Army band and songsters also contributed to make the programme on Saturday night a decided success.

A GOOD RECIPE FOR DANDRUFF

Nobody loves Dandruff. But thousands endure it, not knowing it can be easily stopped and the scalp kept free and clean by just three minutes daily attention. From any drug store, get 6 oz. Bay Rum, 2 oz. Lavona (de Composee) and ½ dr. Menthol Crystals. Mix together and allow to stand over night before using. Then each morning on arising rub the mixture thoroughly into the scalp with the finger tips or a stiff brush.

Dandhruff quickly vanishes under this treatment, itching ceases instantly and hair stops falling out and is made lustrous and fluffy and looks and feels 100 per cent better.

If you want to stop dandruff and save your hair, try this simple home recipe, just as thousands have done and are doing. It is a famous old English formula that is harmless and inexpensive.

Centre of Canada's Confederation Celebration

CANADIAN LEGION CONVENTION TO HEAR GRATIFYING REPORTS

New Branches Formed at Several Ontario Centres Recently.

EXISTENCE JUSTIFIED.

Men Suffering From War Disabilities Are Care of Organization.

Within the past two weeks new branches of the Canadian Legion have been organized at the following places: Prescott, Belleville, Brockville, Gananoque, Smith's Falls and Brighton. Other branches in the course of formation are at Campbellford, Warkworth, Colborne, Cobourg, Bowmanville, where organization work will be completed shortly, and the branches properly started. Organization work has also been started in Eastern Ontario at Arnprior, Renfrew, Perth, Carleton Place, Napanee, Deseronto, Trenton, and other places. When the organization work is completed in these towns there will be a complete chain of Legion branches from Oshawa, east to the Quebec border.

Prov. Organizer H. McLeod, who has been conducting the organization work has just returned to Provincial Headquarters after a successful campaign in Eastern Ontario, where he addressed meetings at the aforementioned places and got the branches under way. In the last few days he presented charters to the Brockville and Smith's Falls branches and conducted and installed an election of officers at the former town. The Legion has now over 100 branches in the Province of Ontario, and it is hoped to increase this number of active units to 150, in the next few months. These branches have been organized since June of last year when the Ontario Command was formed. If proof were needed as to the progress of the Legion in Ontario, it is here furnished in the formation of these branches in the space of about ten months. With the Provincial Convention less than two weeks away, the Organizer hopes to have three more branches organized by the opening day, June 1st. He proceeds this week on a short campaign in North Western Ontario, similar to what he has conducted in the East, also in Northern Ontario, and will address a meeting of the Walkerton comrades with the object in view of forming another branch there.

The Legion Justifies its Existence.

In the coure of his itinerary, Organizer H. McLeod has come across many men suffering from disabilities resulting from their war service, either with a very inadequate pension or in some cases none at all. The claims thus obtained are turned over to the Adjustment Bureau of the Legion, and the adjustment machinery brought to bear on them with good results for the applicants and their dependents. A case was unearthed at Smith's Falls during the visit of the Organizer there, on May 12th, and was immediately taken up with the pension authorities at Ottawa. The boy in this case enlisted at the age of 14 years and ten months. He was large of stature for his age and no doubt gave his wrong age on elistment. In the course of events he graduated to France and was wounded in the left thigh at Paschendaele. After a period of hospitalization was discharged in Jan., 1918, the reason given, "on account of being under age." After discharge he carried on at employment for about fifteen months at Smith's Falls, working as an engineer's fitter and helper. He then went to Detroit and found employment there. Towards the end of 1922 his old wound broke out and he went into hospital at the latter place. He spent all of his savings to provide private treatment and was then taken in hand by one of the charitable organizations. No attempt was made by the boy or his relatives to link the disability up with his war service. He lay in a Detroit hospital for one year as a bed patient and when in a condition to be moved was sent back to Smith's Falls. Upon arrival there he went into hospital and has been a patient there ever since. His keep has been provided by the hard earnings of a loving sister and father.

About a year ago his relatives got in touch with the S.C.R. to see what could be done in regard to treatment, but beyond a visit from one of the Ottawa social workers from the S.C.R. nothing was done as a result of her report. It is the opinion of the local physician at the hospital that the disability from which this boy is now suffering is due to his war service. The poison from the old wound in the left thigh travelled across the body and affected the right thigh and leg and this at the present time is practically useless. The boy is now 25 years of age, with no hope for the future unless his disability is traced to his war service. The Adjustment Bureau of the Canadian Legion is now busy with every prospect of linking this man's disability with his war service. This case is typical of many others received in this way. The Legion, through its organization work is making new contacts where veterans are living in small towns or out of the way places. A good many cases reach our Adjustment Bureau through this channel which hitherto were not taken care of. When the Legion has linked up all the veterans from every local centre in the Province into units of the Canadian Legion, there will be few cases such as here mentioned, allowed to remain neglected, and with the pension legislation which it is hoped will obtain in the near future, a great many cases will benefit by the services of the Legion and qualify for pension or hospital treatment.

LOCAL STORE OPENS LATER

Ottawa, Kingston and Brockville First in Eastern Ontario.

SHOPS BEING INSPECTED.

TORONTO, May 23 — Announcement will be made early this week by the Liquor Control Board of the official time for the beginning of Government sale of beer, wines and liquors, the prices to be charged, and a number of new points at which stores are to be opened.

The announcement will follow a survey, which will be made by the Commission officials, commencing this morning. Each store which has been taken over will be visited, and an inspection made to determine the progress made upon alterations, the time necessary to finish and to stock up. Most of the officials have been practicaly agreed upon, and are ready to go to work when so instructed by the Commission. The officials will begin their duties a few days before the stores are to open.

Preparing Price Lists

The Commission's price list has been in the hands of the printers for several days, but it is still subject to further changes before being finally decided upon. There are to be some changes from the Ontario Government dispensaries' lists, and what changes there are will be lower.

"Scouts" Seek Locations

Eastern Ontario received attention from the Commission on Saturday, when it was decided to open stores on the first day of sale at Kingston and Ottawa, where there are now dispensaries, and at Brockville. Ottawa will have an extra store a little later on, and a store will also be opened shortly at Peterborough but not with the first lot.

In both Eastern and Western Ontario "scouts" are out looking up new locations at a number of points, which will be announced later. It is the desire of the Commission to get the stores in the larger centres working smoothly before the others are opened up or locations settled.

MANY FOXES ON RANCH.

The Patte-Wolff Fox Farm Limited, has a new secretary-treasurer and assistant manager in the person of C. J. Ray, formerly of Peterboro, and for the last ten years with the Robertson Candy Company of Toronto. Many will remember Mr. Ray as an outstanding player on the intermediate Peterborough hockey team, and son of Sam Ray, tobacconist. He is now giving up travelling altogether and putting his whole interests in the fox-farming industry.

Mr. Patte told the Examiner today that this year will be, in his estimation, the biggest in production. There are at present three hundred foxes on the farm. The ranch will be open for public inspection from the First of July on.

He also stated that the two foxes lost some time ago have never been recovered, but if anyone should chance to see them he would be greatly obliged if they would get in touch with him immediately by phone

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

Stephen Churchill's manner, as he began to question Cherry, was at once fatherly and deferential. His voice was almost coaxingly kind as if he were talking to a child whom he did not want to frighten. Cherry's hands were clasped in her lap, her little feet, in their black patent leather pumps, dangled an inch or two from the floor, the witness chair being ludicrously high and big for her tiny body.

"What is your name?" Churchill asked, with an encouraging smile.

"Charity Amanda Lane—Wiley," Cherry answered, hesitating slightly as she added her hated new name.

"You are known by what name?"

"Cherry."

"When were you born, Cherry? What is your present age?" Churchill asked gently.

"I was born December 20, 1907. I was nineteen years old last December," Cherry answered very clearly.

"Your honor, I offer a copy of the birth certificate of this defendant," Churchill said quietly.

The exhibit was accepted for the record.

The next half dozen questions elicited information from the docile, unsmiling little defendant as to her place of birth, her parentage, other members of her immediate family, her place of residence. Cherry's voice broke when she told of her mother's death on the day of her indictment for murder, and two tears trickled slowly out of her wide eyes.

"When did you leave school, Cherry?"

"I was graduated from Central High School in June, 1925, when I was seventeen. Then I entered business college—the Graham Secretarial School—from which I was graduated in November, 1925. I entered the Graham School, June 15," Cherry answered, in an even, steady voice.

"You completed the stenographic course in about six months then?" Churchill asked, smiling upon her as if he were proud of her.

"Yes, sir. Then I started to work."

"Tell the jury briefly the positions that you held, Cherry," Churchill directed.

"I worked first for Dr. Charles H. Mullins, who paid me fifteen dollars a week. I was his receptionist and secretary, though he did not have much correspondence. I left his employ January a year ago."

"Will you tell the jury why you left Dr. Mullins, Cherry?"

"Because I felt that I had had enough experience to command more money. I was then getting eighteen dollars a week. I got a position with the Prudence Insurance Company, at twenty dollars a week, and worked there until about the first of last May."

"Why did you leave the Prudence Company, Cherry?"

Color flamed up in Cherry's pale face. "I—because my employer was—too fond of me, and I—I didn't like him."

"Did you encourage his attentions, lead him on?" Churchill asked gently.

"I certainly did not!"

"Go on, Cherry," Churchill encouraged her.

"Then I went to work for Mr. Adolph Bohn, and worked for him until July."

"And why did you leave Mr. Bohn's employ, Cherry?"

"He—He asked me to marry him and I—I could not do so, because I was in love with somebody else," Cherry faltered, her cheeks like poppies.

"And that other man was?" Churchill prompted gently.

"Mr. Christopher Wiley," Cherry answered in a voice so low that the jury strained forward to hear her.

"The man you are now married to?" Churchill cleared his throat apologetically.

"Yes, sir."

"I wish you would tell the jury, Cherry, whether you are still in love with Mr. Wiley, your husband?"

The audience, startled at Churchill's amazing tactics, gasped audibly and cupped their ears to catch her low answer.

"No, sir, I am not!" The color died out of her face suddenly, leaving it as white as paper.

"Can you say just when your feelings toward your husband changed?"

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

Again threatening aspects rule the day, according to astrology, which finds the month a period of transition.

There is a forbidding sign for all who seek work, as there may be many reorganizations in business affairs and long delays for employees.

This direction of the stars tends toward criticism that may be prevalent in families and will extend in politics.

The seers prophesy that a statesman who has proved his worth is to break down bars of precedent.

The sway is favorable to educators and universities should benefit. Graduates of this year are to be exceptionally fortunate, it is foretold.

Farmers may meet discouraging conditions to-day and they may expect devastating summer storms.

While it is prognosticated that agriculturists will struggle against untoward weather conditions, profits are still to be expected for the season, for food prices will rise, the reading of the stars indicates.

Bad news of some sort may be expected in the newspapers while this configuration affects for destinies of dwellers on the planet earth.

Love affairs should flourish while this configuration prevails and all the signs point to a summer of extraordinary romances for persons of all ages.

Divorces are to be even more numerous than in the past and for that reason wives who are wise will be as fascinating as possible, if they desire to keep their husbands.

Occultists explain that dwellers in this country inevitably must reflect world influences and whenever there are wars and conflicts of exceptional fury a corresponding impulse toward love is revealed.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

This 1927 version of the period frock is made of printed tulle with the bouffant skirt made over a full taffeta slip. The roses ranged at the left side are made of taffeta.

There is no more real reason why all period frocks should be of the full-skirted, close-fitted bodice type than that all period chairs should be of the Hepplewhite sort, with heart-shaped backs and straight slender legs. The dressmakers borrowed the current use of the word period from the furniture makers, who apply it to any piece of furniture showing fairly close following of some one or another type of furniture used in the past, but as a usual thing they have used it in a narrower sense, and when they speak of a "period frock" they have in mind a frock that is a rather free translation of one of the bouffant types of frocks—sometimes suggesting the stiff wide skirts and straight long waists that we associate with the painter Velasquez—sometimes reminiscent of the more billowy frocks of the era of Marie Antoinette and Du Barry or again of the prim, pretty crinoline frocks of mid-Victorian days. A straight, scant, high-waisted frock of Directoire suggestion—though in actual fact just as truly period as any of the bouffant models—would seldom be so designated.

The popularity of the full-skirted bouffant type of frock with American women—especially young American women—has often been commented upon. But it is not without many admirers on the other side of the Atlantic as well. Almost invariably these skirts are long as well as wide—being of full ankle length. Sometimes they are posed over a fairly scant short slip so that the more or less transparent fabric of the full outside skirt gives a glimpse of more abbreviated lines beneath—but some of the newest full frocks are made with taffeta linings as long and full as the overskirt. There is an uneven finish to the hems of some of the full frocks—the line either taking a smart diagonal across the swaying fullness of the skirt from left to right—or being comparatively short in the center, longer at the outsides.

BLACKHEADS

Blackheads go quickly by a simple method that just dissolves them. Get two ounces of peroxine powder from your druggist, rub this with a hot, wet cloth briskly over the blackheads—and you will wonder where they have gone.

A little workgirl in a Paris dressmaking establishment was seized with a great desire to possess one of the fashionable sleeveless waistcoats, but could not afford to buy the material from which they are usually made. So she collected the little left-over scraps of silks and satins from the workroom, and from these she made a patch-work waistcoat. Now the so-called "crazy-quilt" waistcoats have become very popular in the French capital and have even been seen on many celebrated women of fashion.

PIRATES LEAD IN NATIONAL Assume Leadership By Scuttling Giants For Fourth Consecutive Time.

REDS DEFEAT CUBS.

NEW YORK, May 23 (Canadian Press)—The Pittsburgh Pirates assumed the leadership in the National League yesterday by scuttling the Giants for the fourth consecutive time by 9 to 4 while the Cubs were taken into camp by the Reds at Cincinnati. Chicago is now in second place with New York on the rung below.

Yesterday's victory gave the Corsairs a complete sweep of the series and it marked the first time this season that a club has taken four in a row from the Giants.

Cincinnati touched four Chicago pitchers for a total of 15 hits and won, 8 to 4. The Reds batted hard to shatter Chicago's winning streak of six games. Root last year won six games he pitched against the Reds but they knocked him out of the box yesterday in the fourth inning.

Brooklyn went on a rampage at home today and assaulted three Philadelphia pitchers for 22 hits for a 20 to 4 victory. It was the fifth straight triumph for Dazzy Vance, Robins' speed ball artist. Willoughby was knocked out of the box before a man had been retired in the first inning and his successors, Decatur and O'Neil, were powerless before the Brooklyn attack.

MACHINE GUNNERS TO WORK TUESDAY

Annual Course in Musketry and Gunnery to be Fired on Tuesday.

Shooting, range finding and signalling practice will be indulged in tomorrow by No. 3 Company, 4th Battalion, Canadian Machine Gun Corps, under Major H. Dodds. A regular course of firing must be done every year by officers, N.C.O.'s and men, and the addition of a musketry course makes it impossible to do all the work in the three days of camp. It is necssary, therefore, to have as much as possible done early, and the holiday to-morrow has been set aside. The exercises will take place at the rifle ranges on the Norwood road, where the company will also camp on July 1, 2 and 3 next.

BRUSSELS, May 23. — Canadian Press. — Poland was eliminated from the Davis cup competition by Belgium on Saturday, the Belgians adding the doubles to their two singles victories of Friday.

WILL PLAY ON HOYLAKE COURSE

Scene of Opening Day in British Amateur Golf Tourney.

HOYLAKE, England, May 23. — (Canadian Press.)—The difficult Hoylake course to-day will be the scene of the opening day's play in the British amateur golf championship. Conditions for this year's title matches are far from favorable. The wind-swept seaside links present putting greens which are baked and slick from lack of rain. Practice rounds by the big guns of British golf and a few foreigners failed to present any remarkable scores. Len Nettleford, Australian champion, turned in a 74 for the best effort.

Jess Sweetser, United States' holder of the title, is not defending his honors, and Roger Wethered has been made favorite for the championship. The Scots are touting young Andrew Jamieson who last year eliminated Bobby Jones, present holders of the British and United States open titles.

Jones is an absentee this year and the invading entrants from the United States present no outstanding players.

SPLIT IN TOURNEY.

England and Scotland Halved in International Golf Tourney.

HOYLAKE, Eng., May 23. — England and Scotland halved their international golf tournament Saturday, Scotland winning the foursomes 3 to 2, while England won the singles, 6 1-2 to 1-2.

The matches, which were on Walker cup lines, were a curtain raiser for next week's amateur championships, which will be played by picked teams of crack amateurs from both countries.

YANKS DEFEAT INDIANS 7-2

Shocker Almost Invincible With Men on Bases in Fracas.

RUTH'S TENTH HOMER.

NEW YORK, May 23 (Canadian Press)—Shocker was almost invincible with men on bases and New York won, 7 to 2, from the Indians at Cleveland, thus evening the series. The Yankees battered three Indian pitchers. Babe Ruth knocked out his tenth home run of the season, in the sixth inning with one man on.

Staging a ninth inning batting rally which drove in two runs, the Browns came from behind at St. Louis and defeated the Boston Red Sox, 6 to 5, giving them a clean sweep of the four game series. The Browns have now won seven of their last eight games at home. McFayden and Williams each hit home runs.

Howard Ehmke let the Sox down at Chicago with five scattered hits while the Athletics bunched their hits off Faber and Barnabee, defeating the Sox, 6 to 1, in the final game of the series.

Eddie Collins, lead-off man for the Athletics, started the inning five different times. Ty Cobb, who had hit safely in 21 consecutive games, failed to hit today, in five times up.

Manush's home run in the ninth inning gave Detroit a six to six tie with Washington in the final game of the series at Detroit today. With two runners on the bases, Manush drove the ball high against the right field fence. It bounded back almost to second base where Bucky Harris kicked it into left field. Before the Washington players could recover the ball Manush circled the bases behind Gehringer and Warner. Harris was not charged with an error because Manush's drive had left the playing field and was automatically a home run.

The game was called in the ninth by agreement, to enable the Washington team to catch a train.

LEAFS LOSE FOURTH TIME

Triple Play in First Inning Wins Bison's Game 6-1.

STERLING PITCHING.

NEW YORK, May 23 (Canadian Press)—The Syracuse Stars gave Rochester its seventh straight defeat at Rochester today by winning yesterday afternoon's game, 10 to 5. The Tribe used three pitchers to stem the Syracuse attack but to no avail.

Featuring with a triple play in the first inning, the Bisons smacked the Toronto Maple Leafs to defeat again at Buffalo for a record of four out of five games played between the clubs in six days. The score was 6 to 1. Sterling pitching by Fay Thomas, ex-Giant, combined with long distance hitting y George Fisher, who slashed a homer and a triple, made the victory comparatively easy for the Herd. The Bisons completed their triple play in the opening round after Spencer and Lawry opened the game with safe hits. Hargrave bunted a short fly to Bissonette, who wheeled quickly and threw to Cohen who covered first and retired Lawry before he returned to the bag. Cohen in turn relayed the ball to Taylor at second before Spencer, who had a running start could scramble back to the bag in safety.

In a pair of diamond arguments that, among other things, resulted in seven home runs being punched out of the lot, 13 pitchers taking their stand on the peak and 28 runs sloshing over the plate, the Orioles upset the Newark Bears, 11 to 9 and 6 to 2 at Baltimore before a crowd of 7,000 fans.

The Skeeters took both ends of yesterday's doubleheader from the Reading Pretzels, winning 4 to 3 and 3 to 2. It was the Pretzels' 24th and 25th consecutive defeats and their flop in the opening game broke the world's record of 23 straight defeats set by Pittsburgh in 1890.

FLIER RECEIVES GREAT OVATION

so did visitors, many of them men of great prominence. Among the first to visit the Embassy in the morning was Paul Claudel, French Ambassador to the United States, with his son and daughter. They extended congratulations to Ambassador Herrick. But through it all Lindbergh slept undisturbed.

Marshal Lyautey was another caller, as was an official of the Foreign Office, bringing felicitations from M. Briand, who is absent from Paris. The tennis star, Jean Borotra came also proud, he said, to be the first French sportsman to congratulate the aviator.

"I am the happiest man alive," he remarked afterward, "to be the first French sportsman to present my homage to Captain Lindbergh for his magnificent exploit. Nothing could please French sportsmen better than that if Nungesser and Coli had to fail it was Lindbergh who could succeed."

Almost at the same time the donor of the prize of $25,000 that inspired international efforts to make a non-stop flight linking Paris and New York, arrived at the gate—M. Raymond Orteig. He had made a special trip Saturday from the Pyrenees in order to greet Lindbergh upon his arrival, but the aviator reached Paris before M. Orteig.

"I feel a lot lighter," M. Oretig said yesterday morning. "About $25,000 lighter?" some one suggested.

"No, I mean my spirits lighter at the thought of what this man has done."

Sleeps Full Time.

While Lindbergh slept on, and Paris went to lunch, he had then had the regulation eight hours, but had earned more, and he took them, sweetly unconscious that someone had opened the door of his bedroom. He turned over with a deep sigh but did not awaken. It was a little after two o'clock when at last he had his eyes open.

He had retired a little before 4 a.m. after a light meal of consomme and a glass of milk, his first food since leaving New York, except for, as he expressed it, "about a sandwich and a half."

Had No Clothes

When Lindbergh awoke he found upon a table near his bed a mountain of telegraphed and cabled offers that may make him more than a millionaire, but in all the room there was not a stitch of clothes he could call his own. He had come from New York with no garments save his flying suit, a toothbrush, and a razor. All the ordinary little necessities he had left behind him, to save weight for his motor's gasoline supply. The pyjamas which he slept in belonged to the Ambassador.

Now came the problem of clothing him. The Ambassador's shirt was found to fit fairly well, and one of the footmen of the Embassy supplied a modest blue lounge suit that hung somewhat loosely on the slim frame of the modest young man from the West. A pair of tan shoes went to complete the improvised outfit, in which he made his first public appearance since landing. The shoes he brought with him were of the tough old army type and a little heavy for city wear.

When the birdman appeared on the balcony of the Embassy there was nothing of weariness in his countenance. His hair, of the windblown sandy sort so often found on men leading the outdoor life, had been but casually brushed, and as the young man smiled his gently good-hearted, unaffected smile, the crowd that had kept silent so long while he slept burst into quick rising crescendo of "Bravos." For five minutes more he stood there with the Ambassador. The crowd seemed reluctant to let him leave, and he went downstairs and stood at the Embassy's entrance, hidden from the street by high walls and heavy gates, and looked into a hundred lenses that will make his smile known everywhere.

From there the Ambassador led Lindbergh to the marble staircase inside the Embassy, and for several minutes he was surrounded by reporters. He answered questions and told of his flight. It had been better going than he thought it would be up the American coast, but for the next 1,000 miles, over the waters of the Atlantic, the weather was "about as bad as could be." He had to go through fog and sleet and rain, sometimes flying as low as ten feet above the water because of the fog, and sometimes rising 10,000 feet to avoid the storm.

Then daylight, and after many more hours of steady going, ever through to the course he had mapped for himself, there came into view the hills of Ireland, and the worst was over. Victory was in sight. By luck he had reached the French coast: then darkness, then the sweep of powerful searchlights guiding him to his goal.

Slips Into Paris

Finaly the brilliant illuminations of Eifel Tower caught his eyes and he knew he had made Paris. A few minutes later, gracefully as a butterfly alighting upon a flower, his silvery ship of the air glided out of the darkness of night into the glare of searchlights switched on to show him the landing field.

From that time he was in the hands of a delirious crowd. How he got to the Embassy, after being separated from Ambassador Herrick, became only clearly known yesterday. Three French aviators, one of them being Major Weiss, got hold of him and drove him straight across the field in an automobile and on to Paris ahead of the terrific torrent of traffic which afterwards was to block the roads from Le Bourget almost until dawn.

The Ambassador arrived at the Embassy an hour or so later, having been help up in the traffic. Meanwhile the three French aviators had gone out and bought the first great bouquets of flowers that Lindbergh was to receive. Mrs. Vincent Astor and Mrs. John Hay, who had followed the Ambassador's car into Paris from the flying field, pleaded for a chance to congratulate the aviator before he left to sleep away his weariness.

"I'm mighty glad to meet you ladies," the young captain said. "I hope to get a chance to see you again while in Paris," and then he went to bed to wake up a few hours later and find the world was his.

GIRL GUIDES

At St. John's Church.

In extending greetings to the Guides and Brownies attending the United church service, the Rev. Wesley Elliott pointed to the time when they would, in part, control the affairs of Canada. He took for his text the words, "A citizen of no mean city." "With Paul," said the speaker, "it's splendid to have such a thing to say of one's own country. We want to look with becoming pride upon our own Canada and be able to say, I am a citizen of no mean country."

He stressed the point that while material things such as soil minerals and wheat fields are important, the people are the big factor, the main feature of a good country. "They are," said the speaker, "the biz assets in any country, and the better the people the better the country. A good country will have conditions that will minister to robust health."

Continuing, the pastor stated that our system of education should touch and develop the whole manhood and womanhood. A good country must have its home and these homes the nearest possibly approach to the ideal. All homes cannot be rich in silver and gold, but they can be rich in "social, religious and moral aspects of family life." To this end each should contribute his quota of love, cheer, labor, counsel and prayer to make the home life the best and richest possible.

The large congregation, led by an excellent choir, sang heartily "O Canada," 'after which the national anthem brought the service to a close.

The Presbyterian Church Girl Guides, owing, no doubt, to the absence of their minister, who occupied an out-of-town pulpit on Sunday morning, did not parade.

QUAKERS BEAT THISTLE IN THE HOLLOWAY CUP

They Registered Four Goals in First Half—McPhate Injured.

SCORE 5 TO 0

Thistle Ten Players Held the Eleven and Had More of the Play.

Trounced by five goals to nothing the Thistle were put out of the Holloway Soccer Cup, by the Quaker Oats, on Saturday afternoon, at King Edward Park, before a good attendance of spectators.

An unfortunate accident happened to Ian McPhate who received a dislocated shoulder in the early part of the match. He retired in the second half leaving his team with ten men against eleven.

Thistle—McLeod, goal; Ian McPhate and Scott, backs; Jones, Bromley and Cameron, halves; Lang, Livingston, Miller, T. McPhate and Burgess, forwards.

Quakers—Edgar, goal; A. Maker and Stan Maker, backs; Williams, Wade and Carmichael, halves; Curtis, A. Wilson, Mitchell, T. Wilson and T. Foster, forwards.

A Goal Early.

All within the fraction of a few minutes the Quakers took the lead through Wade who punted the counter past the custodian at a rocket pace. In fact, the early stages were more in favour of the losers because their aggressive tactics in midfield but failed inside the shooting area.

Two Errors—Two Goal.

Even exchanges were the order for a time with both goals occasionally threatened, but the sudden collapse of the Thistle happened when Wilson (Quakers), inside left, manouvered for position while in possession of the ball and succeeded in so doing with his perfect centre into goal where the defence were caught napping by Mitchell as he managed to get his right foot to the ball that registered. Again the Thistle took the attacking force to the other end. The post, then a outstretched leg, then the continual header keeping the Quaker goal intact. They continued the bombardment from every angle without gaining anything to advantage, except free-kicks and flag-kicks.

Kicked Into His Own Goal.

A break-away by the Quakers alert left wing had the Thistle defence in difficulties at this period and in their excitement one of the defence men registered for his opponents when a slippery ball glanced off his foot into the net.

Shoulder Knocked Out.

During this seige it was noticed that Ian McPhate, playing at right half, went down in a heap but continued to play without complaining. He played right up to half time with a dislocated shoulder and his value as a player was the same as only ten players for the Thistle. Scott relieved the pressure to Burgess on the left, quick as lightning he made progress along the wing with no less than three men in attendance. A tackle took place in the corner where the left winger outwitted them, lobbed the ball into goal. It landed in below the bar, Edgar making a one-handed punt for a fruitless flag-kick.

Quakers Hold Situation.

Raid after raid was made by the Quakers into the Thistle territory to meet a stubborn defence that ultimately had to concede another goal when Curtis headed into the net. Then Mitchell rapped the cross-bar with a right foot drive but his second attempt went abegging. Quakers 4, Thistle 0.

Half Time.

On resuming the Quakers forced the play to the Thistle and where Mitchell missed by inches. Desultory play followed until Lang transferred the ball to the other goal, in which Edgar carried the ball more than the legitimate distance. The free-kick close in upon the goal terminated in a mass of human frames jammed into a heap. After the ball was cleared away, Stan Maker fell in a heap and had to receive the trainer's attention.

Ten Men Against Eleven.

No matter what the "Jags" endeavored to do, everything they tried failed to bring any account to them. The second moiety was in favor of the Thistle in every department. They repeatedly went inside the goal-area to find Edgar able to handle the shots with ease. Lang rattled inside the cross-bar with an oblique shot, bounced on the ground, Burgess banging the ball against the post, then Miller testing Edgar from a short distance. One player remarking, the Thistle have everything but the JAM.

Scott Held the Key.

No player was more prominent on the field then Scott who filled the full-back position with precision. He repeatedly outwitted the attacking forwards, also half-backs, when the well-planned movements were obliterated by his stragetic tactics when hard pressed. Even Jack Wade resorted to wild punts when close upon the goal, that brought forth spectator's comment. Almost on the last kick of the game, Foster registered the fifth goal. Quakers 5, Thistle 0.

Goal scorers—J. Wade, Mitchell, Curtis and Foster. Cameron through his own goal, for Quakers.

RAIN HOLDS UP MUCH SEEDING

Many On Prairies Have Almost Abandoned Hope of Finishing Work.

GOOD FOR GROWING GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, May 23 (Canadian Press).—Farmers of Western Canada viewed with mixed feelings the recurrence of heavy rainfall over the week-end. While the moisture will prove beneficial in districts where seeding is completed it dealt a severe blow to those who have been repeatedly checked by adverse weather conditions this spring.

In many sections of Manitoba and Saskatchewan the farmers have almost abandoned all hope of getting their crops in this season. After experiencing heavy winter snowfalls, the early Spring thaws converted the fields into miniature lakes and finally when the land dried out, a record rainfall followed by snow and sleet storms halted all farm operations.

WORK STARTED AT WESTCLOX

Contractor's Men Busy Excavating For New Building.

FOR STORAGE USE.

Work on the new Westclox building on Armour Hill has been commenced by the T. A. Brown Company which has the general contract. The steel work on the building will be done by the Dominion Steel Company. A steam shovel and crew are now on the job and a large excavation bears testimony to their activities.

The new building, which will be a one storey erection, 140 feet by 80, will be used as a shipping floor, will house stores, and will be an auxiliary to the buffing and plating departments. Large quantities of stores are at present in the old Westclox building, situated at the south end of the city, and their removal to the present factory will effect considerable economy in transportation.

According to J. H. Vernor, the superintendent of the Westclox factory, the addition will not involve the engagement of any extra help.

The present plant is taxed to its full capacity to meet existing demands but it is expected that in the not very far distant future an expansion of business will render present facilities inadequate and the management have an eye on future possibilities in the erection of this building which will make possible an increase of facilities at very short notice.

ENGINES DERAILED.

Main Line Traffic at Hamilton Torn Up By Accident.

HAMILTON, Ont., May 23 (Canadian Press).—Derailed on the main line near the high level bridge, two C.P.R. locomotives tore up the roadbed for a considerable distance before finally overturning and blocking all the main line traffic. The accident occurred about 8.30 o'clock this morning, just before the engines, which were drawing a string of empty freight cars, had reached the signal tower. The crews of both engines were able to jump to safety before the engines turned on their sides.

Bad Weather Reports Affect Price Of Wheat

CHICAGO, May 23 (Canadian Press).—Unfavorable weather reports from both north and south of the Canadian boundary had an early bullish effort to-day on wheat. Advices at hand said that owing to heavy rains a halt of several days would take place before work in Manitoba would be resumed. Opening at 1-8 off to 5-8 up, wheat later showed decided gains all around. Corn, oats, and provisions were easy, corn starting at ¼ to one cent advance, but subsequently receding to below Saturday's finish.

Opening prices are: Wheat, May 144 1-8; July 140 3-8. Corn, May 89½; July 92. Oats, May unquoted; July 49 1-8.

Nickel Again Leads Trading In Toronto

TORONTO, May 23. — (Canadian Press.)— With practically all other lines, with the exception of one or two issues deserted, International Nickel established an early lead in activity on the Toronto stock exchange to-day and was never headed, at the noon adjournment having more than sixteen thousand shares traded in. Nickel gained 1 1-2 at 64 3-4, a gain of 6 1-2 points since Friday's trading. Massey Harris, next in activity, was very strong, gaining 1 1-2 at 37 7-8. The market generally struck an optimistic note and for the most part prices were stronger. Davies 'A' was up 1-8 at 42 7-8 and Hiram Walkers gained 1-4 at 54. On the weaker side, Page Hersey declined 3-4 at 73 1-2. Industrial alcohol was down 1-4 at 29 3-8, Seagrams was 3-4 lower at 27, and Noranda dropped five at 23.00.

Mine Market Active With Many Declines

TORONTO, May 23. — (Canadian Press.)— Business was brisk on the standard mining exchange to-day, and sales approached the half million mark. Prices were inclined to be lower and declines outnumbered gains, Corona gained 1-2 at 17, Duprat was down 1-4 at 11 1-2, Kirkland Hutton lost 1-4 at 21½ and Kirkland Lake gained 5 at 137. McIntyre dropped 25 to 25.00 and Macassa was one lower at 28. Potter Doal was 4 1-2 lower at 25 while Stadacona gained 1 1-2 at 17 1-2. Vipond was one lower at 705 and Amulet, on the unlisted market, dropped one at 163.

Heavy Buying Slowed By Increased Interest

NEW YORK, May 23 (Canadian Press).—Speculation for the advance gained momentum in to-day's Stock Market when heavy buying movement developed in some of the so-called "merger rails," but the rally was slowed up after midday when the call money rate was marked up from 4 to 4½ per cent. Early gains ran from one to seven points. The Pennsylvania Railroad Common moved up to 68 7-8, the highest price since 1913, in large volume. More than a score of other issues broke through to new peak prices since 1926, or longer.

IN MEMORIAM

HANSON.—In deep and everlasting remembrance of our beloved mother, Sarah Hanson, who passed away May 23rd, 1926.
A mother of God's own making,
A soul that was nobly planned,
Fashioned for loving service,
Moulded by God's own Hand
Unselfishly living for others,
Humbly learning His Way,
Guarding and understanding
As only a mother may.
Brimful of love and courage,
With never a sad complaint;
"For there are others worst off, you know,
So I'll help the sick and faint."
Never a frown nor a murmur,
Though the day be hot or cold.
But a cheery smile for the weary,
A hand for the poor and old.
No matter how rough and rocky
The path along which she trod.
Always she saw the rainbow
That shines round the Throne of God.
Always she kept a merry heart,
Always a hopeful word;
Though skies were dull and dreary
She heard the song of a bird.
Thus she looked through the sorrow
That shrouds this mortal life,
To the love and beauty of Heaven,
And the peace that follows strife.
A mother of God's own making,
She has waked to a Heavenly birth.
And one of the beautiful things she sees
Is the beauty she made on earth.
—Sadly missed by daughter and son-in-law, Lottie and Herb, and children.

In memory of our dear mother, Sarah Hanson, who passed away May 23rd, 1926.
Worthy of everlasting remembrance.
—From her daughter and son-in-law, Nellie and Lewis, Rochester, N.Y., U.S.A.

In loving memory of my dear mother, who passed away May 23rd, 1926.
When a mother breathes her last farewell
The stroke means more than tongue can tell;
The world seems quite another place
Without the smile of mother's face.
—Inserted by her loving daughter, Mrs. D. Guest.

In loving memory of a dear mother, who died May 23rd, 1926.
We do not forget her; we loved her too dearly
For her memory to fade from our lives like a dream.
Our lips need not speak, when our hearts grieve sincerely.
For grief often dwells, though it may not be seen.
—Harry.

In memory of my dear wife, who departed this life May 23rd, 1926.
Home at last, thy labor done;
Safe and blest, the victory won;
Jordan passed, from pain set free
Angels now have welcomed thee
When earth's songs have all been sung,
Labor ended, trials done,
We'll meet again: Oh, happy word,
And be "Forever with the Lord."
—Mr. A. E. Hanson.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Sarah Hanson, who entered into rest, May 23rd, 1926.
Sleep on beloved
Sleep on and take thy rest;
Lay down thy head
Upon thy Saviour's breast.
We loved thee well
But Jesus loved thee best.
—Son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. E. Hanson.

Great Britain to Sever All Relations With Russia

BRITAIN'S FINAL NOTE TO SOVIET BEING DRAFTED

Will Be Delivered in London and Moscow When Approved.

OPPOSITION ASSURED.

Labor Party Will Propose Leaving Matter To Committee.

LONDON, May 25. — (Canadian Press)—The note containing the British Government's final word to Soviet Russia was in the course of drafting by the Cabinet to-day. It will be handed to the Soviet representative at Chessam House, the former Imperial Embassy, as soon as possible after the House of Commons approves the Government's decision to sever both diplomatic and formal trade relations with Moscow.

The note, which will simultaneously be despatched to Moscow, will give the Government's full terms regarding Russian emissaries in England. It is understood they will be allowed a period of grace amounting to a week or ten days in which to pack their baggage.

Opposition to Protest.

Although it appeared obvious to-day that the Government's big majority in the House of Commons assured endorsement of its policy to sever relations with Soviet Russia, the decision will not go unchallenged by the Opposition.

The Parliamentary Labor Party to-day considered the situation regarding Russia and decided to submit a motion to the effect that no action as outlined by Premier Stanley Baldwin regarding a break with the Soviet be taken until a committee has inquired into the whole matter and reported to the House of Commons. The motion will be submitted to the House to-morrow by the Right Hon. J. R. Clynes.

Business to Continue.

Now that the situation has been brought to a head, there was speculation to-day as to how Anglo-Russian business relations would be continued. It was agreed that while business probably would be suspended temporarily, it would be resumed on the basis of the trading arrangements between the United States and Russia.

MILTON, Ont., May 25 — Robert Brush, 12-year-old son of Robert Brush, Sr., of Milton, met with a serious accident yesterday afternoon. With some companions, he was playing on the C.N.R. bridge, north of the station, when he fell off, struck the stone abutment, and rolled down the embankment into the Sixteen-Mile Creek, from which he was rescued. The boy was carried home, where it was discovered that although no bones were broken, he had sustained internal injuries.

Says Dominion Has Great Possibilities

LONDON, May 25.—Canadian Press Cable. — Canada contains greater possibilities than any other country in the world provided the right kind of immigration is regulated so as not to replace the existing workers, in the opinion of C. T. Cramp, industrial general secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, who has just returned from a tour of the Dominion.

Mr. Cramp was struck by the "revolt of Canadian organized labor against the domination of American unions," and the similar movement among professional associations. Canada's railways also came in for eulogistic reference from Mr. Cramp.

WELCOME GIVEN LABOR LEADER

Ramsay MacDonald Tendered Great Ovation on Arrival at Commons.

DEBATE CONTINUES.

LONDON, May 25—(AP)—Despite a tiring journey for a man visibly enfeebled by illness, Ramsay MacDonald, newly arrived from the United States, drove straight in a friend's automobile yesterday from Waterloo station to the House of Commons. His appearance was greeted with loud cheers by the members of his party, who had assembled at the entrance to welcome him. Several of them had met him at the station, where a great crowd of men and women with red carnations in their buttonholes, warmly cheered "good old Mac" and his daughter.

So tired did the former Labor premier look that many women supporters called out "Take care of yourself" as with a slight limp he went to the car, the police making way for him through the crowds.

In the House of Commons the debate on the trades union bill had begun when Mr. MacDonald took his customary seat on the front opposition bench. Home Secretary Joynson-Hicks, who was leading the House at the time, immediately crossed the floor and shook hands with his main political opponent. This incident evoked Conservative cheers.

Another Conservative, who happened to be addressing the House at that moment, interposed a remark to the effect that both ministerialists and the members of the opposition were pleased to see Mr. MacDonald's return and trusted that he had been restored to health. At this Mr. MacDonald bowed and smiled his acknowledgement.

Discusses Bill

To a correspondent of the Associated Press at Southampton Mr. MacDonald said on landing that one serious aspect of the trades union bill was that the bill referred to courts, not specific points that might be criminal, but general principles, asking the courts to decide whether specific acts are or are not criminal. The effect of this, he contended, has been to compel working men, especially trade unionsts, to assume that judges are partisans, and the result has been very bad indeed.

In is understood that although Mr. MacDonald has made a good recovery he will go to the country in a few days time in order to recuperate fully.

He presided at a meeting of the executive of the parliamentary labor party tonight. Mr. Baldwin's statement was discussed as well as the question of whether it would be advisable to move a vote of censure against the government. It is expected that this will be decided by a full party meeting to-morrow.

FOUND GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER

Five Are Convicted of For Killing of Motion Picture Actor.

LOS ANGELES, May 25.— (Canadian Press.)—Mrs. Sarah Kerrick and four others were found guilty of manslaughter here late yesterday for the killing of Tom Kerrick, motion picture actor, at a drinking party in Hollywood.

Those convicted besides the widow of the slain cowboy actor were Anita Davis, Iris Burns and Henry Isabell, motion picture extras, and Joe Hunt, Arizona cowboy, all of whom were members of the "moonshine" party at the Kerrick home which the police characterized as one of the wildest ever to come to their attention.

Mrs. Kerrick, whose testimony in her own defence was marked by hysterical fits of weeping and sobbing, evidenced little emotion when the verdict was announced.

The year 1926 saw the first woman aviator qualify for a license to carry passengers in Great Britain.

200 CANADIANS IN ATTENDANCE AT CONVENTION

Delegates Attend Sessions of National Foreign Traders at Detroit.

DELIVER ADDRESSES.

U. S. Losing Canada as Best Customer, Speaker Warns Delegates.

DETROIT, Mich., May 25 (Canadian Press)—More than 200 delegates from Canada arrived here today to attend the Detroit National Foreign Trade Convention which will continue for three days. The Canadian visitors sponsored a Canada session, organized as a general session for the opening of the convention today, under the joint auspices of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce and the National Foreign Trade Council of the United States.

The Canada session was addressed by Canadian business men representing all phases of Dominion foreign trade activities, and was one of the principal events of the convention.

S. B. Gundy, President of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, presided, and delivered the first address. Other speakers to whom United States foreign traders listened included Edward Beck, Montreal; Brig.-Gen. C. H. Mitchell, Toronto; George Wilson, Toronto; Travers Sweatman, K.C., Winnipeg, and Case R. Howard, New York.

Mr. Gundy, after outlining the history of the Chamber of Commerce, stated that the presence of Canadians at the session was an earnest desire of Canada to co-operate with the United States.

Canada, which was described as "the best customer" of the United States, is gradually being driven into closer relations with other countries through the imposition of prohibitive tariffs, Travers Sweatman, past president of the Winnipeg Board of Trade, told the delegates.

"The subject of tariffs is, of course, part of the internal or domestic concern of each nation, and Canada has no right to complain of the tariff raised against her by the United States, or the reverse," Mr. Sweatman declared. "But," he added, "the fact cannot be ignored that existing tariff barriers have forced Canada to look for new markets and there is always a risk that where business is forced into new channels by methods of this kind, it will not readily return."

LIMITATION ON LIQUOR SALES

Amount To Each Customer To Be Limited, Says Chairman.

QUANTITY NOT ANNOUNCED.

TORONTO, May 25 (Canadian Press)—There is to be limitation on the quantity of liquor that may be bought by an Ontario permit holder within a specified time, D. B. Hanna, chairman of the Liquor Control Board, stated to-day. "I cannot say just yet what the limit will be; it will be announced before we open the stores for the sale of liquor, but there will certainly have to be some limit," he said. Mr. Hanna was not in a position to announce the date of opening for the stores.

PASSAGE OFFERED AVIATOR AND PLANE

May Come Home On Destroyer Or Cruiser, Says Coolidge.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—By President Coolidge's direction, Captain Charles A. Lindbergh has been invited by Secretary Wilbur of the Navy to return from Europe on an American destroyer. Instructions were sent yesterday to Vice-Admiral Burrage, commander of the American Naval Forces in Europe, to provide transportation for Captain Lindbergh aboard one of the vessels of Destroyer Division 25, scheduled to leave Europe on June 15.

In referring to the invitation, President Coolidge yesterday again paid tribute to Captain Lindbergh's feat, saying that it looms even greater the more the facts are learned about it.

The Spirit of St. Louis, the flier's plane, is included in the offer of transportation, either on a destroyer or on the cruiser Memphis, which also will return on June 15. Acting Secretary Robinson stated that the aviator and his plane would be picked up at any port he designated.

The feathers used in making of boas come principally from the marabout, a stork-like bird regarded as sacred by many African tribes.

Canada's Flag Is Floated Over Canadian Legation at Washington For First Time

WASHINGTON, May 25 (Canadian Press).—Canada's flag floated over the Canadian Legation yesterday. It was the first time that it was officially displayed in Washington. Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian Minister, having used the Union Jack on previous occasions.

The permanent Legation will open on June 1. The cost of arms of the Dominion will be placed over the door at 1746 Massachusetts Avenue and temporary offices and temporary residence respectively will be moved to Canada House. A couple of days later, the King's birthday—the Red Ensign with the five-quartered shield will float over the building.

From time to time the local hotel which has housed the Canadian Minister since he came here, has displayed the Red Ensign along with other flags of other countries whose representatives lived there.

Since the establishment of the Canadian Legation here, however, there has only been one occasion which called for a display of diplomatic bunting. That was Washington's birthday, and the Canadian Government had not then decided what flag Canada would fly. A Union Jack was used for the occasion.

Later, the Hon. Ernest Lapointe made it known that Mr. Massey would fly in Washington the same flag that is flown in London, Paris and New York. That is the Red Ensign with the Union Jack in one corner and a five-quartered shield in the middle ground—a shield which bears the three golden lions of England, the royal standard of Scotland, the harp of Ireland, Fleur de Lys of France, and three maple leaves for a United Canada.

Many Expect to See New Eclipse of Sun

LONDON, May 25.—(Canadian Press). — The eclipse of the sun which will be observed by a portion of England next month is arousing such interest that railway and motor bus companies are preparing to carry thousands of excursionists to the favorite belt across England where the view will be best.

More than 100 special trains and hundreds of motor buses will carry their passengers to the biggest open-air party ever known in England. Most of the participants expect to arrive at vantage points around midnight.

ANNUAL PICNIC HELD BY CHOIR

St. Andrew's Church Choristers Guests of Leader at "Gladhalken."

ENJOYABLE OUTING.

The annual picnic of the members of St. Andrew's Church choir, held yesterday to John Crane's cottage "Gladhalken," Stoney Lake, proved to be one of the most successful events in the history of that organization.

Everything contributed to make the day a memorable one. The weather while not of the "balmy breezes" type was such that the outdoor activities of the members were not curtailed in the slightest while the spirit of goodfellowship that predominated during the day was such as would have overcome many greater obstacles to enjoyment than the minor misdemeanors of the weather yesterday.

John Crane, the inimitable host awaited the arrival of the guests at the dock and warmly welcomed them to his rural demesne.

The interval between the arrival of the picnickers and the arrival of dinner was filled in various sports in which different members indulged in according to their inclinations. Some of the more boisterous members of the party found an outlet for their animal spirits in the childish pastime of spinning a top.

The assault on the eats was carried out by such hearty goodwill that the surmise was reasonably indulged in that numerous members had lain so long in the arms of Morpheus as to encroach considerably on time that ought to have been devoted to the first performance of the gastronomic art. In justice to the offenders it must be acknowledged that on the whole they more than made up for what had been lacking at their first attempt. Indeed the eats were such that one felt sorry at the "full" feeling and wished that a further appetite could be artificially created.

Music, games, and community singing followed the lunch until the blast of the steamer's whistle announced that the hour of departure was at hand. Boarding the Empress the party set sail for South Beach and the cosy well appointed Brooks' Hotel.

The annual ball game then took place and numerous staid steady members indulged in their one and only annual period of exercise. Runs were piled up on such a scale that one enthusiastic onlooker compared them to the "stars of the heavens and sands of the sea." The batteries on the opposing teams were Carl Browne, Hugh Niven, Ford Turner and Jack Bradbury.

One of the most pleasing items in the programme of the day was the presentation by Cora Smith on behalf of the choir of an umbrella to Helen Henry as a recognition of the choir's appreciation of faithful and ungrudging service.

Dinner was served and the company again "fell to" with appetities sharpened by the sail and the pine scented atmosphere. Here again St. Andrew's Choir demonstrated that in cleaning up "eats," as well as singing they are second to none.

Carl Browne on behalf of the visitors and members extended the thanks of all present to Mr. Crane.

CANADA MUST DECIDE COURSE

Free To Continue Trade Agreement With Soviet If She Wishes.

BREAK HELPS WHEAT.

LONDON, May 25 (United Press). —The Government of Canada itself must decide whether the Dominion will continue her trading relations with the Union of Soviet Republics in view of the definite severance in the Anglo-Russian relations, the British United Press is authoratively informed.

The constitutional position is that Canada is free to do as she pleases regarding Russia. The attitude of the Union is also an important factor, in view of the fact that Canada endorsed the Anglo-Russian trade agreement, a final and complete rupture in which was announced by Premier Baldwin in the House of Commons yesterday.

It is believed that the Soviet may desire to encourage the trading mission in Canada for the purpose of encouraging Canadian Russian trade, but authorities are a little hazy at present regarding the whole situation, which is being closely investigated.

One effect, however, is certain, and that concerns the lessening of competition from Russian wheat, which will henceforth experience great difficulties in finding a market in Britain owing to the restrictions to be placed on Russians coming in to the country.

EX-ALD. JONES LEAVING CITY

Well-Known Builder and Contractor Going To Hamilton.

PROMINENT FRATERNALLY.

A prominent resident of Peterborough in the person of ex-Alderman Robert N. Jones left the city yesterday, removing to Hamilton.

Mr. Jones first entered the City Council in 1918, remaining until the end of 1922. Elected again in 1924 he held office for two years more, being defeated in January, 1923. He was a member of several committees and during his last year of office he was chairman of the Fire, Light and Water Committee.

Mr. Jones has carried on business in the city for a number of years as a building contractor. He has been prominently identified with Masons and Oddfellows' organizations in Peterborough.

RUSSIAN BREAK NOT JUSTIFIED SAYS GUARDIAN

Manchester Paper Says Soviet Did Nothing But What the British Reds May Do.

FORCED BY DIE-HARDS.

Japanese Government Regrets Steps Taken—Russia Expects More Support.

LONDON, May 25. Canadian Press. —The Manchester Guardian, while admitting that the documents seized by the police in the raid on the Soviet, suggest that the Russians have been concerned with Communist propaganda, asserts that there is nothing to prove that the Russian trade delegation has done anything which the British Communists might not legally do.

"We ought to be shown what we can gain by an open rupture with Russia" the paper declares. It suggests that an explanation of the government's policy may be that the administration has "once more surrendered to the continuing pressure of its own die-hards, or may have found it difficult to put the raid in a favorable light. The facts strongly suggest that the government has simply blundered into an action which it had no thought of taking when the raid was planned, and which Sir Austen Chamberlain, foreign minister, in his heart still disapproves."

REGRET IN TOKIO.

LONDON, May 25. — Canadian Press. — Reuter's Tokio correspondent, says it is understood the Japanese government regrets the break between Great Britain and Soviet Russia. Officials are watching developments closely but prefer not to comment, owing to the delicacy of the situation.

RUSSIANS EXPECT SYMPATHY.

MOSCOW, May 25. — Canadian Press. — The rupture of relations with Soviet Russia by Britain, is regarded here is an accomplished fact, since no doubt exists in the minds of the Soviet authorities that parliament will approve the British Cabinet's recommendations.

Officials expect the result to be the awakening of sympathy toward Russia in Western Europe and the Far East.

Pacific Cable Bill Passes Both Houses

LONDON, May 25. — Canadian Press Cable. — The House of Lords yesterday gave the third reading to the Pacific Cable bill which has now passed both houses.

The Pacific Cable bill authorizes reorganization of the Pacific Cable Board in accordance with the settlement of Canada's dispute with that body reached at the last Imperial conference. It provides for numerical revision of the board, the election of a chairman by the members instead of by the British government, and that a certain sum of money be set aside from the annual profits for the establishment of a reserve fund.

LINDBERGH IS HERO OF PARIS

Youthful Aviator Has Exciting Day at French Capital.

BANQUET AT HANGAR.

PARIS, May 25. Canadian Press.—Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, who flew from New York to Paris last week end, continued to be the hero of Paris yesterday. Everywhere he was hailed as the world's greatest aviator and as true and fine a man as ever came across the ocean.

The 25 year old pioneer of the air bore himself with becoming modesty through a day crowned with triumphs. For the first time in his life his lips touched champagne, although he did not drink, and for the first time since his arrival in Paris he was kissed by a woman.

Lindbergh's first public appearance of the day was at the American club, where he was luncheoned by four hundred of his countrymen. Then he called on the minister of marine to thank him for his congratulations.

Later he went again to the flying field of Le Bourget, where he dropped from the Saturday night skies after his immortal flight from America. At the field 40 flying officers of the French army and platoons of soldiers were drawn up to do him honor. Overhead army and civilian planes roared through every possible evolution.

Held Banquet.

In the vast hangar converted into a banquetting hall, the uniformed flyers of France drank to Captain Lindbergh as "one of us." Again they raised their glasses to "one of the greatest, finest and most heroic of Americans," a toast given by Colonel Marchetti, commanding the Thirty-fourth Regiment of Aviation.

Slightly atremble, the lanky young man took the glass handed to him, and proposed France, most heroic of nations and home of the greatest airmen." He allowed the champagne to touch his lips.

Shortly thereafter he was kissed. The lady who kissed him was Mrs. James Morrison, French wife of an American living in Paris, and she asked permission first. "May I kiss you?"

Lindbergh blushed, but did not seem averse to the proceeding. Whether he said "Yes" or "Uhuh!" could not be determined, but Mrs. Morrison reached up to his six feet and embraced him warmly.

The wives of many French aviators in the background immediately began to whisper, to say, even to call out, "We'd like to kiss him, too," but their callous husbands hustled the blushing boy outside to inspect a row of military planes drawn up for him to review.

With these experiences at an end he was driven back to Paris and his home at the embassy escorted all the way by police, and cheered all along the route by French men, women and children, who had waited long just for a passing sight of him.

OLD RIVALRY IS CONTINUED

Raybestos and Crescents Meet in East Peterborough League Game.

ON FRIDAY NIGHT.

Crescents and Raybestos open the 1927 scrap in the East Peterborough Baseball League at Exhibition Park next Friday evening, starting at six o'clock, when opening ceremonies will usher in another season. The most noticeable change in the line-ups of the two rivals, is the departure of "Casey" Masterson from the Crescents to Raybestos, and the presence of the evergreen "Bun" Frost on the firing line for the 1926 champions.

The clubs in the series are Cognawagas, Bethany, Crescents and Raybestos, all well-balanced teams. It is the best-looking loop of the last dozen years and baseball fans will witness plenty of high-class ball.

MORE DEATHS IN MONTREAL FROM TYPHOID

289 Persons Have Succumbed to the Disease Since March.

3,843 STRICKEN.

Two Dairies Placed Under Control of Provincial Health Officers.

MONTREAL, Que., May 25—Briefly outlined, the typhoid situation in Montreal yesterday is as follows:

Since the beginning of the epidemic on March 4, 289 persons have succumbed to the disease. In the same period 3,843 people, most of them children, have been stricken with the malady.

Since May 2, the date on which the municipal health authorities stopped giving out daily figures, 814 cases have been reported.

Two Dairies Closed

Two dairies ordered closed last week by the provincial authorities, are now under the control of the municipal and provincial health officers, and no milk will be allowed to be sold by these concerns before it is declared safe by the doctors.

The source of the trouble was, according to health officers, previously traced to impure milk and checked.

The recrudescence of the disease began at the end of April after the health authorities had declared that the malady had been checked and its source traced. Only a few cases daily were reported for some time, and the health authorities were satisfied that the epidemic had spent itself. Hospitals and emergency institutions which had been filled to capacity reported available beds. Inoculation clinics opened during the early stages of the outbreak were closed after immunizing approximately 100,000 persons against the disease.

Shortly afterwards, however, it was noted that the diseases had again shown its teeth. On May the second, cases reported daily to the authorities mounted but were not made public until to-day when the provincial authorities stepped in and secured the figures from the Municipal Department of Health and handed them out for publication.

In order to eliminate all known sources the Provincial Health officers ordered that two dairies be closed. The city could not agree on this matter. Saturday the former body took joint control of the plants with the city health officers. No milk will be sold from these plants before it is given a clear bill by the inspector in charge.

Hospital accommodation is good. The regular institutions are filled, but two buildings one a refuge, with 700 beds, have been turned over to the city. The other, an old hospital, closed with the building of the new Notre Dame Hospital two years ago, was re-opened last week.

JUBILEE PAPER COMES TO LIGHT

Found by Herman Hunter in Back of Picture Frame.

OF INTEREST NOW

An interesting discovery was made yesterday afternoon of a copy of The Examiner of the year 1897 dealing with the celebration of Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee. The newspaper which had been used in padding an old picture was brought to light by Herman Hunter, a school principal of Toronto, who is spending a holiday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Hunter, 548 George street. Mr. Hunter, whose interest was rendered all the more intense from the fact that the discovery was made at the present when talk of another Diamond Jubilee is in the air, says that the paper contained many articles and a poem, all of which dealt with the 60th anniversary of the accession of the good old Queen.

SAUVE POSTPONES HIS RESIGNATION

MILLBROOK'S FIELD DAY CALLED OFF

Unfavorable Weather Necessitates Calling Off of Open Air Sports.

MANY DISAPPOINTED.

Number of Visitors From Outlying Districts Attend Evening's Entertainments.

MILLBROOK, May 25 — Jupiter Pluvius threw a wrench into the works so far as Millbrook's Field Day was concerned yesterday. The heavy rains of Monday left the grounds in a very soggy condition, and when the committee inspected the exhibition grounds after yesterday's downpour they reluctantly came to the conclusion that all the events in the open would have to be called off.

The decision came as a great disappointment to the rising generation for whom an Empire Day parade had been arranged, and Norman McGill, secretary of the Field Day committee was bombarded by phone calls, mostly from children who were slow to believe the unwelcome news.

All the competitors who were to take part in the races were at hand and expressed themselves as being willing to stage a contest in spite of the unafvorable conditions, but it was explained to them that the exhibition grounds and the approaching roadway were actually under water and, under these circumstances the idea of having a race was utterly out of the question.

Set Off Fire Crackers

The school children (and some of those who had left school many years ago) amused themselves by setting off fire crackers in the streets. A waggish villager caused considerable amusement in the Queen's Hotel by throwing a cigar end at the feet of the proprietor, who started a considerable trepidation under the impression that he was in too close proximity to one of the nerve-racking contraptions beloved of the urchin.

With the return of more seasonable weather in the afternoon, a number of visitors from outlying districts appeared in the village and the committee were confident that the proceeds from the evening entertainments — a dance in the Armouries, a band concert in the Town Hall Square and a play "The Path Across the Hill" by a party from Centreville, which took the place on the programme originally intended to be filled by the Women's Institute —would defray the expenses incurred in making preparations for the day which had come to nothing, through the bad behaviour of the weather man.

Second Misfortune Befalls De Pinedo

LONDON, May 25.—(Canadian Press.)—His "Rome to Rome" flight, interrupted by another stroke of ill fortune, Commander Francesco de Pinedo was safely at or near Fayal, Azores, last night.

Details still were lacking of the mishap which brought him down near the end of his 1,600 mile jump from Trepassey, Nfld., but dispatches from Lisbon said De Pinedo had not been injured in the landing and his plane, the Santa Maria II, was being towed into port. An examination undoubtedly will be made there before a decision is reached as to continuation of the original route to Portugal and thence to Rome.

The dense fog which compelled the fliers to abandon their long hop after they has digressed considerably off their course, continued to shroud the island archipelago all of to-day and atmospheric conditions made radio communication difficult.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

(A Scientific Explanation.)

From certain scientific data
We learn the earth is made of strata.
Just dig a well for all you're worth
And you can tell the age of earth
By certain kinds of rock and fossil
And other evidence colossal.

But most of us upon this planet
Don't need to dig down through the granite
The old to scan, the picturesque.
For any man who has a desk
Already has a place plethoric
With many matters prehistoric.

Upon his desk are sheets and pages
From many eras, many ages,
This came the day that I took off
To go and play a game of golf;
And here are proof and demonstration
One year I took a month's vacation.

So if I owe a friend a letter,
Or if I seem a tardy debtor,
Be patient, friend, I love you still;
A note I'll send, I'll pay the bill.
Although each day I agitate 'em,
I simply haven't reached your stratum.

ADMITS SALE OF NEAR-BEER AS STRONG 9 PER CENT BREW

Ottawa Brewer Tells Customs Probe of Disguised Brew.

SHIPPED TO STATES.

Books Show More 2 1-2 Per Cent. Beer Sold Than Produced.

TORONTO, May 25.—The Customs Enquiry Commission has heard many instances of strong beer being sold as of 2½ per cent. strength, but on Monday afternoon it heard for the first time of an instance in which that process had been reversed.

James Naismith, managing director of the Capital Brewery of Ottawa, admitted to His Lordship that occasionally, when the brewery ran out of strong beer, he supplied 2½ per cent. beer to Desloges, and to Seguin, two of his customers in Hull, Quebec.

"I don't think you could put that over on them," Chief Justice Brown commented.

"Not on Desilloges himself," the witness rejoined blandly, "but in the place to which this was going, anything in the shape of beer went."

"And you got the price of strong beer for this?"—"Yes."

"Where was it consumed?"—"I believe it was going to the United States."

Naismith admitted that some of the strong beer smuggled to Desloges eventually found its way to one Mirsky, an Ottawa soft drink manufacturer.

"Mirsky came to us, but I refused to sell beer to him," the witness explained. "I referred him to Desloges."

"You had no dealings direct with Mirsky?"—"No."

The company exported some beer to the United States, but most of its product went to Quebec, Naismith declared.

Adelard Desloges, of Hull, told of having purchased what purported to be 9 per cent. and 10 per cent. beer from the Capital company. He did not consume any of it, however, and could not swear as to its strength. He believed it was strong beer, however.

The books of the Capital company showed more 2½ per cent. beer sold than was produced. Major Nash, auditor of the Commission, stated that officials explained this by stating that some of the 2½ per cent. beer proved to be in excess of that strength, and was accordingly diluted which increased its volume.

Major Nash also testified that officials of the company had admitted selling beer to Quebec customers, which would eventually be resold in Ontario.

The Capital company is in the unique position of having overpaid its gallonage and sales tax, Major Nash stated. This was due, he believed, to errors in computing the tax, and resulted in the company's having paid $916 more than was due.

Further evidence linking Rocco Perri, alleged "uncrowned king" of Ontario bootleggers, with the illicit liquor traffic, was given by J. R. Roberts, a member of the auditing staff, who told of having found Perri's name on the books of the Taylor and Bate brewery, St. Catharines.

Perri's name appeared in connection with an account kept in the name of one R. Sacco, and the initials R.P. also recurred elsewhere in the books.

Perri is at present a fugitive from justice, a charge of perjury hanging over his head.

The Commission was anxious for information concerning the activities of one B. Siegel of St. Thomas, who has been accused of running liquor to the United States and of bringing other commodities back to Canada.

In Siegel's stead, however, his spouse, Mrs. Fanny Siegel, appeared, to testify that her husband is ill, suffering from a nervous breakdown. Her knowledge of his activities, she assured their lordships at great length, was confined to the fact that he was in the ice and storage business. She knew nothing of his having had any dealings in liquor or in smuggled goods.

Their lordships voiced more skepticism than concern respecting Mrs. Siegel's physical condition, and ventured the suggestion that a trip to Montreal, when the commission opens there next month, might be beneficial to his health.

"It looks like a case of illness after service of a subpoena," Hon. N. W. Rowell commented. "The mounted police officer who served them last Friday reports that they both came to the door, perfectly well, and that there appeared to be a party in progress."

Mr. Rowell enquired concerning a number of substantial deposits in Mrs. Siegel's bank account. These, she insisted, consisted of money which she had saved out of her housekeeping money. In some cases she had cashed cheques for friends, and had later deposited the cheques.

The commission eventually ordered Siegel to appear in Montreal on June 1, at his own expense; with the alternative of a warrant being issued for him.

Charles Burns, manager of the Labatt brewery, never heard any discussion by Ontario brewers concerning William Egan's demands, he informed the commission.

"You had heard of Egan?"—"Yes."

"And of his demands for money?"—"Yes."

"Did he ask you for any?"—"Not me personally. I believe he asked Mr. Harry Low, and Mr. Low refused to pay."

Burns declared that he had never heard of shipments of Carling's beer being camouflaged. He had heard of shipments being switched from one destination to another.

Liquor shipments occasionally cleared from Port Stanley, Ontario, to Mexico, Charles Bartholomew, London and Port Stanley railway agent, testified. There were not many such shipments, he admitted; but some shipments consigned to the United States reached the port in midwinter, after navigation had closed.

Four British Lands Registered at Hotel

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 25. — (United Press).—Waldorf Astoria Hotel clerks yesterday asked the management to bring out the British flag. First came W. D. Ireland of Portland, Maine, and registered, shortly followed by Mrs. M. D. England and Miss Katheryne England of Logan, W. Va. This would have caused no stir had not B. S. Scotland, of Joliet, Ills., appeared a moment later.

"Well, what do you think of that?" said one clerk to another. "Let's see, now, which one is missing."

"Beg pardon," interrupted a man at the window, "but haven't you a reservation for Mr. and Mrs. John E. Wales of Norfolk, Va."

PLANNING TWO ATLANTIC HOPS

Two French Aviators Are Considering Paris-New York Flight.

USE SPECIAL PLANES.

PARIS May 25. Canadian Press.—As Captain Lindbergh has flown from New York to Paris in perfect style, there is all the more reason, it was said, in French air circles yesterday, for a Paris-New York flight by a French plane.

Two trans-Atlantic projects are now being considered. One by M. Drouhin in a Goliath plane; the other by Lt. Tarascon in a Bernard machine. Both their planes are especially built for such a flight and could be made ready in a short time. They are heavy multiple engined planes of the type which all experts, not the least of whom is Lindbergh himself, consider the best for long overseas flights, under ordinary conditions.

The government air service is being urged to give the fullest support to these plans so that the full advantage of the experience gained by Lindbergh may be taken before good weather conditions cease.

In the opinion of experts who have had an opportunity to examine the Lindbergh plane, the flight is a triumph for a medium powered machine. They describe the engine as a marvel and are particularly struck by its extreme simplicity and the fine workmanship put into it. Air and auto fans are interested in the number of miles the American flier got out of a gallon of gasoline. From more or less approximate figures they calculate about nine miles to the gallon—not so very much less than with a big automobile. This is regarded as marvellous for a 250 horsepower motor.

BAD WEATHER DELAYS FLIGHT

Soggy Field Prevents Load Test of Byrd's Plane.

MAKE IT TO-DAY.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, New York, May 25.— (Canadian Press.)— Bad weather has delayed preparations for Commander Richard E. Byrd's hop off for Paris.

A soggy field prevented a load test for the Fokker triple motored plane yesterday, but Commander Byrd said last night he would try to make the test to-day, weather permitting. He will try to lift a load of 14,500 pounds, the load it is planned to carry when the plane takes off for Paris. Fuel consumption also will be tested on the proposed flight to-day.

Trade Delegation Used as a Clearing House of Subverse Correspondence.

LONDON, May 25 (A.P.).—Premier Baldwin made in the House of Commons yesterday perhaps the gravest announcement parliament has had to listen to since the war—that the British Government had decided to sever all relations with Russia.

By a curious coincidence it was Empire Day when the whole nation celebrated its loyalty and unity. Also by the chances of travel Ramsey MacDonald, former Labor Premier, whose government it was which first recognized the Soviet government, arrived just too late to hear the Prime Minister make his momentous statement, which was listened to in a tense silence by a crowded House and a large diplomatic gathering, including the German and Japanese ambassadors.

It was a formidable indictment which the head of the government, replacing for the occasion Sir William Joynson-Hicks and Sir Austen Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary, who previously had charge of these matters, had to bring against the Soviet authorities as justification for the government's decision.

Premier Baldwin's comparatively short speech, delivered in a low and serious tone, appeared to carry full conviction, at least to the members of the Conservative party, and even to some of the Liberals, where before some doubts had been entertained on the advisability or justification of going to the length the Government had gone.

The House for the past few days had been expecting the Home Secretary to reveal the secrets of the Arcos raid. This the Premier did to some extent, but not in great detail. Apparently this has been reserved for publication later in official papers.

Outlines Proof

What he outlined, quoting from various seized documents for the purpose, was proof of subversive activities by Soviet agents, and that there was no differentiation to be made between these activities and the activities of the trade delegation. It was a deliberate and systematic abuse of the diplomatic privileges by the Soviet authorities, which, the Premier contended, justified the government in asking parliament to endorse its grave decision to sever all relations.

Describing how the missing document from the British War Office had been photographed and sent to Moscow, Mr. Baldwin told of the police invasion of a photostat office in Soviet House which answered exactly to descriptions previously given to the police and which was occupied by a senior clerk, Anton Miller, known to be connected with the activities of the secret agents. This room occupied by Miller, adjoined the private office of M. Khinchuk, head of the trade delegation. When the office was entered, Miller was found burning secret documents.

Used as Clearing House

The Premier further gave details of how men employed by the trade delegation were also secret service agents engaged in communicating information and information from the Red International and Red trade unions to Communist organizations in England and America, all of most recent date. He quoted letters and documents showing, as he said, that Arcos, Ltd., and the trade delegation had been habitually used as a clearing house for subversive correspondence, dealing with the "hands off China" movement, and the distribution of Communist propaganda in the United States.

The Prime Minister also disclosed arrangements for training Communist agitators on Arcos ships with a view to their subsequent employment on British ships. The evidence now in the hands of the British authorities, he said, proves that both military espionage and subversive activities throughout the British Empire and North and South America were directed and carried out from Soviet House, and that no effective differentiation of duty was observed as between the employees of Arcos and the trade delegation.

He quoted from seized telegrams showing that despite Moscow's disavowals, Michael Borodin was temporarily acting as the Soviet agent in China, taking orders direct from Moscow and being recommended for appointment as the regular Soviet representative at Canton.

Suspected Raid

It was not always possible to gather from Premier Baldwin's remarks whether the documents quoted were obtained in the Arcos raid or otherwise, but one telegram, dated as late as April 13, was from the Soviet Charge d'Affaires in London to the Foreign Commissariat in Moscow, expressing disbelief that the London Embassy would be raided, but advising as a precautionary measure the suspension of sending secret documents between Moscow and London.

There was no debate when the Premier had concluded his important speech, but a few question from Mr. Lloyd George, J. R. Clynes and others relating to printed information which the government promised should be given the House as soon as possible. Premier Baldwin added, however, that owing to their voluminous character these could not be ready by Thursday, when the House would debate Russian affairs.

Filed With Questions

The Prime Minister was plied with questions by Opposition members seeking further information, but he parried nearly all of them by asking that the members wait until Thursday's debate. In the parliamentary lobbies after the speech there was considerable reserve in commenting on the implications of the government's decision. The Labor members and some of the Liberals were far from convinced that the government was justified in going to the extreme length and in some quarters there was even speculation as to whether the government contemplated appealing to the country on the Russian rupture.

The Labor party has consistently denied the government any right to take such a momentous step without a mandate from the electors.

It was generally agreed in the various conversations that M. Briand's recent visit with President Doumergue to London had to deal with the change in British policy, since Sir Austen Chamberlain declared at the time of the last British protest to Moscow that a rupture of relations might endanger the peace of Europe, perhaps the world.

OLD MASTERS

I fled Him, down the nights and down the days;
I fled Him, down the arches of the years;
I fled Him, down the labyrinthine ways
Of my own mind; and in the mist of tears
I hid from Him, and under running laughter.
Up vistaed hopes I sped;
And shot, precipitated
Adown Titanic glooms of chasmed fears,
From those strong Feet that followed, followed after.
But with unhurrying chase,
An unperturbed pace,
Deliberate speed, majestic instancy,
They beat—and a Voice beat
More instant than the Feet—
"All things betray thee, who betrayest Me."

NAPANEE LODGE VISITED MADOC

Degree Conferred by Visiting Members in Splendid Style.

ADDRESSES GIVEN

MADOC, May 25.—A particularly enjoyable meeting of the I.O.O.F. was held on Wednesday evening when Argyll Lodge 212 of Napanee, under Degree Captain J. Douglas, and staff paid a fraternal visit to Madoc Lodge 179 and conferred the Degree of Friendship upon four candidates, Bros. E. T. Nayler, F. Ansell, R. M. Clark, and W. F. Baldwin. About forty of the visiting Lodge made the trip from Napanee. As is their usual custom Argyll Lodge excelled in the exemplification of this degree. The floor work was not only worthy of mention but the ritualistic work was of the highest order. It reflected great credit upon the Degree Captain, Bro. Douglas. Besides a large number of local brethren there were many visiting brethren from Tweed and surrounding Lodges. Speeches from the visiting brother were much appreciated. A hearty vote of thanks to the visitors from Argyll Lodge was tendered them by Bro. J. B. Hough, D.D.G.M. District 45, seconded by C. I. Ross, P.D.D.G.M.

At the conclusion of Lodge refreshments were served, followed by motion pictures by Mr. O'Connor of the Canadian National Railways, showing views of Alaska, a trip along the Pacific coast and the trip from Cobourg to Rochester. The latter picture was interesting to those present as Madoc District 45 have chartered one of the Ontario car-ferrys to conduct an excursion to Rochester under their auspices on June 3rd. Special rates have been secured and the trip is open to friends as well as to Lodge members.

On Saturday the dry-goods store formerly operated by the late Alex. Milne and Mrs. Milne was re-opened after its recent purchase by D. Barry. Mr. Barry, who has been travelling salesman for some years for the George E. Gillespie Company, has decided to enlist as a merchant.

KERNAHAN SAYS NO BILLS PAID

O'Keefe's Manager Counselled Other Breweries Against Payin Egan.

TELLS ABOUT SHIPMENTS.

TORONTO, May 25.—(Canadian Press).—"Mr. Griggs told me he has paid blackmail money to Mr. Egan, I told him he was crazy to do anything of the kind."

This statement was made to the Royal Customs Commission Monday by W. T. Kernahan, general manager of the O'Keefe Beverages, Limited, Toronto who occupied the witness stand for a large part of the morning. He was referring to S. A. Griggs, former president of the Walkerville Brewery. Mr. Griggs appeared before the Commission in Windsor and told of payments to Egan.

Mr. Kernahan is a former secretary of the Ontario Brewers' Association and told of the brewers' meeting where payments to Egan were discussed and where complaints were made that some of those present were not contributing enough. He thought these complaints came from General Manager Burke, of Labatts. He said the O'Keefe Company had never made any such payments.

Hon. N. W. Rowell, K.C., addressed a number of questions to Mr. Kernahan about the operations of the O'Keefe Brewery since the Customs Department refused to renew its license, on the request of the Commission, at the beginning of April.

"I am instructed that trucks have been leaving the brewery of the O'Keefe Beverages Limited, between five and seven in the morning, since April 1 last," Mr. Rowell told the witness.

Mr. Kernahan said he did not think any trucks had left before seven in the morning and none since April 15. After taking legal advice it had been decided that there was no objection to filling orders from the stock which was on hand prior to the lapse of the license.

"Were local deliveries of beer made in Toronto after April 1?" "No, sir, only 4.4."

MR. SAUVE RETIRES.

Arthur Sauve, Leader of the Conservative Opposition in the Quebec Legislature, has resigned from that position, voluntarily demoting himself because of the failure of his party to make any headway in the recent Provincial election.

There is no reason to suppose that the opposition could have made any better showing under other leadership.

The Taschereau Government is so firmly entrenched in the confidence of the people of Quebec and has achieved such a record of sane, clean and progressive administration that neither Mr. Sauve nor any other leader could have been expected to have successfully competed with it for the favour of the electorate.

The penalty for repeated defeat in the political arena is, however, the loss of the leadership, and like Mr. Meighen in the Federal field, Mr. Sauve has gracefully left the bridge.

Quebec has already had thirty years of Liberal government, and the emphatic endorsation of the Taschereau Government in its last appeal to the Province adds colour to Mr. Guthrie's intimation that the Federal Conservative party must look to the West if it hopes to make gains.

THE BRITISH FLYERS.

While the magnitude of their exploit has been overshadowed by the audacity of Lindbergh's lone-handed dash across the Atlantic, nevertheless Lieutenants Carr and Gilman, the two British army flyers who attempted a non-stop flight from England to India, made a showing that under ordinary conditions would have been considered remarkable.

They did not reach their objective, but when they were forced down in the Persian Gulf they had accomplished a non-stop flight of 3,400 miles, which would have been a world's record had it not been surpassed by Lindbergh's 3,600-mile sprint to Paris.

The attempted flight to India would have been hailed as an epic of the air had it not taken place while the world was thrilling to the story of Lindbergh's spanning of the Atlantic.

Air history is being rapidly written, so rapidly indeed that wonderful feats of aerial navigation are passing almost unnoticed, so far as the man on the street is concerned.

It takes a performance like that of "The Flying Fool" to arouse general attention so accustomed have people grown to remarkable achievements in the air.

A BELATED TRIBUTE.

It is a matter for congratulation that the generosity of the late Mrs. Charlotte Jane Nicholls has been at last publicly recognized by the erection of memorial gates at East Nicholls Park, one of the several beauty spots made possible for the use of Peterborough citizens through the benefactions of that public-spirited woman.

The city owes a great deal to Mrs. Nicholls, not only for her gifts of East Nicholls, Inverlea and Jackson Parks, but because of the assistance rendered to many local institutions, and there has been a lamentable laxity in arranging a public testimonial to indicate that the community has been and is grateful.

The memorial gates and the inscription thereon will serve to remind visitors to the Oval of the very material contribution made by Mrs. Nicholls to the enjoyment and comfort of the citizens of Peterborough.

Similar inscriptions might well be placed at other parks in the city—our people should know to whose generosity they owe three of Peterborough's finest parks—Jackson, one of the most beautiful natural parks in Ontario; Inverlea, a delightful little breathing spot by the Otonabee, and Nicholls Oval, a splendidly situated, large and excellent athletic ground and park.

JUST WAITING FOR YOU.

The fact that a summer camp has been established by a United States citizen at Pine Lake will serve to call the attention of Peterborough people to the fact that there is such a lake in this district, and that it possesses sufficient attraction to warrant a summer resort being located there.

Although Pine Lake is only 50 miles north of the city, it is doubtful if one in every hundred local people ever heard of it before.

As a matter of fact, within a couple of hours' motoring from Peterborough are a dozen beautiful lakes that have not been visited by the great mass of the city's population.

In this age of rapid transport by motor it is surprising to think that the army of automobilists Sunday after Sunday seems to prefer the beaten trail to the larger centres to exploring the scenic wonders of the little known hinterland.

It required a pioneer from another country to discover the beauties of Pine Lake, and other charming spots are just waiting to be appreciated.

The Examiner suggests to local motorists that they turn their attention to this little known northland of ours.

They will find roads that are rough, it is true, but passable, and any inconvenience suffered en route will be forgotten in the beauty of the unspoiled scenery and in the thrill of good fishing.

It is time to get acquainted with our own district.

WHEN EASY TO GET.

The surprisingly weak market which has marked the opening sale of permits to buy liquor from Government shops seems to illustrate a curious thing in human nature. It is the rather strange fact, attested to by all experience, that once a thing is made easily accessible the desire on the part of human being to get it begins to wane. If, six months or a year ago, it became known that somewhere in Ottawa one could get a card that would permit absolute evasion of the O.T.A., imagine the rush that would have followed! Now, however, when all that is necessary to purchase liquor is that one should walk across the street and pay $2 for a permit, nobody seems much interested. All the adventure, all the joy that people appear to take out of doing something exceptional, is gone. Buying liquor has been made commonplace.

This is a trait in human nature with which reformers should reckon. Listening to some orators during the course of the last Provincial election, one would imagine that the opening of Government shops would be marked by an orgy of "celebrations," by a loosing of the dykes of restraint that would flood Ontario with whiskey. But what really seems to be about to happen is that the public is going to accept the new order with apathy and dignity.

The Journal has always believed that the only real cure for intemperance was education. Teach people that there is something weak and undignified and unworthy about intemperance and, if the teaching is persistent enough, it is bound to make an impression. Tell them by legislation that they are not fit to master their appetites, that they are too weak to look after themselves, and that, therefore, they must practice sobriety in chains—and they will rebel. That was the fundamental weakness of the O.T.A.

No one need expect that this new liquor law will bring Utopia. It is not going to eradicate all bootleggers, or all smugglers, or intemperance. But it is a law which, we think, is entitled to a fair trial by all good citizens, and one that, we hope, will rid Ontario of a vast lot of evil that has prevailed and flourished during recent years.—Ottawa Journal.

AN EXAMPLE IN RESEARCH.

Britain is very much alive to the value of scientific research in industrial development. For several years a Department of Scientific and Industrial Research has been maintained by the British Government in co-operation with the industrialists of the country. The Empire Marketing Board has established a committee on research as one of its two component parts, the other phase of its work being represented by the committee on publicity.

Information as to the results achieved in the work of the Department of Scientific and Industrial Research of the British Government has now been made available by the publication of a booklet telling something of the work accomplished since the organization was set up in 1918.

Up to March 31, 1926, the British Government had contributed £570,000 to the research scheme and individual industries had put up £564,000, in addition to £265,000 subscribed by the cotton trades to a special research fund. The record of work done, as revealed by the booklet, reveals an amazing total of valuable benefit achieved and of successes that outnumber failures. Lord Balfour, who wrote the preface for the book, declares that those who take the long view in search and carry out the work with courage and enterprise and great resources are richly rewarded. "In the closer union of practical experience and scientific inquiry lie our best hopes for the material progress of mankind," he says.

Under the British research scheme, the work is chiefly carried on by associations of manufacturers in different industries. Twenty-six such associations have been formed. They include, for instance, boots and shoes, electrical, cotton, scientific instruments, and similar trades.

The British method of conducting research work offers a suggestion to Canadian manufacturers. It will be noted that the British manufacturer does not give only a moral or academic support to a work to be carried out by a Government body with Government funds. He joins hands with his competitors to do the work and puts up his own money to help back the work. Canadian industry should do the same.

No more forward step could be taken by members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, when they assemble at Calgary for their annual meeting, than to take the first steps to organize industrial research work in Canada along lines that will provide for definite financial co-operation by Canadian industry and for association of the different industries to oversee the work and give it practical application.

W. Ormsby-Gore, Parliamentary Secretary for the Colonies, recently gave an address in London on the work of the Empire Marketing Board. In discussing the research phase of its activities, he pointed out that research work was even more important than publicity. No amount of publicity would, in the long run, sell a bad article in preference to a good one, the prices being equal, or a dear article in preference to a cheaper one, the qualities being equal, and the success of Empire trade must depend ultimately on the production of the best possible goods at the best possible prices. This was the motive that underlay the board's research work. He indicated that, wherever possible, the board endeavored to make its grants conditional upon contributions being received from other private or public sources.—Financial Post.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 25. Canadian Press —In the biggest trading seen in many a day, wheat, rye, corn and oats all jumped yesterday to new high price records for the season. Rushes to buy were simultaneous with the British government announcement of a diplomatic break with Russia, but abnormal weather and crop conditions as well as scantiness of Chicago supplies both of wheat and rye, were in general accepted as the chief market influence.

Wheat closed nervous at 2 3-8c to 5 3-8c net advance; corn 2 and 21-8 to 2 3-8c up; oats ¾c off to an equal gain, and provisions varying from 20c decline to a rise of 10c.

Among the principal incentives to purchase wheat was a report from Winnipeg that with persistent rains in progress it is now too late for any further wheat seeding.

Torrential rains in the corn belt and consequent serious further delays to planting were the principal stimulus to higher prices for corn and oats. Provisions averaged lower as a result of packers' selling, but this was partly off-set by relative cheapness of lard compared with other commodities.

S. S. CONVENTION HELD IN DUMMER

Large Attendance at Annual Meeting in Ninth Line School.

WARSAW, May 25.—The Dummer Sunday School Association held its annual convention in the Ninth Line school-house, where a union Sunday School is held every Sunday. There was a large attendance of Sunday School workers and others at both sessions—more than usual in the afternoon.

Rev. Mr. Moyer conducted the opening devotional exercises. The Scripture lesson chosen was Deuteronomy, chapter vi.

Carmel S. S. was represented by five delegates, Bethel by two, Warsaw United by fifteen, Warsaw Presbyterian by three, Cottesloe by fifteen and Ninth Line by 30.

Two schools, Bethel and Carmel, are open only six months each year. Several department superintendents were not present. Mr. MacDonald thought the temperance work would do more good were it taken up by the teachers in the classes, rather than for the whole school. The people are for temperance, but they fall down in enforcing it.

Rev. I. N. Northy, before taking up the chart which let each school see what it looked like in the matter of points, said it looked well for the future of Dummer that there were so many young people present. He had not before seen so large a percentage of young people. He wanted a conference on the figures on the chart, but warned the people that a conference meant there must be people to confer—one speaker is not a conference. All the schools reported a cradle roll, and practically all the little ones in the district are on them. He would like to see more teachers' training classes. The Home Department was in but two schools. There is one large 'teen age organized class which has both boys and girls, but the boys predominate. Warsaw United Sunday School had 85 per cent.; Cottesloe, 80, and all schools looked well. A newly organized school brought the average percentage down.

Mr. Norton asked why we have all this; because, on the whole, it has been found that to have these standards meant better Sunday School work. No farmer would think of going back to the cradle or hand sowing. Our forefathers strove to attain and improved their methods. Sunday School workers are doing the same.

There are several schools with organized girls' classes, and Mr. Norton asked why there could not be found some men to follow Jesus and lead the boys. Boys are like sheep without a shepherd. Something must be done with, not for, them.

Mr. Norton pointed out that people could study the teacher-training course by themselves, write their exams and get their diplomas. In some places, he mentioned Dufferin County, those who wish the course get together for a few days and do intensive studying. He mentioned the case of one woman, over seventy years of age, who studied the course and took over sixty per cent.

He was very strong on temperance instruction and on pledge-signing. There were many reasons that helped the reverse vote and put back the hand of the clock. One that people felt secure and did not bother with the subjects. He did not advocate any particular method to have definite decision for Christ, but he did advise some method of gathering the fruit.

Five young men sang, "Somewhere the Sun is Shining."

In the evening Rev. Mr. Bennet, of Norwood, conducted the devotional exercises. The Scripture read was from Isaiah.

The report of the Nominating Committee, which was adopted, was:

President—Mr. Robert Somers.

Vice-President—Mr. E. N. MacDonald.

Secretary-Treasurer — Mr. James Hawthorne.

Supt. of Children's Work—Mrs. D. Miller.

Girls' Work—Mrs. George Taylor.

Boys' Work—Percy Moore.

Young People's Work—Mrs. Forsyth.

Adult Department—Dr. Munro.

Home Department—Mrs. Greystock.

Teacher Training—Rev. H. B. Herrington.

Missionary Work — Miss Clara Payne.

Temperance Work—Lyle McMillan.

The next meeting will be at Cottesloe.

Rev. J. P. McLennan spoke on "Home and Sunday School." He hoped none were satisfied with themselves, nor with what they have done. If so, their usefulness is at an end. He advised careful reading of Proverbs III.; there is to be found wholesome advice, how to live well and successfully. Ephesians VI. gives instructions regarding all the relations in the home. He urged the sacredness of marriage and careful choosing of the life partner. Heavenly wisdom and guidance is necessary to a happy home. He named three qualities—submission, love, obedience. Obedience becomes easy if love be present. Making homes must direct the minds of those placed in the homes. Prayer should be round and about the home. No one can know the value of early Christian training to the child or what it means to a child to remember the family altar.

Mrs. Charles Foster sang, "What are you doing for Jesus?"

Greetings were brought by Mr. Siswick and Mr. Stevens. During the offering Miss Petrie spoke on being thankful.

Mr. Norton's address was on "What Would I Do If I Were a Teacher?" as a result of what he had not done, not necessarily the things he had done. At the age of fourteen he began teaching in a Presbyterian Sunday School. Every word he said counted, but the main points were that boys and girls reach out for something, but they do not know for what. And he asked, "What has the teacher got?" A teacher should respect his office. Christ said, "Go into all the world and teach," not just preach. In the dark ages there was preaching, but no teaching. There really is no distinction between the Sunday School and the church. Both teach the things of God children and adults must know. Christ knew knowledge succeeds, but tact is necessary. A teacher must know himself, and must know the scholars individually and understand them, and must know the world in which they live and cultivate the ability to tell stories so that there will be no misconception.

Seek knowledge from the Book of Books and begin to prepare the lessons just as soon as the lists of lessons are out. A teacher should be on time, be there ahead of the earliest pupil, and sit in the middle of the class. Children have muscles for activity and none for keeping still. A teacher should seek to know the class through things they know, and direct minds to God who made them.

Teachers must co-operate with other officers and seek to bring pupils to know Jesus and walk as he walked. A teacher should pray more: "Not by might, nor by power, but by My spirit," saith the Lord.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

LET THEM BE FIREMEN

A woman can dress in six minutes faster than a man, according to a recent test. Again we point with shame to the collar button. . . . But then women's clothes these days consist more of what they do not wear than what they wear. . . The boys will have one advantage this summer, though. There's still something left for them to take off . . . Women these days spend most of their time dressing on their faces. We wonder how a woman in this rougeful day really looks. . . . A married man used to have to wait for his wife to dress when they were going out. Now it's she who does the swearing. . . Women certainly have been emancipated, as far as clothes are concerned.

ALFALFA GOOD FOR HUMAN USE.

During the past 15 years the farmers have steadily increased the acreage given over to the raising of alfalfa. They have found that cattle and horses grow better if given some alfalfa every day along with their grain and hay.

Cows used for milk producers are often fed only a small amount of grain or beet pulp, and nine-tenths of their feed is from such feeding and the milk is found to be especially rich in vitamins. Milk usually contains only a negative amount of iron but this is increased to some extent under such feeding, as alfalfa is especially rich in iron.

For years chemists have been working to prepare a food made out of alfalfa which would be suitable for human consumption. The fault lies in the fact that alfalfa in its dried state does not have a very agreeable taste, and so the foods which have been placed upon the market containing this leafy vegetable have been made with too much sugar or molasses, which is usually incompatible with the ordinary foods used at a meal.

For several years I have been advising my patients to eat alfalfa, if they could get it fresh, as it makes a very delicious salad or addition to a combination salad.

At a recent meeting of a Dental Convention, one of the doctors recommended the use of alfalfa for developing strong teeth. He said, in part:

"Alfalfa is especially rich in vitamins and iron, which are important in keeping the teeth firm and strong. The American people should eat fifteen per cent more vegetables for luncheon and dinner and more dairy products. The introduction of alfalfa as a food for humans would be a great boon. This may be developed in a very short time, and the scientist who produces food from alfalfa will do the world a vast service."

It is interesting to note that dentists are playing a large part in educating the people in dietetic science. No important convention ever takes place but what several papers are read emphasizing the value of diet in the growing of good teeth. Pyorrhea and Trench Mouth are recognized by the dentist as having their start in hyperacidity of the stomach, and, to cure this trouble, good food combinations are recommended.

The individual dentist, and also those in charge of the Dental Conventions, should be commended upon their attitude toward the food question which could be copied by physicians of other schools with rich benefits to suffering humanity.

"It was a difficult place to be in, but what was I to do? I knew I was losing out with my wife and family, and myself too, but I just couldn't think of what the future might be for Alice and the children and spend every last cent.

"So I worked, slaved, saved; but it didn't give me much pleasure nor satisfaction.

"I found that by depositing just a little more than 10% of my salary with The London Life, I actually guarantee everything for which I had been striving,—protection for my family and our home and other investments, together with provision for my own old age.

"Now we do get genuine enjoyment out of the pleasures we treat ourselves to. We have money for the present because our plans for the future are so well laid."

TROOP

"Scouting for Boys" advises us to "Keep the 'Out' in Scouting," so the Third held its last meeting outside. This is to be the rule now, and no meetings will be held indoors unless the weather is unsuitable for outdoor work.

The Troop assembled at 7.30, at "The Three Sisters." Immediately inspection was held, and several announcements made. The troop room is to be vacated by this Friday. Everything must be taken out. All tickets and money for the Hobby Show must be turned in immediately.

The troop then tried a new idea. The Hounds were given the Union Jack and were instructed to make a pole from staves and run the flag up, ready to be broken. The Hawks had the Scout Flag and were to make it fast to the top of their flag pole. Fifteen minutes were allowed for this, so fast work had to be done. While two of the Scouts tied the staves together, the rest of the patrols looked for pegs or tied ropes together. The two poles were up and firmly guyed inside the fifteen minutes and the Union Jack was broken out.

A few minutes were spent on "Poison Circle," the Hounds proving to be the victors.

Then followed a game which called for very sharp eyesight. The Hounds turned their backs for one minute while the Hawks had to find cover and hide themselves. The Hounds won one point for each Hawk discovered. Patrols took turn about at this, and each time it was made harder, by making certain points, such as rocks, trees, etc., out of bounds.

Night stalking was next in order. The Patrols took up positions on opposite sides of a steep embankment. They were blindfolded and had to creep up the slope and down the other side, without being caught by the opposing Scouts. Absolute silence of spectators had to be insisted upon during this game, as the only way a Scout could be detected was by the noise he made as he moved. That patrol won who got most Scouts across to the opposite side. The Hounds won the first game, and the Hawks the second. In the third encounter, the Hounds played cautiously and won out, earning five points in the competition.

Although it was rather late, all Scouts wanted to remain for Council Fire, so everybody scattered to find wood. What little was found in the dark was rather wet, so it was a real job to get a fire going, but Scout Cocks of the Hounds managed it with one match.

"Do a Good Turn Daily" was sung with a swing, then a few minutes were spent on playing "Jack's Alive." Another song was sung and the Scouts made ready to leave. After singing "God Save the King" the fire was put out and the place left in a tidy condition for next meeting.

The Court of Honor meeting was held on Monday evening, and a programme for next meeting drawn up.

THE HOME GARDEN

Too much emphasis cannot be laid upon the importance of good seed. With flowers particularly, one is often inclined to save the seed of some special choice specimen without realising that few flowers reproduce themselves exactly from the seed unless certain very elaborate precautions are taken. A row of several different colored sweet peas, for instance, will become hopelessly mixed in a single season. The seed from a brilliant red variety may produce nothing but indifferent weak colored flowers when saved in the ordinary way. On the farms of the large seed houses and in the professional horticulturists experimental plot each type is kept widely separated and in many cases the individual flowers are protected with netting. Otherwise bees and smaller insects will carry the pollen from one flower to another without regard for type or color. On this account alone the amateur is well advised to depend upon seed in sealed packages only from reliable merchants. There are other reasons also for advising such a course. Most flowers when they start going to seed deteriorate very rapidly and succeeding blooms are few and small. To keep a garden at its best all fading bloom should be removed before there is a trace of seed pods.

A Short Cut.

Practically every half-hardy vegetable and most of the more tender flowers can be started inside and will be ready for the table or the vase from a fortnight to a month earlier than if one waits until the season is far enough advanced to plant outside. Planting in flats or berry boxes in any southern window about this time without any special forcing is all that is necessary. If the earlier vegetables, such as spinach, lettuce, radish, beets, carrots, parsnips, and similar crops are out of the way one can plant cucumbers, melons, squash, and for very small gardens even beans and peas behind glass, and they will be ready to go out as fine healthy plants when the neighbors are only sowing the seed about the end of the month. It is particularly desirable to give the melons and cucumbers, among the edible types, and Petunias, Snapdragons, Nicotines, Asters and similar flowers which have a short season in our Ontario climate an early start in this way.

Window Boxes.

The window boxes are hanging baskets can be got ready for placing outside this week. These are very concentrated beds, producing about six times the growth for the same area as in the normal garden. Because of this concentration of growth, rich soil, frequent watering and heavy fertilizing are absolutely necessary. In Southern Ontario the boxes can be put out at once with litle fear of frost, in the central section of the Province the 24th of May is usually considered about the right time and farther North no very great risk should be taken before the 1st of June. If a light frost does threaten, covering the box with newspapers or light cotton will protect it sufficiently. Window boxes should be as long as the window sill, about eight inches wide at the top, six at the bottom and at least nine inches deep. These are inside measurements. The corners must be strongly reinforced with iron straps and the box well supported, as when full it weighs about 150 lbs. Have holes and a layer of broken crockery or cinders in the bottom to provide drainage. If well rotted manure is available, put in a layer of this next, and then fill up with fine garden soil. Select stocky plants and before putting them in the box remove all bloom and buds. To get them growing quickly, dissolve a scant handful of nitrate of soda in a fair sized watering can, and sprinkle this over the box, if the latter is around four feet long. If shorter, less fertilizer should be used. After this, saturate the soil with another can or two of water. Three or four more applications of fertilizer at ten day intervals are advised, and watering should take place every day, as the evaporation from window boxes is far above normal. Along the front of the box put in trailing nasturtiums, German Ivy, and similar trailing plants, while farther back Petunias, Geraniums, Alyasum, Lobelia, Agoratum, Begonias, Ferns and other types especially suitable should go in.

AT THE REGENT.

"PRIVATE IZZY MURPHY"

"Private Izzy Murphy," a Warner Bros. comedy in motion pictures starring George Jessel, comes to the Regent Theatre on Thursday for a run of three days. The story concerns a poor East Side boy named Izzy, who joins the army and is placed in an Irish Regiment, known as "The Fighting 69th," where he discovers that his name is a handicap to promotion. When he changes it to Izzie Murphy, some of the derision subsides, and he makes good. The story is by Charles Francis Reisner, adapted for the screen by Edward Clarke and Graham Baker. This marks Jessel's first appearance in pictures. The cast includes Patsy Ruth Miller, Vera Gordon and Nat Carr. Lloyd Bacon directed.

AT THE CAPITOL.

LON CHANEY IN "TELL IT TO THE MARINES."

"When there is trouble brewing, tell it to the Marines."—The big feature picture at the Capitol Theatre shows Lon Chaney in a different role to his usual favorite characterizations. He is a sort of secondary hero in this production, but he is the main figure at all moments, nevertheless. The young man, William Haines, who takes the part of the lover, "Skeet" Burns, comes off victorious as far as the girl, Norma Dale, (Eleanor Boardman) is concerned, but to Sergeant O'Hara, the part chosen by Lon Chaney, go the honors of the piece. There is a touch of his usual savagery in the way he plays the big, hard-bitten sergeant, but he has the self-sacrificing type of portrayal that always gets the sympathy of the fans. Everyone wishes that the ugly sergeant might win the lady of his heart, but everyone sees that it is inevitable that she shall choose the better-looking youth who rivals him in her favor.

One of the most attractive attributes of this picture is its sub-titles. They are of the snappy, clever variety that sets the audience laughing, and are tuned exactly to the moment. The story deals mainly with the adventures of a "rookie" marine, "Skeet" Burns, who falls into the tender hands of Sergeant O'Hara and his men, and puts in four years in Uncle Sam's services. The ups and downs of a Marine's life are pictured with extraordinary interest, in glimpses of a type of existence rarely seen on the silver sheet. Even the battle practice is shown and the stay of the boys on Tonda Island, where "Skeet" falls victim to the charms of a native damsel, and suffers in consequence. One of the most exciting episodes is the Chinese section of the picture, where the Marines, anchored off Shanghai, take part in a mix-up with bandits. The burly figure of the Sergeant and his splendid portrayal of his role dominates the picture.

MILTON SILLS GIVEN NEW TYPE OF ROLE IN COLORFUL PICTURE

There will be something to please every taste in "The Silent Lover," Milton Sills' new star picture for First National, which comes to the Capital tomorrow.

When Carey Wilson adapted the famous European stage play, "The Legionaire," for the screen he took full cognizance of the possibilities of the locale and the scope of his medium. So he supplied color galore.

The diplomatic assemblage, brilliant with officers' uniforms and resplendent evening gowns worn by the women; the Arabian sequences, with the native costumes in gorgeous hues; the atmosphere of the desert, the mountains of the Riff country, the ancient Arabian cities and some gay scenes of Paris—all formed wonderful picture material.

In addition there is the intense and human drama—the young and successful diplomats by his own excesses cast from the pinnacle and forced to seek forgetfulness in that strange company known as the French Foreign Legion; his loves, his redemption, his restoration to his high place and happiness—affords a great opportunity for the finished acting of the star.

Several Beauties Cast.

Beautiful in many ways—the beauty of women, of high endeavor, of sacrifice, of love and life; heightened by the atmosphere and the strength of purpose embodied in the story, "The Silent Lover" is really a romantic and exceptional picture.

Milton Sills has the role of the brilliant but rather reckless Count Tornal and gives a fine performance of a character in complete contrast to some of his other recent successes.

ROTARY FLEET LEAVES TODAY

Six Liners Taking Delegates From North American to Ostend.

THOUSANDS TO ATTEND

NEW YORK, May 25.—Six trans-Atlantic liners, loaded to the rails with Rotarians and their families from all over North America, will sail out of New York harbor today and tomorrow morning carrying delegates to the eighteenth annual convention of Rotary International, which opens at Ostend, Belgium, next Monday morning.

The business and professional men of forty countries will be represented at the gathering. Special trains are being run from all over Europe to the Belgian seaport and the Japanese delegates are coming by the first through train to run between Tokyo and Paris. Three thousand from the British Isles will attend and it is expected the total attendance will be more than eight thousand.

The Belgian Director of Public Safety has snipped away the yards of red tape which, since the war, have delayed the progress of international travelers. Passengers on the Rotary fleet will not be required to to display passports or submit to baggage examination. A Rotary button in the coat lapel and a membership identification card will be sufficient evidence of good faith to the Director of Public Safety to cause him to waive the customary rigorous inspection.

In order to accommodate the great throng, practically every hotel in Ostend has been turned over for the exclusive use of Rotarians during the convention. Americans who will make this trip will have their hotel room keys handed them before they walk up the gangplank to board their ships in New York harbor.

The convention will be bid welcome by King Albert. No hint of what the king will say to the Rotarians has been given, but as the object of the gathering is to spread international good-will and understanding, it is believed by many that he will make some important observations on these subjects.

This is the second convention of the organization held in Europe and the first to be held on the European continent and it will also be the first gathering at which Americans and Canadians have not been present in the greater number. This year it is believed those from the British Isles and Continental Europe will be in the majority. As more than a dozen languages and practically every major religion on the globe today will be represented in the gathering, the sessions will be opened by silent prayer instead of the customary invocation from the platform. The delegates, adherents to Protestantism, Catholicism, Judaism, Shintoism, Mohammedanism, Buddhism, etc., will be asked at the opening session to invoke the blessing of the deity they worship during a minute of silence, rather than be led in prayer by a representative of any particular sect.

In recent years, Rotary has gone into the four corners of the earth. There are now clubs on every continent and on most of the great islands. As Rotary has extended its influence it has embraced many whose religious faiths are not common in either Europe or the Americas, and the convention committee this year deemed it the courteous thing to recognize all beliefs by placing emphasis on none.

International President Harry H. Rogers, of San Antonio, Texas, and other officers of Rotary, believe the time is appropriate for furthering the Sixth Object of Rotary which is "The advancement of understanding, good-will, and international peace through a world fellowship of business and professional men united in the Rotary ideal of service."

In order to further this object, groups of Rotarians from other continents will visit the Rotary clubs of Europe and the British Isles in order to get acquainted with the business and professional men of the countries where Rotary is established. The European clubs are arranging special good-will and acquaintance programs for their visitors. The Paris club plans to hold a luncheon every day during one week in order that the French Rotarians may become acquainted with their fellows in other countries.

After the convention the international officers of Rotary will be entertained at Brussels at a luncheon given by King Albert and his heir-apparent. Later the international officers will be received by King George of England at Buckingham Palace.

CYCLIST KILLED ON STEEP HILL

Loses Control of Wheel On Way Down and Collides With Car.

NEAR HAMILTON.

HAMILTON, Ont., May 25.—Harry Percia, aged 16 years, was killed on the Guelph Highway yesterday afternoon, when he lost control of his bicycle and crashed into the auto of Miss Gilmer, Campbellville. Percia resided near the scene of the accident.

The fatality occurred at the junction of the Guelph Highway and the Toronto-Hamilton Highway, where there is a steep grade. The boy was descending on his bicycle as Miss Gilmer was climbing the hill. She saw the lad coming in an irregular course and as he came in the direction of her machine she swerved off to the ditch and finally left the roadway, in an attempt to avoid an accident. The boy was unable to miss the automobile, however, and struck it with such a force that he was thrown completely over the car and landed in the ditch several feet from the rear of the machine. He was unconscious when picked up and died in a very few moments.

Dr. McGregor, Waterdown, viewed the remains and announced last night that an inquest would be held.

FRACTURED SPINE RESULT OF CRASH

Toronto Cyclist Hurt When Struck By Car—Driver Out on Bail.

TORONTO, May 25—Struck by a motor car driven by Archibald Gainham, Earl street, as he was riding his bicycle west on Gloucester street, at Church Street, yesterday afternoon, Charles Skene, aged 18, of 296 Carlton Street, sustained a fractured spine. He was removed to the General Hospital. After the accident had been investigated, Gainham was taken into ccustody on a charge of criminal negligence. He was later released on bail of $2,000.

Gainham, the police say, was proceeding east along Gloucester Street when, at Church Stret, while going at a fairly good rate of speed, he swerved to avoid striking another automobile. In doing this he evidently lost control of his machine, with the result that he shot right across the road to the north side, knocking Skene from his bicycle and badly injuring him.

Four-year-old Wilbert Coomb, 267½ Queen street east, sustained a scalp wound when struck by a motor car driven by Percy Ballan, 46 Berwick Avenue. After receiving treatment at St. Michael's Hospital, the lad was able to return home. The mishap was due to the boy suddenly running out in front of a parked car in front of Ballan's auto.

Rose Richmond, aged 8, of 59 Bellevue Place, sustained head injuries and a fractured right leg when she was struck by an automobile driven by Max Silverstein, 392 Markham Street, while playing opposite her home yesterday. She was removed to the Hospital for Sick Children. The motorist was not held.

STOWAWAY SUES STEAMSHIP FIRM

Says He Was Cruelly Treated When Found On Vessel.

NEW YORK, May 25 (Canadian Press).—A story of brutality on the high seas that drove him temporarily insane and caused injuries that necessitated amputation of the fore portion of each foot was before Federal Court in Brooklyn yesterday in a $100,000 damage suit of Jonothan Gibson, 21-year-old negro stowaway of Kingston, Jamaica.

The suit is against the steamship Princess May, operated and owned by Gi Giorgio and Company, Inc., of this city. The vessel carried passengers and fruit between New York and West Indian ports and Gibson hid himself aboard the ship when it left Kingston in May, 1926.

He was discovered when the vessel was four days out and manacled to a stanchion, he testified, and due to its height he was left suspended in agony every time the vessel rolled.

Waves struck him, he said, causing his shoes to contract and his feet to swell. His condition became so bad he was placed in a cabin and confined until the vessel reached port.

Crazy with pain, he told the court, he was taken to Ellis Island where he was held in the hospital for five months. Gangrene set in and necessitated amputation of the fore portion of each foot, he said. Part of the time, he said, he was confined in the psychopathic ward.

Defence counsel said the youth's physical condition before he boarded the vessel could have caused his later sufferings.

A Long, Wicked Hill

and a Cool Motor at the Top

IT'S a fine feeling to have your car sweep swiftly and quietly up a long hill and to arrive at the top with your engine as cool as when you began the climb.

And yet there are thousands of fine cars that labor and get overheated on many an easy hill, simply because the owner used "cheap", inferior oil in a misguided attempt to economize.

CASTROL costs a little more than ordinary oil, but it gives your car perfect performance no matter how severe the heat or stress. CASTROL is the most successful enemy of friction known to motordom, possessing superlative stamina and requiring changing every 2,000 miles, not the usual 500!

There is only one "CASTROL"

Wakefield CASTROL Motor Oil is recognized as England's finest lubricant and now enjoys a world-wide reputation. Millions of users, in every quarter of the globe, have learned that there is no substitute for CASTROL; no motor oil can give such satisfaction.

This same CASTROL is now available for you in Canada. Sold by leading garages. Write for folder, "Lubrication Wisdom," to

LAKEFIELD NEWS

LAKEFIELD, May 25.—The Ladies' Guild of Knox United church, Lakefield, is to be congratulated on the success of the play, "A Southern Cinderella," put on in Memorial hall on Friday evening, May 13. The stage, artistically arranged by Mesdames W. Charlton, Sutton and Morrison, represented the living-room of a Southern mansion, the home of Madame Charteris, a wealthy old aristocrat.

Mrs. Allan Clark, who took the part of the old darkey mammy of the estate, married four times and yet ready, as she says, for her "fifth premeditated plunge in de sea ob matrimony," was a scream.

Miss Helen Burgess, the young pretty neighbor "with three strings to her bow," was vivacious and pleasing.

Mrs. Dr. Renwick, as the settlement worker, took her part with becoming dignity and good voice.

Miss Elsie Kidd, as Nurse "Katherine Hawke," had a difficult part to play, but rose strikingly to the occasion. The part of "Caroline Hawke," her sister and accomplice, was played by Mrs. Wesley, who, all will agree, looked particularly charming.

Miss Marion Payne, as "Enid," the heiress of the Charteris fortune, was winsome and unassuming as usual.

Mrs. Bailey, the inimitable, as Madame Charteris, was the last word, much of the success of the play being due to her training and performance

The acts were interspersed with music, Misses Helen Porter and Dorothy Sutton rendering much appreciated instrumental duets, while Mrs. Hull and Mr. Batten delighted the audience with two vocal numbers.

When a New York farmer killed a cow he found in her stomach nails, pieces of wire and iron washers. Several pieces of wire had penetrated the animal's heart, but had not caused suffering.

One of the most sensational cases in Ontario criminal history ended when, convicted of attempting an illegal operation on pretty young Ruth Dembner of Toronto, Dr. O. J. C. Withrow, a prominent surgeon, was sentenced to seven years in prison. The girl's youthful sweetheart, Bart. J. Brooks, was sentenced to five years, by Justice Logie. The pictures show Brooks to the LEFT and Dr. Withrow in group, to RIGHT.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By ROBERT F. FOSTER.

(Copyright, 1927, by Robert F. Foster)

BIDDING NO-TRUMPERS.

No-trumpers are hands that are too strong to pass, but have no sound major-suit bid, and are not likely to win game at a minor suit. The qualifications are:

Three suits stopped or protected.

No singletons. Not more than one two-card suit.

At least five tricks in the hand, at double valuation, for a free bid by dealer or second hand; at least seven tricks for third hand after two passes, and at least eight or nine for fourth hand after three passes.

The best suit distributions for no-trumpers are: 4 3 3 3; 4 4 3 2; 5 3 3 2.

One may occasionally bid no-trumps on a 5 4 2 2 distribution but it is dangerous unless both these suits are stopped, such as ace and small or king and queen. At contract, even more than at auction, players refrain from bidding against no-trumpers, especially when they have the lead.

Sporty no-trumpers are occasionally bid on two suits, if they are strong enough to count up to nine tricks. Here are two examples in which, if partner has an early trick, game is won:

H., x x x; C., A K Q x x x; D., A K; S., x x.

H., A K x; C., A K; D., x; S., x x.

In the second as in the first, if partner takes out with spades, deny the suit with clubs. To bid three originally on such hands is a gamble, but many players will take it. At auction bids of one are safe enough; but at contract the conservative players bid the clubs. As a rule, the best no-trumpers are hands that can support a major suit if partner bids it as a take-out. Bidding two no-trumps on 100 aces is not as important as the winning the game.

The average no-trumper at auction counts up to seven tricks at double valuation, and the minimum should be five. At contract the only safe no-trumpers are a minimum of seven. Any hand below that value is better as a defence against the opponents, unless the partner is strong enough to bid something.

The Take-outs.

Owing to the danger of incurring heavy penalties if the no-trumper is not a success, it is even more important for the partner to warn the declarer at contract than at auction. For this reason the following rules should be followed:

Never leave your partner in with a no-trump bid if you have a singleton or a missing suit. Bid any five-card suit, or the higher ranking of two four-card suits.

Never leave your partner in if you have no card higher than a queen (usually called a "bust") and any five-card suit to bid, no matter how weak it may be.

Never leave your partner in with a one no-trump bid if you have five hearts or spades; no matter what they are, or what else you have in the hand. The stronger the hand the more reason for the take-out, and if it is worth five tricks, bid game. Here are the examples:

H., x x x; C., Q J x x x; D., x x x; S., x x. Bid two clubs as a warning to drop the no-trumper.

H., K x x x x; C., x x x; D., x x; S., x x x. Bid two hearts as a warning to drop the no-trumper.

H., A K 10 x x; C., K J x x; D., x x; S., A x. Bid four hearts. With a no-trumper for the dummy, this should be a game hand. At no trumps, you might both be shy of diamonds, or of spades.

When the dealer's no-trumper is taken out by partner with a suit, if it is a minor suit it is always a warning, and the dealer should never go back to no-trumps unless able to bid game.

If it is a major suit; it is either a warning or it is safer than no-trumps; therefore the dealer should never go back to no-trumps unless able to bid game.

The bugaboo that some writers stick up just for the sake of knocking it down is that if the dealer does not know whether the major-suit take out is weak or strong, he will not know whether to go back to no-trumps or not. This shows the illogical mind. It is admitted by these writers that if they know it was a weak take out, they would leave it alone, and if they knew it was a strong take out they would equally leave it alone. As it must be one or the other why not leave it alone in either case?

There is no such thing as a defensive bid against no-trumpers. If you have the lead, a bid simply warns the no-trumper that you can defeat it, and gives the dealer the option of a shift to a safe suit bid, or a double of your bid, or to let you play it and stop you from going game. If the second hand is strong enough to hope to go game against a no-trumper, the third hand is probably weak enough to take it out and make game impossible for your opponents.

The worst bid in the game, and the greatest loser, is bidding against no-trumpers when you have the lead.

Fourth hand will sometimes be tempted to bid a suit asking for a lead. This again simply warns the no-trumper that it can not go game if that suit is led, so the no-trumper is dropped. If the partner of fourth hand is strong enough to go game in that suit, the no-trumper would probably have been set for several hundred points if left alone.

If second hand overcalls your partner's no-trumper with a suit, and is left to play it, lead the trump right up to him, beginning with the best you have, and force him to lead up to your partner in all three of the other suits, in which the no-trumper is strong.

Doubling.

The only legal use of the double, according to the laws of the game, is to increase the penalties for overbidding, but there has lately been quite a fad in the game of auction for what is called a "conventional double," that is, a declaration that does not mean what it says, and would have no meaning except with a previous understanding with the partner, or an assurance that he knew what it was intended to mean.

This conventional double is governed by these rules.

It must be a double of not more than one no-trump, or two in suit.

It never meant what it says, that you can defeat the contract.

It must be made at the first opportunity. That is, you can not bid a spade over a heart and then double two hearts conventionally. You should have doubled the hearts before bidding spades.

It must be made before the partner has bid anything. There is no use asking him to show what he has when he has already done so by bidding.

This double is practically a command to the partner to bid something, according to these rules:

If you double a no-trumper, to bid his best suit, preferably spades if he has four of them, no matter if he has better clubs or diamonds.

If you double a major suit, to bid the other major suit, or to go no-trumps if you are strong enough in the doubled suit to stop it twice.

If you double a minor suit, to bid which ever major suit you are better in, if you can not go no-trumps against the minor suit that is doubled.

If you are unfortunate enough to find that your only long suit is the one doubled, take out the double by bidding two of it and let the doubler do the best he can. Do the same if your partner's double is redoubled by the third hand.

If a no-trumper is doubled and re doubled, pass. That shows a 4 3 3 3 hand, and leaves the doubler to guess which is the four-card suit.

The cheese factories in this section are not being well supported this year and farmers predict that several will be operated at a loss as on account of the high price of butter fat a number of patrons are separating the milk and selling the cream, which at present is much more profitable than disposing of the milk through the cheese factories.

SPLENDID ADDRESS IS GIVEN INSTITUTE

Mrs. M. E. Lowe, R. N., Talks of What the Institute Is Doing.

CAVAN, May 25.—The annual public meeting of the Cavan Women's Institute was held in the Community Hall on Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. M. E. Lowe, R.N., of Toronto, was the speaker and she delighted her hearers by the splendid address which she delivered.

The meeting opened, with the president, Mrs. D. J. Hunter in the chair.

Miss Eileen Hunter sang a solo, Mrs. A. B. Kennedy, playing the accompaniment.

Mrs. Lowe, then gave the first part of her address which was on "What the Women's Institute is doing."

In commencing her address Mrs. Lowe paid tribute to the fine Community Hall, saying it was not often that she found such a hall in a small rural community. She said that almost all of her topics were on or connected with matters pertaining to health.

Health is the burning question of the day. The keen competition in all walks of life today, makes it necessary to know a great deal and to be well qualified, hence health is essential. All else is of little value compared to that. We should do everything we can, especially for the young people to gain and preserve health.

The Institute is a wonderful organization, she said; if the Institute never did anything else but hold monthly meetings it was doing a wonderful work in just bringing people together.

If people simply stay at home, especially if they are feeling a bit blue, it injures their health.

Again, the Institute helps lonely people; strangers coming into a community soon know everybody and feel at home, if they join the Institute.

The Institute Text or motto is—

"A goodly thing it is to meet
In friendship's circle bright,
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet
Or dims the radiant light.
No unkind word our lips shall pass,
No envy sour the mind;
But each shall seek the common weal,
The good of all mankind."

This is the Jubilee Year of Canada, and the Thirtieth anniversary of the Institute, so make it a good one.

Mrs. Hoodless, of Stoney Creek, started the first Institute thirty years ago. She was the first president, now there are over seven thousand Institutes in Ontario.

Children and schools are the first consideration. The Institute is first for home, second for country. Form plenty of committees, get every person working.

Have a Home and School Committee to look after the "Betterment of Child Welfare." On this committee have two ladies from each school section represented in the Institute, who will stand behind the teacher, visit the schools, see that they are properly heated, lighted and cleaned, and that special attention is paid to health precautions.

Work for consolidated schools in the community, improving schools, securing and keeping a good teacher.

She urged the Institutes to do as Mr. Putman, the superintendent desires, that is, make use of all the demonstration courses which may be had absolutely free on application. Have a roll call, and have each member read something interesting, if only a good joke, or make a one-minute speech in answer to their name.

Always get what is requested for the roll call, even if it involves work. Nothing worth while is gotten without trouble.

Be prompt in starting meetings. If we grow lax in punctuality we lose something from our characters. We have a wonderful, lovely Canada, let us work for it.

Young people of to-day are very fond of dancing, either go with them or have a chaperoning committee to attend these social gatherings of the young people.

Let the Institute aim to be a group to whom those in trouble will turn. Mrs. Lowe ended this part of her address by reminding that not money, happiness, nor pleasure is the great aim of life, but rather service, seeking to be helpful.

The Misses Helen Swain and Mildred Smith then gave a piano duet, which was followed by a piano solo by Miss Muriel Matchett.

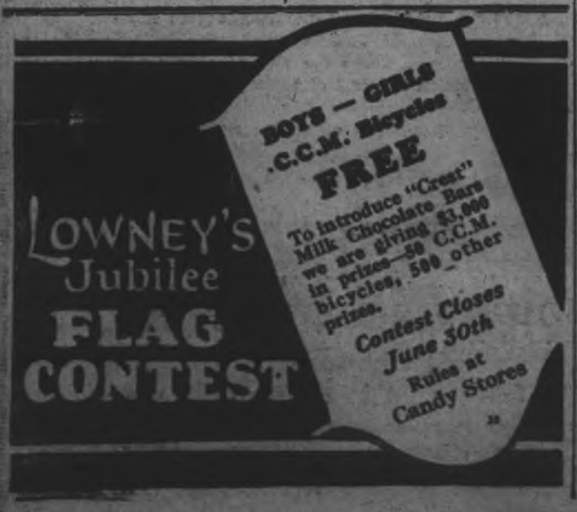
Mrs. Lowe then spoke for a few minutes on the value of self-control.

She said a famous doctor said that a good new serum was to repeat daily:

"I'm not ill today;
I'm well;
I'm happy."

We must make the best possible use of all our God-given abilities, and gain a conception of the wonderful possibilities of the human soul. The power of self-control is what makes us different from the lower animals.

Among those present were: Mrs. Totten, Mrs. C. Carr, Mrs. R. S. Staples, Mrs. Loyd Sutton, Mrs. D. J. Hunter, Mrs. J. Armstrong, Mrs. E. Syer, Miss Lily Syer, Mrs. G. Sisson, Miss Helen Swain, Miss Mildred Smith, Mrs. D. White, Miss Vera Morton, Miss Ruth Keegan, Miss Muriel Matchett, Miss E. Hunter, Mrs. A. B. Kennedy, Mrs. M. Matchett, Mrs. Morton, Mrs. Cobbly, Mrs. Howson, Mrs. J. W. Perrin, Mrs. R. Matchett, Mrs. J. Swain, Mrs. Jas. Douglas, Mrs. Wm. Tinney, Mrs. H. Tinney, Mrs. M. Sutton, Mrs. E. Hutchison, Miss E. Pritchard, Miss Irene Howson, Mrs. M. Carr, Mrs. Elliott, Mrs. White, Mrs. I. Keegan, Mrs. C. Fee, Mrs. Earchman, Mrs. R. Vance.



"APRON SOCIAL" HAPPY GATHERING

Fine Concert Given at Millbrook Presbyterian Church.

MILLBROOK, May 25.—The Sunday school auditorium of Grace Presbyterian church was the scene of a happy social gathering on Tuesday evening, an "apron social" having been arranged for the occasion.

Tiny aprons, of different colors, had been previously sent out accompanied by a verse requesting the recipient to contribute "as many cents as your waist measurement" as admission fee; anyone not receiving an apron could pay the usual fee and was made quite welcome.

The room was well filled by the opening hour, the pastor, Rev. John Riddell, taking the chair. The programme included:

Chairman's address, Rev. Mr. Riddell; selection by the Girls' Glee club; recitations by Mary Eakins; recitation by Aileen Russell; reading by Aileen Russell; reading by Miss Muriel Matchett; vocal duet by Miss Eileen and Mr. Vernon R. Hunter; dialogue by Laird and Mildred Bothwell; solo by Miss Kathleen Lancashire; ukelele solo by Master A. T. Armstrong; recitation by May Birchard; vocal solo by Miss Ruth Thorndyke; dialogue by seven boys: R. McKnight, Henry Lancashire, Foster Russell, Lawrence Ingram, R. Holman, J. Mason, and L. Bothwell.

The accompanists of the evening were: Misses Myrtle Russell, and Ella Elson.

Refreshments were served at the close, and a most enjoyable social time was spent. The proceeds were in aid of the piano fund, a new instrument having recently been purchased for the Sunday school room.

BACHELORS WIN AGAIN

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, May 25 The regular League service on Thursday evening was in charge of the citizenship convener, Lindsay Anderson, with Grenville Meiklejohn as leader. Fifty-six were in attendance with the Khaki leading by a good margin. The devotional part of the programme was as follows: Prayer, by Earl Fairman Scripture lesson, I John 3:10-18, 4:1-9, Grenville Meiklejohn and devotional talk by Rev. Mr. Daniel. An interesting reading was given by Mrs. William Forde, "How They Built the Community Hall at Prairieville—A Study in Cosmopolitan." The main attraction of the evening was an address by this county's member of the Older Boys' Parliament, Mr. Stewart Carr, of Campbellford. His talk was full of real ideals and right methods of conduct for the junior citizens. In a brief outline of the Tuxis and Trail Ranger work he showed what might be accomplished by these groups of young lads working for Christ.

During the business meeting it was decided that all the League members, if possible, should attend the Crossley-Leonard revival services at Springbrook on Monday next.

A soft ball schedule for the League will be drawn up shortly. The first game next week is between the Khaki and Blue. The Reds and Whites are joining forces as neither group has enough players.

Before the League service a very exciting soft ball game was played between the married men and single men. The Benedicts for a long time have had visions of defeating their young opponents but were again unsuccessful, the Bachelors winning by a score of 25 to 10 in six innings.

The married men were assisted by Don Watson, who caught in splendid style, and Aylmer Petherick and Earl Fairman who alternated at right field.

The teams lined up as follows:

Benedicts—Don Watson, c; Rev. Mr. Daniel, p and 2b; Thomas Fry, 1b; George Anderson, 2b and p; Lorne Barnm, 3b; Ernest Irwin, ss; Fred Barnum, lf; Lindsay Watson, cf; A. Petherick and E. Fairman, rf.

Bachelors—T. Owens, c; G. Kerr, p; H. Petherick, 1b; R. Fry, 2b; G. Meiklejohn, 3b; L. Anderson, ss; D. Kerr, lf G;. Barnum, cf; F. Fry, rf.

OBITUARY.

VELMA HAMILTON.

WARSAW, May 25—The death, after an illness of about one week, of Velma, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hamilton, was particularly sad. She was only fifteen years of age, and was preparing for the entrance examinations. The young have not often been taken in this vicinity. Those who knew her, knew she was a girl of sterling character and she will be missed greatly in her home and by her friends.

The funeral service was held in Warsaw church and conducted by Rev. H. B. Herrington, who spoke of the surety of the life of the soul, and that death is a transition to a better life. She was taken because God wanted her for other work.

The choir sang "Some Day I'll Understand." There were many beautiful flowers.

An unfortunate coincidence is that about the time Velma passed away the older of her two brothers was taken down with pneumonia also.

JOHN E. RICHARDSON.

LAKEFIELD, May 25.—The flag on the Memorial Hall at half mast marked the passing of one of the Old Guard, John E. Richardson, who was one of the best citizens Lakefield ever had. The funeral service took place at 2 o'clock on Sunday afternoon from the family residence, Prospect street, with Rev. S. A. Kemp in charge. The attendance was very large as Mr. Richardson was well known both in the village itself and throughout the entire community. The deceased was a member of the municipal council and the Reeve and Council attended in a body; he was chairman of the Property Committee, and the members of the Volunteer Fire Brigade were also present as a unit; and there were also present members of the Canadian Order of Foresters of which the deceased was one of the oldest members. There was a very large representation of citizens. Mr. Kemp took his text from St. Paul's Epistle to the Hebrews the 11th chapter and 10th verse: "For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." Mr. Kemp in a thoughtful and very earnest discourse pointed out to his hearers that life here is only a preparation for the fuller life beyond the portal called death, that our course through life leads us on, as a little stream glides through a meadow till at last it empties into the greater body of water, so our lives lead at last to the abiding city where we are safe with God.

Two appropriate hymns were sung: "Jesus, Lover of My Soul", and "Nearer My God to Thee."

The pall-bearers were: Messrs. William Adams, W. H. Casement, Charles Grylls, J. F. Lillicrap, C. S. Tanner, and Charles Thomson.

The cortege, which was an unusually long one, proceeded to the Lakefield cemetery, where interment was made in the family plot.

R. H. JACKSON.

LAKEFIELD, May 25.—The funeral took place on Thursday morning of Mr. R. H. Jackson from Comstock's Undertaking Parlors to Little Lake Cemetery, Peterboro, with Rev. W. J. Creigton, M.A., of Lakefield, in charge.

Mr. Jackson resided in Lakefield for some years and had many friends in the village who regret his passing and join in sympathy to his widow and his daughters. Mr. Jackson had a serious accident a little more than six years ago when falling on the ice he broke his hip bone and was never able to go about again except with the aid of crutches. Mr. Jackson was never entirely free from suffering during that period but he was nursed devotedly by his wife. Mr. Jackson was a member of St. John's church.

MRS. FRED. WATERS.

TRENT RIVER, May 25.—The death occurred on Saturday of Mrs. Fred. Waters after an illness of over two weeks with pneumonia. She is survived by her husband and three children—Mrs. Herbert McMullen and Messrs. Arthur and Knowlton, all of Seymour. The funeral took place on Monday afternoon from her late residence. Interment at Centre Church Cemetery.

C.G.I.T. MEETING

Interesting Program at Regular Gathering in Millbrook.

MILLBROOK, May 25.—The Wide Awakes group of Canadian Girls in Training held its weekly meeting at the church on Friday evening with about fifteen members and visitors in attendance, the Vice President, Elino Fallis, being in the chair.

After the business period had been concluded, during which the girls decided to do their share toward providing flowers for the front of the church, and to raise money to send a child to the Fresh Air Home at Port Whitby, if possible. Circulars were received from the provincial secretary, Miss Jessie McPherson, Toronto, giving particulars regarding the summer camp at White House, the date this year being from August 22 to September 1. Elinor Fallis and Alvira Davis had been elected representatives at the last meeting, but the latter having resigned, Flossie McMahon, who had the next largest number of votes, was appointed in her stead.

The Scripture lesson was on "Lessons in Truth," the incident specially studied being the lifting of the seige of Samaria, found in II Kings, chapter 7; there were a number of selected passages read by the girls having a direct bearing on the topic under consideration.

The leader's talk continued the study of "Temperance and Life" (Miss McCorkindale), the third lesson on "Barley to Beer," with the accompanying charts, being thoroughly covered.

The continued interest, and good attendance, from week to week are encouraging features of the group work. The usual social time was enjoyed at the close.

Ernest L. Burnham left for Toronto this week having a good position, with his former employer, Mr. Brass, of Peterborough, in one of the latter's stores in the west end of that city.

Rev. Canon and Mrs. Allen spent the greater part of the week in Toronto, going by motor.

Miss S. L. Muir, Principal of the local Continuation School, is spending the holiday week end at her home in Toronto.

Grain that was in before the rain is looking well. Wheat in low lying places is getting to look worse and worse. There is a good showing of most wheat, and of all kinds of hay.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

"What in the world does Churchill mean, torturing her like that?" Faith demanded of Bob Hathaway, in a furious whisper.

"You must remember, honey," he soothed her, "that Churchill has to account for Cherry's and Chris' quarrel on their wedding night, the night of the murder."

"She isn't to be spared anything, is she?" Faith's brown eyes blazed.

Cherry had kept from answering for a long minute while the lawyers wrangled over the point as to whether the question was "leading" or not. Finally Judge Grimshaw instructed her to answer.

"I got over my—infatuation for my husband on our wedding night, after we were married," Cherry answered bravely, but her voice was low and strained and her golden eyes darkened with dreadful memories.

"Now Cherry, we will leave the subject of your husband temporarily," Churchill said very gently, "and return to my previous line of questioning. Did you tell Mr. Bohn why you could not marry him?"

"I did. I told him that I was infatuated—"

"Cherry, you use this 'infatuated,' in preference to the word 'love.' Can you say why?"

"I realized after my marriage to Mr. Wiley that I had never really loved him, that my feeling for him had been infatuation. I tried a great many times to break his hold over me, but could not—until after I married him," Cherry answered with painful conscientiousness.

"Now, Cherry, after you left Mr. Bohn's offices, where were you employed?"

"By Mr. Curtis Preston, an architect," Cherry replied. "I worked for him until the middle of September."

"And why did you leave his employ at that time?" Churchill prodded.

Tears of anger and pity stung Faith's eyelids as she watched Cherry's lovely little face redden again with embarrassment.

"Because—because Mr. Preston tried to make love to me," Cherry faltered.

Reporters stared at Stephen Churchill with amazement; a faint wave of laughter swept over the audience.

"Mr. Preston was a married man, was he not?" Churchill went on, regardless of the amazement of prosecution counsel and audience.

"No, sir, Mr. Preston had recently been divorced."

"Now, Cherry, what did you know of the financial status of your former employers, Mr. Bohn and Mr. Preston?" Churchill asked significantly.

Over the district attorney's yelp of objection that the question was a leading one, Cherry was instructed to answer.

"I knew that they were both wealthy men, rich, I would call them," Cherry answered steadily.

"That," Bob whispered to Faith, "is brought out to counteract the state's evidence that Cherry was a gold-digger, was marrying merely for money."

"When did you enter the employ of Mr. Ralph Cluny, Cherry?"

Cherry did not change color at the mention of the dead man's name, nor did her voice falter. "I went to work for Mr. Cluny on Wednesday, September 15. I had met Mr. Cluny's nephew, Mr. Robert Hathaway, on Tuesday evening, September 14. He told me that he would speak to his uncle, who was in need of a secretary. The next day I went to see Mr. Cluny and got the position. I worked for him until Wednesday, September 29."

"And why did you leave his employ, Cherry?"

"I was engaged to be married to him, and he did not think it looked well for me to continue working for him," Cherry answered steadily.

"When did this engagement take place, Cherry?" Churchill asked softly.

"On Monday, September 27. He had asked me on Friday, the week before, to marry him and I had refused. Then on Monday, because I was very unhappy and—and sorry for something I had done, I was crying when Mr. Cluny came back from lunch. He had bought a solitaire ring and when he was trying to comfort me, he slipped the ring on my finger and—and I decided to do it.

"Cherry, will you tell the jury whether you were in love with Mr. Cluny when you accepted his offer of marriage?" Churchill astounded the crowded courtroom by asking.

"If she answers every question truthfully, even though the truth puts her in a bad light, she will draw the fangs out of the prosecution," Bob whispered to Faith, who was weeping silently, heart-brokenly.

"I was not in love with Mr. Cluny, but I was very fond of him," Cherry began in a low voice. "I was afraid of myself, afraid of what I would do if I did not marry him, or someone else who was kind and good."

"What were you afraid of doing, Cherry?" Churchill probed sympathetically.

"I was afraid I would marry Chris Wiley." Cherry's hands knotted in her lap as if she were again feeling that old fear which had harassed her or months.

"Now, Cherry, will you tell the court in your own words, the story of your relationship with Mr. Wiley?" Churchill took his seat, as if he had made up his mind to allow his client to tell her story undisturbed.

"I met Mr. Wiley a year ago this January, at a dance at 'Ye Olde Logge Cabin' on the Marlboro road. Mr. Wiley immediately began to pay a great deal of attention to me, coming to the house and taking me for drives in his car and to dances and the theater. One evening my father asked him if he were the same Mr. Wiley who had been mentioned in connection with the suicide of Helen Bailey, who—who had had an illegitimate baby. He admitted that he was, and my father ordered him out of the house and forbade me to see him again."

"When was this, Cherry?" Churchill interrupted.

"It was last June. Helen Bailey had committed suicide early in May, after I had begun to go with Mr. Wiley," Cherry answered conscientiously.

"And did you obey your father?" Churchill asked. "Go right on with your story."

"I—I did not obey my father," Cherry confessed, her beautiful head drooping for a shamed moment. Jim Lane's eyes were fixed on her in weary, grief-stricken reproach. "I continued to see Chris—Mr. Wiley—at intervals. In July, I think it was, he took out a marriage license in Marlboro County and tried to persuade me to elope with him. I refused, and he carried the marriage license about with him. He was always showing it to me and urging me to marry him. I was infatuated with him, but I was afraid of him, too, because sometimes he was cruel and harsh with me. I also knew that he went with other girls—"

"Did you go with other men, too?" Churchill prompted her with apparent pitilessness.

"Yes, sir, I went with Mr. William Warren and Mr. Chester Hart, and later with —with Mr. Robert Hathaway," Cherry confessed, the red of shame dyeing her white cheeks.

"Did you become engaged to any of these men, Cherry?"

"No, sir, not formally engaged," Cherry answered, her golden eyes flicking a glance toward Bob Hathaway. "What I mean is, there was nothing really definite. Mr. Hathaway had told me several times during the week of September 19 to 26 that he loved me—and he took it for granted that I would marry him."

"I see," Churchill interrupted, thoughtfully. "You heard Mr. Hathaway testify that he was engaged to you and that you broke the engagement? Were these statements true?"

"In a way," Cherry answered, her eyes dropping to her twisting hands. "I had told Mr. Hathaway that I loved him—it was during the week of September 19 to 26—but we had not discussed getting married. Then on September 26, the night after I—I was brought back from Darrow by my sister and Mr. Hathaway, he told my father that he and I were engaged. I told him then in my father's presence that I would not marry him."

"Why, Cherry?"

"Because I knew that he did not really love me, that he loved my sister, Faith," Cherry answered simply.

In the sudden absolute stillness of the courtroom, Faith broke into terrible, uncontrollable weeping.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

Thursday, May 26, 1927.

(Copyright, 1927, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Astrologers read this as an uncertain day in planetary government, but the afternoon should be fairly auspicious.

Although there is promise for those who seek any sort of employment there may be an exacting and fault-finding disposition among those who have authority.

Pride and vanity are likely to be even more prevalent than formerly and the seers warn Americans to be on their guard against unpleasant manifestation of egotism.

Occultists point out that the stars have encouraged a tendency toward selfishness since the World War, which may be dangerous in time when world consciousness is imperative.

Because prosperity inclines toward personal enjoyment and lack of interest in public matters there is peril to the nation, the seers declare.

This should be a fortunate rule for real estate buying and selling. Ownership of land will be more generally desired than ever before in the United States, it is prophesied.

Industry is well directed, while this configuration prevails, and there will be a constantly growing respect for workers with the hands in the future, it is foretold.

There is a good sign for merchants to-day and promise of activity in trade.

New York is to enjoy great increase of commerce, which will develop marvelously from the Pacific coast, also, astrologers foretell.

The Orient is to come closer to the United States, according to a cryptic prophecy, and great profits are to be reaped by Americans.

While the entrance of the Sun into Cancer next month, Saturn will be in an aspect extremely threatening to England where ancient landholders will be in danger of losing property.

An increased army is probable and many difficulties will assail Great Britain during the summer, it is foretold.

Persons whose birthday it is have the augury of new ideas and new adventures for the coming year.

Children born on this day probably will be clever in research work and original in character.

BON AMI LIMITED, MONTREAL

LINENS, ONCE STAID WHITE, SUCCUMB TO STYLE

(By Julia Blanshard.)

Linens, not to be outdone by period furniture, crystal, flat silver and other household goods, have taken unto themselves "style."

Once upon a time a table cloth was a table cloth and a towel a towel. Now there are cloths for this dinner and that, luncheon sets that "are different" and the widest variety imaginable of linens for bridge and tea.

Wedding Gifts.

The woman wishing to make a bride an acceptable linen gift must brush up on what's what. The hostess who is known for her perfect appointments will do well to survey the linen market.

There are two outstanding innovations. First, the introduction of a note of color in damask dinner sets, in sheets and in patterned tea sets. Second, the advent of the refectory strip luncheon sets in place of the center and side doilies and the colored cloth instead of the white lunch set embroidered in gay peasant design.

Colored Table Cloths.

Formal dinner cloths of fine white linen damask, exquisite Italian or rare Spanish lace are still "good" as a piece of old mahogany will always be good. But the hostess with imagination has a wide choice of table covering for such occasions now. Some of the smartest hostesses are using colored table cloths for the most formal dinners of the year

When one hears "colored cloths," one should not make the mistake of thinking of the old red cloth that topped Grandma's kitchen table. Delicate, subtle, exquisite are the pastel shades of green, blue, maize, gray—18 different delicate shades.

New towels combine color and the vogue of stripes and checks to give them dash. The finer towels, with lace inserts, almost invariably work the monogram into the lace pattern or near it. Bath towel sets come in every conceivable shade of color.

For luncheon sets a wide selection is offered the housewife, the bride or the woman who wants to make an appropriate gift. The old type of doilie set that has persisted for years is passe this season. Lunch cloths that are merely small table cloths and the refectory set of strips and end squares are much smarter.

Black Embroidery.

Some of these strip sets are extremely smart, developed in white linen embroidered in black. China in the prevailing mode of black and white looks stunning on such a background.

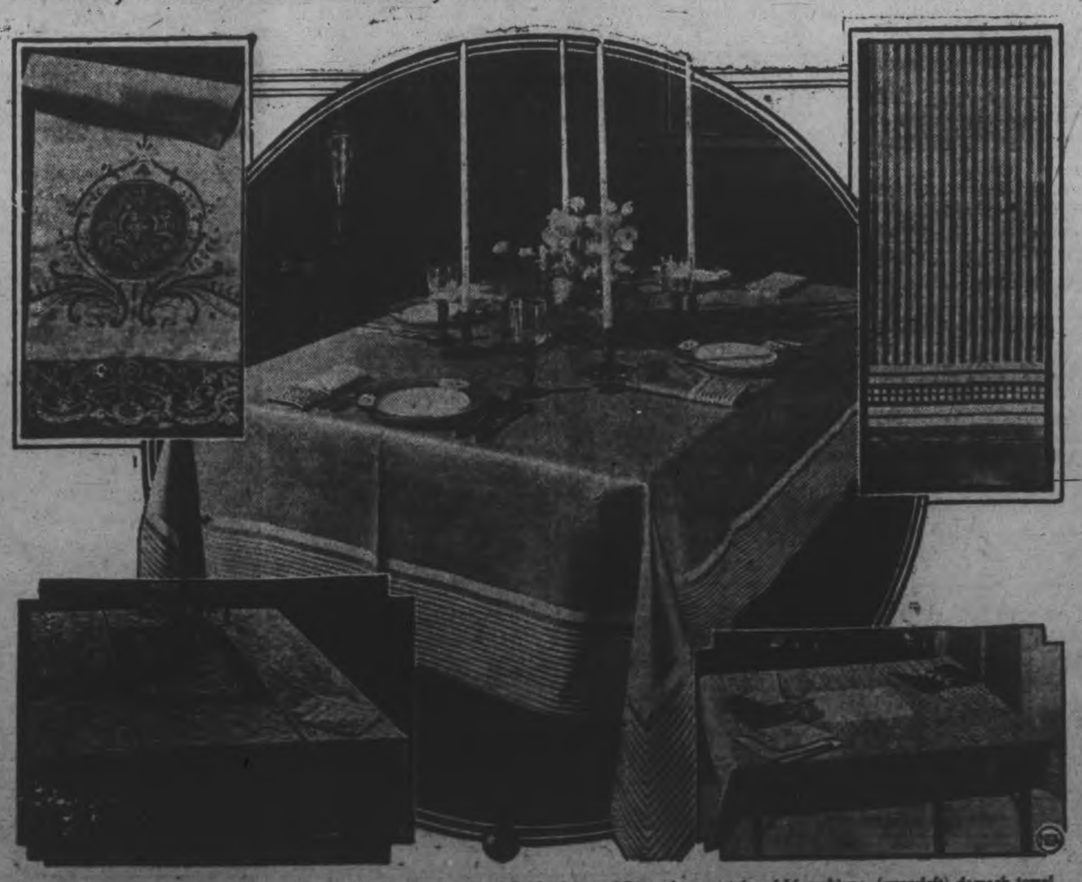
Other luncheon sets come in exquisite Italian cut-work, with needle point inserts in all-over Italian antique filet lace. Very smart are the luncheon sets, which are really the colored damask dinner cloths in miniature.

For bridge refreshments and for tea the daintiest of linens can be had. There are those of delicate handkerchief linen in white with colored flowers appliqued on until the table looks like a garden. Others are fine linens with borders in the new gingham patterns of color and design.

Old White Taste.

Odd linen table covers and tray cloths still bespeak an old taste for white. But they are etquisitely embroidered by some foreign hand or they are not really up-to-date.

Bedspreads follow the fashion and draw no color line. Stripes, checks, and white with colored dotted patterns may be had in spreads. One charming spread comes in lavender, green, blue or yellow linen and has a wide ribbon banding of deeper shade cutting a stripe down the center and across the top which covers the pillows and dispenses with shams.



Latest in linens: (center) soft, edged with Italian needlework; groundamask dinner set, a delightful background for amber crystal and blue china; (upperleft) damask towel (lower left) refectory set of Italian antique filet lace; (upper right) stripes and checks on an orange and cream towel; (lower right) orange chintz bridge refreshment set, figured in blue.

Sees No Gray!

Fear of crude dyes no longer excuses gray hair. You don't have to use them. Kolor-Bak is a clean, colorless liquid that cannot harm the hair; and it does bring back the color. Not the weird hues women used to get from old-fashioned hair-dyes, but the color your hair ought to be—the color it used to be.

Kolor-Bak acts gently; the change is gradual. That's why your closest friend can't detect it. Hair is left lustrous; only the gray is gone. Blonde, auburn, brown, black—any shade responds to this natural process. The one bottle is right for all.

Why experiment with anything, even on one lock of hair, when Kolor-Bak always gets the same perfect result—on a money-back guarantee?

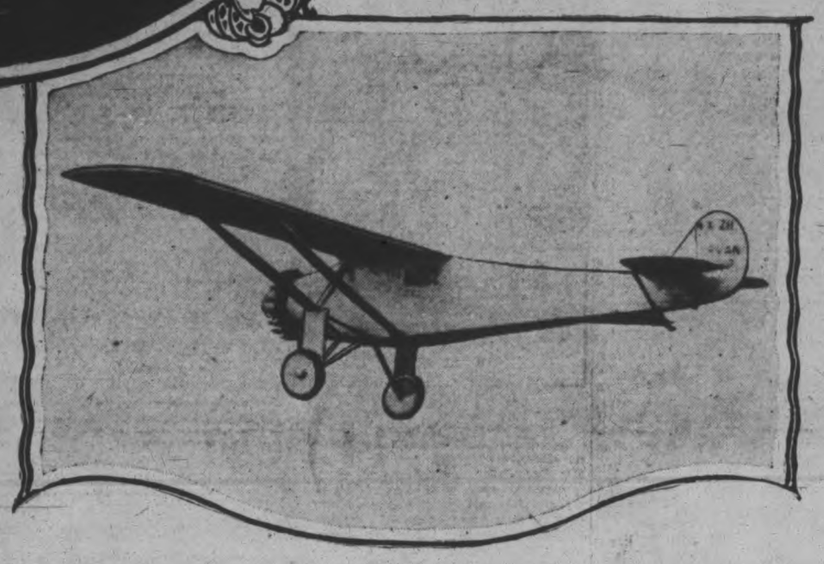
LINDY LOOKING over his nine-cylinder Wright air-cooled motor of his Ryan monoplane, just before its cruical test in the long flight. It functioned splendidly, the 25-year-old pilot says in his own story, in The Saturday Evening Post. It used about 12 gallons of gass an hour, or about one gallon every 10 miles.

THE HERO and his smile of victory the blonde lad who says he hasn't a girl

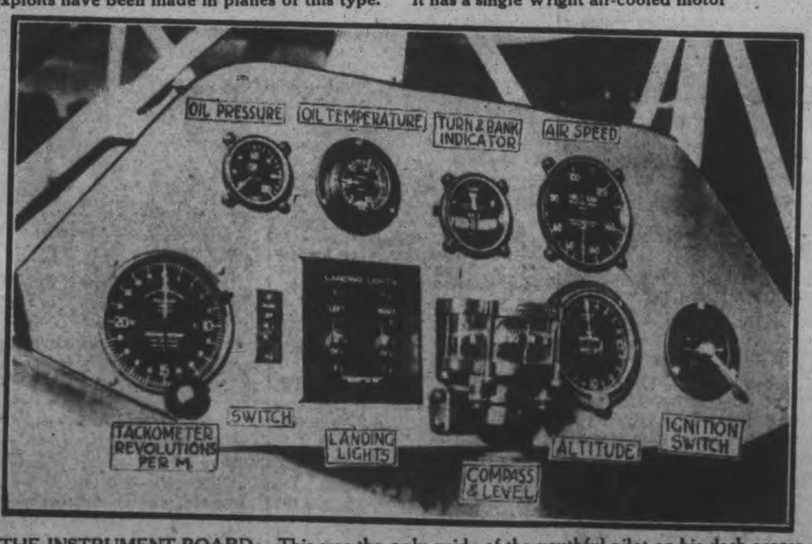
CONQUEROR AND CONQUERED: The ex-air mail pilot came out of the west, in two successive spans, from San Diego, Calif., to Gotham, via St. Louis, and before the world was quite aware of it, he had swung his plane Atlantic-ward. His rivals were left behind, but they wished him Godspeed, they, Byrd and Chamberlain



THE "SPIRIT OF ST. LOUIS" in action, snapped just as it whirled away in the gray dawn at Roosevelt Field last Friday. It is a monoplane, drawing attention to the fact that all great air exploits have been made in planes of this type. It has a single Wright air-cooled motor

HIS MOTHER PRESENTED WITH SILVER-RIBBONED FLOWER BASKET: The ribbon on this flower basket of flowers is the same color as the wing and body of what is now the most famous plane in the world, the "Spirit of St. Louis." The flowers were presented to Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, mother of "Lucky" Lindbergh, shortly after he concluded his dash

POLICE GUARD MOTHER'S HOME FROM CROWDS: The modest home of Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, at 178 Ashland avenue, Detroit, was closely guarded by police yesterday and to-day to prevent intrusion by curious crowds. The home is near the Detroit river, a small tributary of which runs behind.



THE INSTRUMENT BOARD: This was the only guide of the youthful pilot on his dash across the Atlantic. A periscope was his only means of seeing where he was going. These instruments did the rest

THINKING IF HE'D EVER COME OUT ALIVE: Lindbergh donning his flying togs on Roosevelt Field, L.I., preparatory to his early morning start last Friday on his Paris-ward dash

PLOTTING THE ROUTE with a rival pilot, Clarence Chamberlain, and comparing notes on the merits of two possible crossings, via Newfoundland or along the southern steamship lane

FLYING FIELD WHERE HE LANDED: Le Bourget Field, just outside Paris, where the "Flying Fool" landed. It was also from here that Nungesser and Coli started in the White Bird

NOT SINCE THE SIGNING OF THE ARMISTICE has New York's heart beat high as it did over the news that "Lucky" Lindbergh had landed safely at Le Bourget, France. Hats flew in the air, crowds shrieked in joy as the news was flashed from bulletins. This scene, with a storm of paper floating to the street, was typical of many on Broadway, New York city.

The Jubilee Celebration

Notes by the Secretary, F. H. Dobbin.

The Council, sitting as Committee of the Whole, listened to details of the 1st July Celebration as told by members of the organization, including Mayor Holloway (chairman), Dr. J. J. Craig, chairman of the Procession Committee, R. M. Glover, chairman of the Publicity Committee, Mrs. A. Stevenson, for the Council of Women, and being satisfied that the request from the organization for some civic backing in a financial way, decided to undertake to absorb any deficit, to a reasonable extent, should such develop from the operations. This met the request of the Executive Committee, which was present, and placed the venture on a good and hopeful financial basis.

The Council recognized that the effort being made to make for the city a more than ordinary and memorial event was worthy of support, and that in no way was the effort one for the advantage or gain for any one organization.

The action of the Council took the shape of a friendly hearing and a participation in the discussion as to the situation. For some weeks the matter of the presentation of the proposed pageant had hung fire. Just at this time every director in the Province, in the larger cities, and in fact anywhere have had services engaged to undertake presentations. So much so that prices have advanced and the demand has exceeded the supply. The endeavor has been to secure something notably good for Peterborough, on this, the first occasion when such a performance has been offered. After much correspondence and several personal visits and interviews, Mr. Mitchell, who is one of those who participates in presenting the marvellous shows before the grandstand at the Toronto Exhibition, was secured, came to this city on Saturday, looked over the ground, conferred with members of the Executive Committee and agreed to undertake the presentation. Particulars, in the shape of a programme and detail of scenes, etc., will be given to the public further on.

Mr. Mitchell was insistent that the presentation be made amidst natural surroundings, instead of in an inclosure, such as the Exhibition grounds, which admirable in many respects, failed to give the proper habitant in which to operate, especially in an evening and night performance. He had approved of placing the pageant in a woodland setting, on the bank of the Trent Canal, just south of the bridge, on the Norwood Road. Said that the place was unrivalled in its being in every way appropriate.

Members of the Council doubted the advisibility of undertaking such a venture, necessitating much electric light, and the added inconvenience of parking of countless cars along the roadways in the vicinity. While the hillside afforded a splendid grandstand from which to view the spectacle, it had its risks, especially in the case of children, who should be allowed to view the performance. Besides, there was the uncertainty of the taking of a gate, or payment, especially during the evening hours. It was pointed out, by members of the committee, that if displayed in any but a situation as noted above, there would be considerable expense incurred, possibly some hundreds of dollars in the erection of scenery, and other preparations. The matter was debated, pro and con, and finally reached a conclusion when a motion was offered that the Council would stand behind the celebration to the extent of absorbing any deficit incurred, with the understanding that the performance be put on, making use of the Exhibition Park for the purpose. With this the workers participating in the demonstration preparations, were satisfied, and individual preferences were relinquished.

Then Mr. Glover pointed out (after the Council had left the room to attend to other business), that the movement to make Dominion Day a thrilling success had reached the point at which it required the service of some experienced man to look after the main details and keep everybody up to the mark. To make decisions, based on experience and to practically suggest ways out of difficulties. He suggested that if Ald. Denne could be induced to take hold it would be a good thing, his long and successful experience as head of the Exhibition Board making his service one that would be roundly helpful. This was agreed to, and on Ald. Denne being seen, he consented. As a helpmate he was given Webber Turner, he having shared in many of the emergencies and success of the Board. This suggestion the meeting also approved. Everyone seemed pleased at the new situation, and promised warm support.

So far each committee chairman has been interested in and working for the duties as assigned to his committee, and while available, in an advisory sense, could not be expected to initiate action for others. It will be Ald. Denne's perogative and his field to pitch in and watch details, keep all up to the mark.

A further meeting of the Executive Committee will be held this (Wednesday) evening, when much preparatory detail will be attended to. Chairman of committee will be assigned appropriations of funds within which to carry on. Propositions which have been held back on account of uncertainty will now take shape. An optimistic feeling prevailed, once the matter of reserve finances was decided, as indicated, so from the many things suggested a selection can be made that will fit in and make desirable features of the day's doings.

The Engineering Club will erect an arch, in the shape of a mammoth model of the Quebec Bridge, of the C.N.R. System. This feature will span George St. from the west side, just below the Y.M.C.A. Building, across to the east side of the street. The bridge will be true to plan and appearance, with a train of engine and coaches in keeping to scale. The whole suitably decorated. The structure will be built in sections and then brought to the site and erected. Plans for two other arches are in progress. Dr. Craig reports most cheerily as to the entries for floats and representations in the procession. The Music Committee, (in the hands of Ald. Greene) has arranged for bands, four or five. Much other preparation remains to be noted further on.

Estimates of the probable attendance have been made at 17,000 persons. Not counting the children. In a short time the matter of admission fees to the grounds and grandstand will be settled. The object in view is to gain such a sum as will, it is hoped, meet the expenses of the demonstration, and a large attendance at moderate charges is wholly favored.

So soon as details are settled, and the libretto of the pageant supplied a full descriptive programme will be issued, to be distributed free or for a small expense per copy. Merchants will be asked to contribute to the income of the demonstration by inserting advertisements in the publication, and in such way contributing to the venture. The Publicity Committee will attend to all this.

Toronto Trading Brisk With Several Features

TORONTO, May 25. Canadian Press. — Hiram Walker's, International Nickel, Seagram's, and Massey-Harris common, all contributed to make the session on the Toronto stock exchange a brisk one after the holiday. Walker touched a high of 58, but later dropped back to 53, a loss of 7-8 over Monday's closing price. Nickel was weaker, declining 2 points at 63 7-8, and Seagram's and Massey Harris both lost, the former being down 1 3-8 at 25 3-8, and the latter dropping 5-8 at 37½. Prices were for the most part lower. British Columbia Fishing declined 1-8 at 16¾, Page Hersey was 1-8 higher at 73¾, and Burt common gained 1¼ at 63½. On the unlisted market Gooderham and Worts dropped one at 57½ and British American oil was down 3-8 at 26 1-8.

Mine Market Active With Prices Steady

TORONTO, May 25 (Canadian Press).—Business was brisk on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day, with prices about steady. Argonaut Consolidated was up ½ at 54½, and Atlas gained 3-4 at 6½. Area declined three points at 31, and Duprat was 2 3-4 lower at 8½. Gold Hill Mines was also weaker, losing 1¼ at 31½. Kirkland Hunton gained 3-4 at 22 3-4, and Stadacona was up two at 19, as was Tough Oakes Burn at 48.

Sharp Break At Noon In New York Exchange

NEW YORK, May 25 (Canadian Press).—Stock prices opened strong, but broke sharply when heavy selling movement swept through the market just before midday, and then made an irregular recovery when buying operations were resumed in the high-grade industrials. The re-action was accompanied by rumors of the serious illness of George P. Baker, veteran capitalist, but these were promptly denied.

General Electric responded to the increase of from $3 to $4 in the annual dividend, by touching 101, a new high record for the present issue. Baldwin was pushed up above 220 and sharp recoveries took place in United States Steel Common, General Motors, American Sugar Refining, and other industrial favorites.

American Woollen Preferred sagged to 50½, the lowest price in 25 years, and the Common was down to 17 5-8, the lowest since 1915. Real Silk Hosiery also touched a new low. The firmness of some of the silk shares was associated with rumors of a pending silk merger.

Nickel Less Active; Rumors Are Current

MONTREAL, May 25 (Special).—Nickel was less active at New York yesterday than on Monday, 39,500 shares changing hands, as compared with 180,000 the preceding day. The price opened at 65½, but eased to 63¾ at the close. Local interest in touch with New York on Nickel had their ideas as to the future of the stock considerably strengthened. There is a feeling that there are some angles to the new Frood Mine which are far from generally known. Then, again, there are reports to the effect that the stock is being brought out for one reason or another by other large corporations. One rumor names the C.P.R., another General Motors, and still another United States Steel.

Wheat Prices Advance Following Winnipeg Lead

CHICAGO, May 25 (Canadian Press)—Active general buying whirled the wheat market here upward early to-day. A wild advance of nearly 14 cents a bushel at Winnipeg was taken to indicate that the wet weather hindrance to Canadian seeding had become disastrous. Opening 5-8 cent off to half cent up, Chicago wheat later showed a jump of 3 1-4 cents in some cases. Corn and oats also developed strength, corn starting at 1-8 cents decline to 1-8 cent advance and subsequently scoring gains. Provisions were irregular.

Opening prices were: Wheat, May 1.52 3-8, July 1.44. Corn, May unquoted, July 94 1-8. Oats, May unquoted, July 50 1-8.

HOW TO REDUCE VARICOSE VEINS

Rub Gently and Upward Toward the Heart as Blood in Veins Flows That Way.

Many people have become despondent because they have been led to believe that there is no remedy that will help reduce swollen veins and bunches.

If you will get a two-ounce original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil (full strength) at any first class drug store and apply it night and morning as directed you will quickly notice an improvement which will continue until the veins and bunches are reduced to normal.

Moone's Emerald Oil is a harmless, yet most powerful germicide and two ounces last a very long time. Indeed, so powerful is Emerald Oil that old chronic cases of Piles are often entirely absorbed and anyone who is disappointed with its use can have their money refunded. DRINKING FOUNTAIN BEING PUT IN PARK

Acting on instructions from the Parks Committee of the City Council Messrs. Adamson and Dobbin are at present engaged in erecting a drinking fountain in King Edward Park near Aylmer street and in proximity to King Edward School. The fountain, which is an enamelled structure similar to that of Victoria Park, is to be equipped with an ice cooler and will be completed within a few days.

A similar fountain may be installed at the George street end of the park at a future date if the use of the park by the public and the financial conditions warrant the expenditure.

King Edward Park receives further consideration from the Parks Committee in the installing of three street lamps of the same type as those in the west of the city. Bench seats have also been provided for King Edward as well as for the other parks of the city.

The putting in of a number of flower beds in King Edward Park is another improvement which it is hoped to accomplish in coming seasons, says Alderman J. M. Greene, chairman of the Parks committee.

CANADIAN LEGION CONVENTION HERE

Stands For Loyalty To Empire and Interests of Veterans.

The annual convention of the Ontario Command of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League, which is to be held here on June 1, 2 and 3, will bring to the city between two hundred and three hundred ex-service men, headed by men of international prominence. The Canadian Legion has taken the place of the Great War Veterans' Association and has absorbed all branches of the latter organization.

The Legion is a democratic and non-sectarian organization of veterans of the Great War and it is not connected with any political party, nor has it any political ambitions or activities. It stands primarily for loyalty to the King, Canada and the Empire, for the maintenance of the foundation principles of the British Constitution, for the development of a national and united spirit, and for ordered government in Canada. While it strives for peace, goodwill, and friendship among all nations, it advocates the maintenance by Canada of adequate and efficient forces on land, sea and in the air for the defence of the Dominion and for the discharge of obligations which rest upon Canada by virtue of its partnership in the British Empire.

The Canadian Legion has been of great assistance to thousands of men whose rights were disregarded on their return from overseas, and it stands for a strong and united comradeship among all those who have served in the Empire forces, so that neither their rights, their duties, nor their interests have been forgotten. It endeavors to safeguard the welfare and the dependents of the disabled and fallen.

The delegates who will gather in Peterborough next week, have many matters of great interest to the Association to discuss, this being the first Provincial convention of the Canadian Legion. Special committees of the local branch have been busy for week preparing a programme and this is now almost completed. It is expected that there will be a memorial service at the cenotaph on Thursday evening, that a smoker will be held on the same evening at the Capitol Theatre, to which all ex-service men will be invited by courtesy of J. D. Fletcher, Manager of the Capitol.

BUS BREAKS MANY POLES

Two Passengers Hurt in an Accident on Toronto Corner.

DRIVER HELD BY POLICE.

TORONTO, May 25.—Leaping the curb at the north-east corner of Claremont and Queen Streets early this morning, a T.T.C. bus, containing a number of passengers, plunged into a Hydro pole and some T.T.C. poles, thus causing injury to two passengers. They are: Mary Shaw, 106 Huron Street, who is suffering from shock and cuts, and Charles Charlton, aged 60, of 305 Carlton, who sustained several gashes about the face, head and hands from flying glass.

The injured were removed to the Western Hospital. Gordon Osborne, Highfield Road, driver of the bus, and Emmanuel Stein, Borden Street, driver of a motor car, through whom Osborne claims the mishap was caused, after an examination at Claremont Station by Sergt. Wilson, were taken into custody on a charge of reckless driving.

Questioned by the police, Osborne stated that he was eastbound on Queen Street, en route to the city when, at Claremont Street, he saw driving ahead of him a motor car. As the car reached Claremont Street, Osborne stated, the auto made as if to turn north on Claremont Street. Seeing this Osborne slowed up. Suddenly, however, the motor car wheeled again, and continued in an easterly direction for a few yards. This time Osborne attempted to pass it. As he did so, however, the car again made as if to make the northward turn.

Osborne was caught in a trap. Whirling the steering wheel, he sought to widen the arc and get ahead of the smaller vehicle. He failed in this manoeuvre, and was forced to run across the road to the north side. The heavy vehicle of its own momentum took the curb, striking a pole as it did so. Before he could come to a stop, Osborne found the bus plunging through the line of poles. It did not come to a stop until several of the poles had snapped near the base.

The jar of the poles on the roof of the bus was terrific. The passengers inside, some of them seeking wildly the exits, were thrown about like ninepins. Windows were shattered.

Glass flew in all directions, cutting Miss Shaw and Charlton as they sought to escape.

Pedestrians on their homeward way assisted to extricate the excited passengers from the bus, and a call was sent in for the ambulance. Charlton was found lying on the floor of the bus and Miss Shaw was sitting on the sidewalk, very badly shaken. The two drivers were escorted to the police station, where they told their stories of the episode.

REPLENISHING THE SUPPLIES

Many Brook Trout Distributed in Local Streams To-day.

Through the efforts of the local Fish and Game Association, steps have been taken to replenish the supply of brook trout in this section of the Province. Twenty cans of trout have been distributed to-day in streams in the district surrounding Peterborough, and this supply of thousands of fish should materially improve the fishing in this vicinity.

RAIN AND COLD CAUSE DESPAIR

Work in Fields of West Held Up For Unprecedented Period.

MUCH LAND UNSOWN.

WINNIPEG, May 25 (Canadian Press)—Unprecedented spring rainfall and low temperatures, which have driven the usually optimistic farmer of Western Canada to the verge of despair, are the subjects of universal comment on the prairies and from several sources theories are being advanced in explanation of the abnormal wet season. Sunny skies and weather favorable for developing work in the western grain belt have been confined to less than ten days in the past six weeks, delaying operations generally and in some instances precluding the possibility of seeding thousands of acres prepared for wheat. Not in many years has the west been so thoroughly saturated by continuous precipitation.

INTO PORTO VERDE CAME VILAK

INTO Porto Verde came Vilak, a man of action.

A strange man. In his veins flowed a mixture of American and Oriental blood; on his features was the indelible stamp of his Tartar ancestry—the high cheek bones, the slanting eyes, the tawny skin. His eyes were the blue of the Anglo-Saxons and his eyebrows, in striking contrast to his black hair, were blond. A man to remember.

It was perhaps a curious fact that Elise Marberry should fall in love with him. Elise was beautiful and wealthy, Vilak unhandsome, repellent looking, more or less of an adventurer.

But they possessed one thing in common — courage. Together they dared the threats of a murderous clique and stayed on in Porto Verde when to stay was to invite death in shudderingly horrible form.

They stayed, and Vilak, matching his wits against those of the most powerful of all enemies, the enemy unseen, solved the mystery of Porto Verde.

You will meet Vilak in "Jungle Breath," the great new adventure story by Ben Lucien Burman. You will thrill at the exploits of this modern Sherlock Holmes and his romance with the beautiful Elise Marberry. If you miss this story you miss one of the big fiction treats of the year.

Reds Make First Triple Play in National League

PIRATES HOLD REDS 11 TO 1

Take Two Out of Three of the Series By Winning at Cincinnati.

MAKE TRIPLE PLAY.

NEW YORK, May 25.—(Canadian Press).—Lee Meadows of the Pirates held the Cincinnati Reds to three hits yesterday, while his comrades belted Pete Donohue and Lucas for 19 hits to make it two out of three games by winning 11 to 1 at Cincinnati yesterday. The Reds made the first triple play of the National season yesterday when Dressen took in L. Waner's liner with the bases full, forced Harris and caught Smith before he could get back to second.

The Brooklyn Robins at Philadelphia found Carlson for 14 hits and nosed through to a six to five verdict in the second game of a series, evening the count. Ehrhardt was sent to the showers in the fifth and was succeeded by Cantrell and Doak, the latter holding the Phillies to one run in the last four innings.

MONTREAL LOSE TO TOURING SOCCERITES

Scottish Team Wins Opening Game By Score of Three to Two.

MONTREAL, May 25 (Canadian Press).—Before an immense holiday crowd here yesterday the touring Scottish soccer team defeated a representative Montreal eleven by a score of three goals to two in the opening game of the Scotsmen's trans Canada tour.

A crowd estimated around 10,000, the largest that ever assembled to witness an association football game in Montreal, was one of the finest exhibitions of the code that has been seen here. That the Scots did not have everything their own way is indicated by the score, and is also further emphasized by the fact that up until four minutes from the close of the game the Montrealers were leading by one goal.

The contest opened with both sides playing carefully and the Scottish professionals giving some magnificent exhibitions of footwork. Their attacks were countered by a strong Montreal defence, and it was not until 37 minutes of the first period had gone that the breach was made when Cunningham registered the opener for the tourists. Montreal's comeback was swift, and four minutes later the locals had equalized when Baillie took a cross-field pass on the fly and sent in a grounder that Hamilton failed to grab. The half-time interval saw the game even.

On the resumption, Montreal, encouraged by the fact that they had held the Scotsmen, opened up some strong attacks and the game was held for a long time in Scottish territory The visitors' defence was stout, however, and both Scott and W. McStay were always safe. A hard and rugged game was continued, and halfway through the period the locals were rewarded when Renfrew, their centre-forward, from a scrimmage in front of the goal, put Montreal ahead by a shot that beat Hamilton.

With the score against them, the Scots opened up a robust onslaught on the Montreal defence, and time and again had the ball downfield, but Barnes and Macaulay played a rugged game. Some fine football was seen on both sides, with all the finer points of the game being exhibited by the visitors. The teams drew even four minutes from the close, when Patsy Gallagher beat Brown, and two minutes from the final whistle Cunningham clinched the game for Scotland by scoring from a penalty.

Scotland—1-2 (3 goals).
Montreal—1-1 (2 goals).

The line-up:

Scotland—Hamilton; Scott and W. McStay; Muirhead, J. McStay and Craig; Archibald, Gallagher, Munro, Cunningham and McLean.

Montreal—Brown; Barnes and Macaulay; Bardell, Millar and Sinclair; Westwater, Green, Renfrew, McKenzie and Baillie.

HOMER FOR MANUSH.

NEW YORK, May 25. — Canadian Press. — Detroit knocked Geo. Uhle out of the Cleveland box in the fourth inning of yesterday's game, and won, 6 to 3. Stoner was unusually effective until the eighth inning when a triple and a fumble gave Cleveland two. When Karr replaced Uhle in the fourth, Manush greeted him with a home run that scored two men ahead of him.

DOUBLE CENTURIES RUNG IN MATCHES

233 Runs Recorded in Hallows and Hampshire Play.

LONDON, May 25 (Canadian Press cable) — For the third and fourth time this season double centuries were rung up in county cricket matches which closed on Empire Day, the performers being Hallows of Lancashire, who, playing against Hampshire, recorded 233 runs, and Sandham of Surrey who registered only three runs less against Essex. Previous heavy scorers in this class were K. S. Duleepsinhji who reached 254 not out against Middlesex for Cambridge, and Shepherd, one of Sandham's team-mates, who scored 277 not out for Surrey against Gloucester.

Eight centuries, including the doubles by Sandham and Hallows, were rung up.

"Stuffy" McInnis, who holds the most unusual record of playing a whole season at first base in the American League and making only one error, that a disputed one, has apparently set sail after another mark that is hardly as creditable.

In the first three games of the season McInnis, newly appointed manager of the Philadelphia Nationals, has been chased to the showers twice, thereby drawing the first suspension of the year in the majors.

Tutored in the school of Connie Mack, McInnis as a player was most tractable, which makes his managerial methods all the more unexpected.

It was during the season of 1921 that McInnis, as a member of the Boston Red Sox, played in 152 games and made only one miscue. It is a record for first basemen to shoot at for some time. As a matter of fact, McInnis didn't deserve the misplay charged to him.

Playing against the Athletics, the team with which he got his start, McInnis slipped on a chance that kept him from playing a perfect game at first throughout the entire season. The error was made on a thrown ball.

With Jimmy Dykes on first, nobody out, and the score close, McInnis figured the batsman was going to bunt. He figured correctly and rushed in with the pitch to handle the bunt. The batsman missed the ball. Dykes, who had broke with the pitch and had a good lead, seemed to be a certain out at either first or second.

The moment the batsman missed the ball McInnis worked back to his base, watching carefully the movements of. Walters, catching for the Red Sox. A perfect throw to first would have gotten Dykes easily, but Walters hesitated slightly and, as he did so, McInnis slipped as he neared the bag. A trifle off his balance, McInnis was forced to stretch for the ball, which he dropped, enabling Dykes to get back safely. It was scored as an error, a tough break for McInnis. That was his only miscue of the year.

AGED GOLFER LOSES TO YOUTH

Eight Times Winner of England's Amateur Title Beaten 4-2.

AT HOYLAKE COURSE.

HOYLAKE, Eng., May 25.—(Canadian Press).—A famous chapter in the history of British championship golf closed yesterday when John Ball, aged 63, eight times winner of this country's classic amateur title, was beaten, 4 and 2, by the youthful J. R. Abercrombie, a fellow member of the Royal Liverpool Club.

Thus, like another veteran, Hilton, Monday Ball was robbed of his heart's desire of achieving one more victory before quitting championship golf for good. Oddly enough, Ball, like Hilton, needed only one more victory to complete 100 matches won in amateur championships, but he would not turn back the tide of years.

Two Americans, Frank C. Newton and Joshua Crane, also bowed to youthful opponents, leaving only Edwin H. Haley, aged 23, as trans-Atlantic challenger to the favorites, Tolley and Wethered.

The mighty Cyril Tolley yesterday defeated Lord Charles Hope, although he was out of bounds on tremendous shots at three different holes, exploring the orchards and gardens which border the Hoylake course. A half gale blew unceasingly during the day.

OMEMEE FIELD DAY POSTPONED A WEEK

Sports Will Be Held on June 3, as Result of Bad Weather.

Owing to the bad condition of the grounds caused by the wet weather, sports day at Omemee was postponed yesterday, disappointing many village inhabitants besides many country people who had counted on yesterday being a great holiday. Postponement was made till June 3rd.

SOCCER NOTES

Owing to the rain, a small number of gunners turned out for the shoot on Tuesday morning. A strong east wind and the rain kept the score down, but the shooting was good under the conditions. Charles Tanner, of Lakefield, was high gun, and won the cigar, while Sid Black won the newcomer's prize.

The club will shoot every Friday evening at 6.30 and, as the Dominion Shoot is to be held in Oshawa, June 21, 22, and 23, it is up to the trapshooters in Peterborough to get busy and put Peterborough on the map. There are a lot of good shots in the city, but most of them belong to the Box Stove League.

Below is the standing. Possible score 50:

Tanner, 40; Graham, 35; Spence, 28; Webster, 27; Edwards, 26; Symes, 26; Black, 22.

POSTPONED RACES NEXT SATURDAY

Horses From Toronto and Picton Expected To Be On Hand.

Owing to the inclement weather it was deemed necessary and advisable to postpone the holiday horse races until Saturday, May 28th, when an increased number of horses will be here and the 2:14 purse will be increased to $250.00.

A number of high-class horses from Toronto and Picton are expected to swell the already large coterie of thoroughbreds already here. Such horses as Armadale, Jack Abbe, Alfred Elk, Belle Mahone and The Limit will be right there fighting every inch of the way for the honors.

Three or four Toronto horses will compete in the 2:14 class for the increased purse of $250.00. There are also several horses expected from Picton. This will mark one of the largest gatherings of trotters and pacers gathered together in some time.

Arrangements have been made to take care of the large crowd expected and the management have made all possible plans for their pleasure and enjoyment.

TRAP SHOOTING.

A practice match will be played at the King Edward Park on Friday, May 27th, at 6 p.m., by two teams from the C.G.E. Co. Peterboro Works. This will be the first of a series of try-out games for the purpose of selecting a team to compete against C.G.E. Davenport (Toronto) for the "White Cup" on June 25th at Cobourg. The following players are requested to attend for the first try-out game:

"A" team: Griffin, goal; Foster and Millar, back; McLeod, Scott and Buchan, half backs; McPhate, Livingston, Forrest, Laidler, Darling, for wards; F. E.Wade, Burgess, McGrath, reserves.

Players will provide their own boots for this game.

PRINCE OF WALES SCHOOL.

To the number of over six hundred the pupils, parents and teachers of the Prince of Wales school district gathered in the spacious Kindergarten and auditorium of the school on Tuesday afternoon, May 23rd, to honor the Empire and Canada in songs, recitations and addresses. The virtues of the British Empire and the Dismond Jubilee of Confederation were about equally stressed in the programme.

Principal G. S. Mattice occupied the chair. The singing was conducted by Vice-Principal F. E. Kerr, assisted by Misses Smith and Richardson, while the speakers were Rev. D. Wren, of Trinity United church, and E. B. Fowler, chairman of the Board of Education.

Mr. Wren paid eloquent tribute to the power and greatness of the Empire, and the protection to her humblest subjects given by Great Britain, while Mr. Fowler extolled the greatness of Canada, its wonderful development and resources, and its opportunities for the rising generation.

A much appreciated feature of the programme was an account of the life of the author of Canada's national anthem, "The Maple Leaf," and the circumstances which led him to compose the song. This account was splendidly given by Garth Braund.

PRESENTATION MADE BY FAIR BOARD

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Morrow Receive Congratulations of Members—Presented With Handsome Tray.

The members of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition Board met on Monday evening, and adjourned in a body to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Morrow, where a presentation was made in honor of their recent marriage and in appreciation of the very generous treatment given the Board by Mr. Morrow and his father, the late R. A. Morrow, in connection with the use of the Exhibition Park.

About thirty five members of the Board were present, and both Mr. and Mrs. Morrow were much surprised when President Denne in a few words pointed out how the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition was helped and fostered by the late R. A. Morrow, who sympathized with the members in their efforts to give Peterborough a worth-while exhibition, and that this sympathy and practical assistance had been continued by Mr. Harold Morrow, and as evidence of the Board's appreciation, Mr. Denne made the presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Morrow of a handsome silver tray suitably engraved.

In Mr. Morrow's reply he stated that his father was always interested in agriculture, and was particularly interested and pleased when he saw the Exhibition going ahead; he also was interested, and while he and his father had maybe helped it was only by the co-operation of the members that the Fair was the success it now is.

Mr. Thomas McIndoo also enlarged on the development of the Fair and the very large part in its success played by Mr. Morrow and his father, and further stated that in view of this interest the Board might be expected to make still further improvements as a Fair and give the city and Central Ontario something better as each year's Fair came and went.

Mr. and Mrs. Morrow received their visitors, together with Mr. T. E Bradburn, ex-M.P.P., during the evening. Coffee and and sandwiches were served, with Mrs. Morrow at the head of the table, who graciously remarked in response to the toast to her health that she saw no reason why the Board could not make this particular meeting an annual reunion.

JUBILEE COMMITTEE MEETS TO-NIGHT

Appropriations Will Be Confirmed For Different Committees and Other Business.

A meeting of the Executive of the Jubilee Demonstration Committee will be held at the Council Chamber to-night at eight o'clock, when all the members of this committee are asked to be present in order that their applications for appropriations with which to carry on their work may be presented and approved of by the Committee.

This will be Mr. Denne's initial meeting with the Committee. It is expected that the work of completing and bringing to a head what has already been undertaken by the Chairman and Committees so that Peterborough's Diamond Jubilee demonstration will be the biggest event that has ever been attempted so far as this district is concerned.

The important Committees that have outstanding responsibilities are the Pageant Committee and the Parade Committee the latter in charge of Dr. Craig. The Parade Committee is well along with its work as well as are all the other committees.

From features already assured for the parade nothing like it has ever been attempted here.

AROUND THE CITY

Two fires, both causing much damage, occurred over the holiday.

The first was at 3.33 a.m., when the Fire Department responded to a call at the rear of 337 Reid street. Three adjoining garages were burned and three cars in these suffered much damage. One of these, owned by A. Cunningham, now lies totally burned, while two others, belonging to J. Walton and Mr. Kemp, had their tops burned before they could be removed. This fire was caused by a short circuit in the storage battery of Mr. Cunningham's car. Damage will amount to about $1,000. No insurance was carried.

The second conflagration was at 3.48 p.m., when a frame shed caught on fire at the rear of 6 and 8 Benson avenue, belonging to Mr. Bothwell, of Toronto. The shed was completely destroyed and a part of the house burned, amounting to damages of about $100.

Chief Gimblett stated this morning that in his opinion the latter fire was caused by boys smoking in the shed. He remarked that these fires were threatening for a time.

At 12.39 to-day a call was answered by the Fire Brigade to a chimney fire at The Examiner.

IN POLICE COURT.

Magistrate O. A. Langley was called upon to deal with fourteen cases in police court this morning.

Three local boys about 18 years old pleaded guilty to being intoxicated on Monaghan Road yesterday. Their 24th of May celebration ended in a big drunk and they found themselves in the police station. A doctor had to be called and the stomach pump used. It was feared that one of them would not overcome the attack of alcoholism. When they were brought to the station they were covered with mud as they had been staging a sham battle for the residents on Monaghan Road. Each was fined $10 and costs.

Two other men pleaded guilty to being intoxicated and were each fined $10 and costs.

Davis Hill, of Dummer, was committed for trial at the session of the Supreme Court in September on a charge of committing an indecent act against a girl under fourteen years.

Traffic By-laws.

J. S. Whitfield pleaded guilty to driving his car on George street at night without lights and was fined 1.00 and costs.

Roy Sedgwick pleaded guilty to the charge of failing to observe the stop sign at the corner of Hunter and Water streets and was fined $5.00.

Albert White pleaded guilty to the same charge of failing to stop before entering a through street and was fined 5.00 and costs.

N. Tobin pleaded guilty to parking his car too near the intersection of George and Charlotte streets and was fined $1.00.

Vagrancy Charge.

A young mother who has a baby a year and ten months old pleaded guilty to being a vagrant and was let go on suspended sentence in which she has to report to the Chief of Police once every two weeks. She is not living with her husband and His Worship wished to be lenient with her, as Chief Newhall said the girl never had a chance.

Another girl pleaded guilty to stealing the sum of $15 which has been restored and on promise of good conduct was let go on suspended sentence in which she has to report to the Chief of Police once a month for one year.

MEXICO EARNS POPE'S PRAISE

Deserves To Be Cited For Heroic Suffering, He Says.

DISCUSSES CHINA.

ROME, May 25. Canadian Press.—Mexico's "heroic suffering of persecution has earned the right to be cited in the order of the glory of church and civilization," said Pope Pius in a speech at the Vatican ceremony yesterday commemorating the third centennial of the foundation of the congregation for the propagation of the faith.

The agitation in China, he declared, did not come from within as the people were "good, profoundly good." In his opinion it came from a "distant land," menacing every aspect of civilization.

The Kidneys

are glands which take a very active part in the elimination of poisons from the blood. If the kidneys are working normally the blood is filtered by them in such a manner that the soluble wastes and poisons are removed and carried to the bladder from which they are eliminated at intervals. If the kidneys do not separate the wastes from the blood stream the system soon becomes saturated with toxins, and diseases like neuritis, rheumatism, uremia, dropsy, blood-poisoning, etc., may develop.

YOUR HABITS

of living have a lot to do in regulating the amount of work that the kidneys have to perform, so be careful to eat and drink in moderation, using mostly natural foods, but also see to it that normal nerve energy is reaching the kidneys.

MAKE SURE

that there is no mechanical or structural interference with the nerves leading to the kidneys. Improper nerve force means lack of normal function. This means poisons retained in the system. By a careful examination of the spine your Chiropractor can tell if there is pressure upon the nerves supplying the kidneys. If pressure exists he can release it by spinal adjustments. When this is done the kidney tissues will become strong and capable of functioning properly to free the system of poisons.

Canada to Terminate Soviet Trade Agreement

CANADA'S STAND WITH BRITAIN IN BREAKING TRADE AGREEMENT PLEASES BRITISH GOVERNMENT

Strengthens Hand of Cabinet—Labor Demands Enquiry.

OWN ACTION RECALLED.

Canada's Loyalty Won't Be Forgotten, Says Evening News.

LONDON, May 26 (United Press).—Canada's decision to break with Soviet Russia, which was exclusively announced here by the British United Press in the morning papers, has been responsible for much pleasure in Government circles, according to information reaching your correspondent, although official confirmation of this severeance of the Canadian-Russian trade agreement has not yet been received in London.

The news strengthens the hand of Premier Baldwin and correspondingly weakens those opposed to him.

Perhaps the only person disappointed apart from the Labor and Liberal opposition is Lord Beaverbrook, whose papers have all along been vigorously opposing any steps which would injure Anglo-Russian trade.

MacDonald's Action Cited

Labor is demanding an inquiry into the whole Arcos affair, but the Government is in a strong position owing to its argument that if Ramsay MacDonald had justification for sending his severe note to the Union of Soviet Republics when he was Prime Minister and Foreign Secretary on the unassailable evidence which was then his, the present administration has every reason for a complete break, particularly in view of the new apparent fact that Mr. MacDonald's note of warning had no effect in curbing Red activities.

Mr. MacDonald's action has always been embarrassing to Labor because it has been so easy to use it as a buffer to Labor's present protests at the Government's drastic action in raiding Soviet House.

It is known that Moscow, up till the last minute, hoped that Canada would not follow the Mother Country's lead, so that a means of continued contact with Great Britain would be available via Ottawa and because the Soviet was desirous of retaining the special privileges enjoyed in Canada.

Praise for Canada

While it is expected that British trade with Russia will experience a slump at the outset it is thought that later on little difference will be felt so far as past figures are concerned.

Naturally, however, the rupture in diplomatic and commercial relations

Storm Blows Down Stand in Ball Park

NORFOLK, Va., May 26. — (Canadian Press).—A sudden storm yesterday blew down the grandstand of the Portsmouth baseball park during a game at which Commissioner Landis was the guest of honor.

One man was killed and it was estimated that between 50 and 75 persons were injured. Thirty were taken to a hospital and many others removed to their homes after receiving emergency treatment.

It is estimated that the wind reached a velocity of 75 miles an hour for a few minutes.

The first gust of the storm unroofed a Norfolk and Western warehouse on the waterfront near the Union Station here, killing four men and injuring a number of others.

JUBILEE PLANS REACH ONE STEP NEARER OBJECT

Pageant and Athletic Events To Be Held in Exhibition Park.

MOTIONS CARRIED.

Representatives of Neighbouring Municipalities To Be Asked To Co-operate.

Plans of the Central Committee in charge of the arrangements for the Dominion Jubilee Celebrations of the city, reached one stage further towards completion at a meeting held last night in the Council Chambers, Alderman Roland Denne in the chair, in the absence of Mayor Holloway.

All doubts as to the location of the pageant and the athletic events were swept into oblivion by the carrying of a motion by A. Reynolds, seconded by Claude Rogers, that these events be carried out on the Exhibition grounds. Appropriations for expenditures by the various committees, were confirmed.

On the motion of R. M. Glover, seconded by Alderman J. M. Greene, arrangements for the pageant, which it was intimated would last for one hour and a half, were left entirely to the Women's Council, which was given power to add to its numbers any male members whose assistance might be required.

It was agreed to empower the Finance Committee to borrow $500 for current expenses, the Mayor and Frank Adams to sign all checks countersigned by Chairman of Finance Committee Ald Phelan.

Dr. J. J. Craig, chairman of the Parade Committee, stated that invitations to co-operate had been sent out to 33 local organizations, 15 of which had returned favorable responses. He estimated 2000 people would take part in the procession.

Authority for the allotment of $50 to the Engineer's Club was granted, to aid in the expenses of the decorations for which the club has undertaken responsibility. The Engineers' Club is supplying the plans and bearing all the other expenses of their decorations.

All vouchers issued by each committee have to be marked by the chairman of that committee.

With the object of officially extending the celebration beyond the city boundaries, it was decided to write to the Reeves of the various municipalities of the neighborhood, which do not propose to have celebrations of their own, asking them to appoint representatives who would attend some of the meetings of the committee and take an active part in its deliberations.

Alderman Greene, chairman of the Music Committee stressed the necessity of the various committees advising that body as to music which they would require in connection with such parts of the celebration for which they had assumed responsibility. Committees are asked to furnish this information before June first.

Some discussion followed as to the form which should be taken by the Sunday celebrations. It had been previously agreed that the superintendents of the various Sunday schools should be asked to co-operate in a large outdoor Children's Service to be held in Victoria Park in the afternoon.

A suggestion broached by Mr. Greene that a part of the afternoon service take the form of a dedication of the new Memorial Gates at Nicholls Oval was approved and will be referred to the consideration of the meeting on Wednesday, June 1st.

With regard to the meeting to be held in the evening, also in Victoria Park it was agreed to let the arrangements stand over until consultations with the President of the Ministerial Association, and with Rev. Paul Costello had been held.

It was decided to approach Col. W. G. Hall, commanding the Peterborough Rangers, and Major H. Lodds, commanding No. 3 Company, 4th Battalion, Canadian Machine Gun Corps, with a view of ascertaining the possibilities of arranging a sham fight preceding the pageant on Friday and Saturday evenings.

Mr. Glover was appointed to interview Mr. Ayres, chief of the Aviation School, to find out the conditions under which government airplanes could be secured from Ottawa to stage a mock air battle.

Prices of admission were fixed at 35 cents to the grounds, and 25 cents to the grand stand, and 15 cents and 10 cents respectively for children. It was also decided to reserve a limited number of seats in the grand stand to be sold at 75 cents each, if this could be done.

It was agreed to advertise concessions for sale, restricted until June 15, to local organizations participating in the celebration, and after that date to be open to all others, application to be made to the Grounds Committee.

On motion it was agreed to meet every Wednesday, notices to be sent out to all members.

The secretary's hours were fixed at from 10 a.m., till noon, and from 2 till 4 in the afternoon, Mr. Denne granting the use of his office for Jubilee Committee business.

Those present were Roland Denne, chairman; F. H. Dobbin, secretary, Mrs. Stevenson, Mrs. Parsons, Miss Edwards, Miss C. Littlefield, Messrs. J. M. Greene, R. M. Glover, A. J. Reynolds, S. Lowe, T. Browne, H. Huffman, M. Chenhall, Dr. J. J. Craig, C. Rogers, W. Turner and E. Reid.

LIQUOR BOARD HOLDS SCHOOL FOR SERVANTS

Employees Being Drilled in Duties at Present Dispensaries This Week.

CAUTION TO BE USED.

Signatures on Permits and Orders To Be Compared at Each Sale.

TORONTO, May 26. — (Canadian Press.)—Commencing to-day officials of the Ontario Liquor Control Board will give systematic instruction in their duties to employees who have been taken on the staff for the operation of the Government liquor stores throughout the province.

The present Ontario Government dispensaries will be turned into institutions of learning for the next few days and the employees of the new stores given a thorough drilling in their work. Toronto will be the centre of all nearby points and instruction will also be given at London, Windsor, Fort William, Ottawa and Kingston.

D. B. Hanna, chairman of the Board, stated yesterday that the officials would exercise a good deal of caution in making sales. Besides securing a permit, the purchaser will have to fill out an order blank at the store where he is making his purchase and the signature affixed thereto will be compared with that on his permit, preventing any one using another's permit.

While the board made no statement on the matter, it is understood that each bottle will bear a serial number which will be entered on the order slip and permit.

RUMORED SEVERAL MEMBERS OF COMMONS BRIBED BY SOVIET Hoped Government Will Release More Information Concerning House Raid.

DEBATE OPENS TO-DAY.

Anxiously Await Additional Information About Real Reasons For Severance.

LONDON, May 26 (Canadian Press).—Rumors of an exciting character are circulating in London as to the discoveries made in the police raid on Arcos, Ltd., the Russian trade organization.

It is insistently reported that the names of several members of parliament are on the lists of persons to whom money has been paid by the Soviet trade delegation, and the debate in the House of Commons today on the question of breaking off all relations with Soviet Russia is awaited with breathless interest by an expectant public. The fervent hope is expressed that the government will release more information about the discoveries. The police are believed to have found Soviet codes which make it possible to decode messages exchanged between Moscow and the Soviet officials in London over a long period, including the time of the general strike. Everywhere the possible disclosures are the chief subject of discussion, and the people are eagerly buying all papers in the hope of additional information about the actual reasons for the prospective severance of Anglo-Russian relations.

There is much speculation, too, as to whether France, Italy and other countries having diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia will be influenced by Great Britain's action, and the man in the street is apparently convinced that England, France and Italy have reached an understanding regarding their attitude toward Moscow.

Says Documents Are Forgeries

The Socialists and The Daily Herald (the Labor paper) are charging that the documents on which the government bases its action are forgeries and insists that there is a general world plan to renew the economic barrier around Soviet Russia.

Emphatic denials of Premier Baldwin's espionage and other charges, as announced Tuesday in the House of Commons, were made yesterday by M. Rosengolz, the Soviet Charge d'Affaires in London, in a statement issued through Tass, the official Soviet news agency. M. Rosengolz takes the stand that the British Prime Minister has been misled, not only concerning espionage but with regard to other assertions he made when announcing the government's decision to break off diplomatic relations as well as denounce the trade agreement of six years' standing.

"We cannot but express our amazement and deep regret," says M. Rosengolz, "that such an important decision has been reached by the British government on such flimsy pretexts, and that such doubtful arguments have been used to justify its action."

The charge draws two definite conclusions from Premier Baldwin's statement. The first is that "the document alleged to have been lost has not only not been found, but there is no particle of evidence that this document ever found its way into Soviet House in Moorgate Street, or was in any way handled by the trade delegation or Arcos employees."

This has reference to the lost War Office document, which inspired the Arcos raid.

The second conclusion is: "There is

COVERING LOOSE SOIL.

Several men in the employment of G. Wise are engaged in turfing the surface of the embankment, recently raised to a higher level, in front of the County Buildings. All the materials which were excavated from the site of the addition to the County Buildings, which was erected last year, were deposited on the edge of the embankment which rises up from the Victoria Park.

While this deposition had the effect of bringing the embankment almost up to the level of the sidewalk, the loose soil presented a spectacle which did not improve the amenity of the neighborhood—a condition which the laying of the turf promises to remedy very thoroughly.

BABIES WELCOME

LONDON, May 26—There is at least one place in London where the words "No Children" do not bar the way to apartment hunters. Mrs. Bernard Potter, wife of a West End physician, has built a group of flats, with a roof garden, and made the announcement that children will be welcome.

Tragedy of Russia Revealed in Windsor

WINDSOR, Ont., May 26 (Canadian Press).—A tragedy resulting from the Russian revolution was revealed in Windsor police court yesterday, when Gustave Meikar, once a millionaire and master of ocean liners under the Czarist regime, was arraigned before Magistrate Gundy on a charge of failing to provide the necessities of life for his wife.

Meikar told the magistrate he was driven from the port of Odessa with 30,000 other refguees who refused to acknowledge the doctrines of Bolshevism. Only the fact that guns from British warships were trained on forts manned by Bolshevist soldiers, saved the fleeing anti-Bolsheviki from annihilation.

Since coming to Canada, seven years ago, Meikar has run down the social scale to such an extent that his earnings are only $6 per week as a janitor. Magistrate Gundy declined to make an order.

Naval Historian Says Beatty Lost First Round at Jutland.

SUPERIOR WON SECOND.

LONDON, May 26. — Canadian Press. — Rear Admiral John E. T. Harper, who compiled a special report on the battle of Jutland, the historic engagement in the world war has just published a book, "The Truth about Jutland."

He puts the vital facts of the battle into a new perspective, tending to dispel the legend of "an incompetent Jellicoe and a Beatty with the Nelson touch."

Admiral Harper declares: "To Jellicoe must go the verdict of that impartial referee—accurate history."

It is indicated that Beatty's famous "Follow me" appeal to Jellicoe actually caused the van of British ships to converge less on the enemy's course than before.

Admiral Harper attempts to make it clear that Admiral Beatty, who was in command of the fleet, lost the first round, that Jellicoe won the second, and that an omission by the Admiralty prevented Jellicoe from securing a final victory.

NO EMPLOYEES LEAVE THIS CITY

No Person Called To Toronto To Receive Instructions Concerning Stores.

UNDER CONTROL BOARD.

So far nobody from Peterborough has received official intimation of the Government's plan, commencing today, of giving instruction to all persons in the employment of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario. This statement was given out this morning by the local member, W. H. Bradburn.

Thorough Training.

Chief Commissioner D. B. Hanna and his colleagues, Hon. Dr. Manion and Stewart McClenaghan, speaking yesterday afternoon of the early opening of the Government stores, said it was their intention to have every man engaged by the board skilled in dealing with the public, in the operation of a cash register, and in keeping track of sales. Accountants will give assistance during the period of instruction.

There was no evidence of a post-holiday rush to secure permits yesterday at the office of Col. F. L. Bradburn, local issuer, who reports a very slight demand.

In answer to a query to-day, Col. Bradburn stated that no limit had been placed on the number of permits that would be available for issue in this city. There will always be sufficient permits on hand to take care of the local requirements. It is also understood that after the opening of the local liquor store, the permits will be handed over to the vendor who will issue them to applicants.

Bank clearings for the week were $780,903.

The annual decoration of soldiers' graves in the city took place on Empire Day, when members of the I.O.D.E., Mesdames B. H. Poole, R. Cottrell, C. Perks and F. A. Hodgson decorated with small flags the last resting-places of 164 soldiers, in the Little Lake Cemetery, 22 at St. Peter's Cemetery and one at Bridgenorth.

Berlin People Bitten By Gold From Sea Story

BERLIN, May 26.—Don't invest in sea water. That was the warning issued by Prof. Fritz Haber, famous German chemist, after several here had been victimzed for large sums in plausible schemes for boiling the gold out of sea water. Gold in very minute quantities is found in all the oceans of the world, the professor says, but the average concentration is so slight that it cannot be made to pay.

RESIDENTS OF SUBURBS WILL BUILD SCHOOL

Building To Be Erected at the Corner of Braidwood and Park.

TOTAL COST $30,000.

Lengthy Discussion Precedes Final Decision at Ratepayers' Meeting.

After a lengthy and heated discussion it was decided by the majority of ratepayers of North Monaghan present in May's School last night to erect a new school at Park and Braidwood streets. The schoolroom in which the meeting was held was crowded almost to capacity, and when discussion was thrown open for everyone the chairman certainly had to fulfil his duties as a keeper of the peace. Bruce Johnson was elected chairman for the evening, and Mr. Barnes acted as secretary.

The chairman of the board of trustees was then called upon for the report asked for at the last meeting to be presented last night, giving the people an idea where the proposed school would be situated and the approximate cost of such a site as the board chose. The following is the report given by Mr. May:

We, the school board, of the above mentioned section, begs to report that we have at the present time options on two properties suitable for the school sites. No. 1 constitutes a block of land having a frontage of 352 feet on Park street southerly from Braidwood avenue by 212 feet easterly on Braidwood avenue. It will be necessary to purchase eight more adjoining lots to make up sufficient ground at the price of $3,950. Property No. 2 constitutes a block of land having a frontage on King George street, 350 feet, begining at a point 560 feet east of Park street and then running easterly for same number of feet, thence northerly 237 feet to Wilson avenue, at the price of $2,500. This board has decided that the latter property is not so desirable as the school building would be approximately 1,000 feet from Park Street, and we do recommend the purchase, if any, of the former block which we call property No. 1.

The proposed school will constitute four rooms now, which, without furniture would amount to between twenty-five and thirty thousand dollars.

One gentleman, representing the farmers in the west of the township, remarked that they paid large taxes at present without adding the extra burden of more school taxes. "The City of Peterborough will take our children for less than we would pay here, so why should you build a school when our children can have the use of all things modern such as manual training and household science, which we can not give," he stated. Other speakers remarked that the City of Peterborough was growing and that probably in a short time the property on which the school was erected would become city property and then they would be out that much money, for then the school would be counted as property of the municipality. A member of the other side of the question disputed that, saying: "That might be, but the present children have to be educated," and he added that the city schools had turned out county children just a few days ago. Humane Inspector Saves Blackbird

The duties of the humane inspector cover a wide range these days. On Tuesday R. C. Smith, inspector for this district, received a phone call from a resident of this city, asking him to come and rescue a bird which was caught in a tree. The fire department had been appealed to but they did not consider rescuing birds as part of their civic duties. When Mr. Smith arrived on the scene he found a large blackbird hanging by a string, which it had used to built its nest, from one of the limbs of a tree. Most people would have left the noisy thief hang there, but Mr. Smith climbed the tree to the bird's rescue.

KING SAYS CERTAIN SECTIONS OF CANADA-RUSSIA TREATY HAVE BEEN VIOLATED BY SOVIET Premier Makes Announcement After Full Discussion of Whole Situation.

EVIDENCE SHOWN.

Termination Would Not Mean Discontinuance of Trade Between Countries.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 26 (Canadian Press)—The government has decided to terminate immediately the trade agreement with Russia, it was announced following a lengthy meeting of the cabinet yesterday afternoon.

Premier King in making the announcement declared that this action had been decided upon after a full discussion of the situation created through the decision of the British government to sever its relations with Soviet Russia. Evidence in the hands of the Canadian Government made it clear, the premier said, that certain sections of the agreement between Canada and Russia had been violated by the Russian government.

Premier King pointed out that the agreement was subject to termination unless certain conditions were fulfilled. He specifically quoted a provision that the parties to the agreement agreed to refrain "from hostile action or undertakings against the other and from conducting outside of its own borders official propaganda direct or indirect against the institutions of the British Empire or the Russian Soviet Republic respectively." Premier Baldwin's statement in the British House of Commons Monday and evidence before the Canadian government had made it clear, the premier said, that this agreement had been violated.

Would Continue Trade

Premier King stated emphatically that termination of the trade agreement would not mean discontinuance of trade between Canada and Russia. It would mean that certain quasi diplomatic privileges enjoyed by the Russian trade commission would be terminated but every effort would be continued to further trade between Canada and Russia in the same manner in which Canadian trade relations with other nations were conducted.

The premier said that he wished it made clear that evidence in the hands of the Canadian government "does not disclose any espionage or subversive propaganda as far as the Montreal office (of the Russian trade commission) is concerned."

At the outset of his announcement Premier King said that the cabinet had given a great deal of consideration to the Russian trade agreement and that in view of Premier Baldwin's statement in the British House of Commons the Canadian Government had decided to terminate the agreement.

Two Reasons

Two reasons had led to this decision, he added. In the first place the agreement was open to the interpretation that it automatically lapsed upon the action of the British government. The agreement had been drawn up between the British and Russian government and Canada had subsequently adhered to it by order-in-council. With the action of the British Government it might be held that the agreement no longer existed.

Another interpretation of the situation might be that the agreement existed subject to termination at the discretion of the Canadian government despite action by the British government. The general opinion of the members of the cabinet had been that following the British action Canada was in the position of having given adhension to an agreement treaty which now had ceased to exist.

The other reason that led to the decision of the government, the Premier stated, was that one of the conditions of the agreement had been violated and that the agreement provided that in the event of the infringement of any of its articles by one of the parties, the other party was freed from its obligations. Premier King then quoted the clause referring to propaganda.

"Premier Baldwin's statement," he added, "Leaves no doubt that such propaganda has been conducted at the instance and with the full knowledge of the Soviet government. That being the case we feel we should no longer abide by the agreement and it is my intention to so inform the representative of the Soviet government in Canada."

Premier King said that the agreement would be terminated immediately subject only to possible delay because of formalities attending the notification of the Soviet representatives.

Brought Through London

Termination of the treaty would be brought about through London, he said, in the same manner in which Canadian adhension to the treaty was brought about.

Expect Pinedo Will Make Safe Flight

ROME, May 26 (Canadian Press).—The intense anxiety felt throughout Italy ever since Commander De Pinedo, who already has to his credit the conquest by air of four continents, but who failed to arrive on schedule last Monday afternoon at the Azores, has been dissipated by a series of reports yesterday indicating that the intrepid pilot of the Santa Maria II. and his companions were safe and sound.

With virtual certainty of an affirmative answer to the question "Is he safe?" which was on everyone's lips for 48 hours, the Italian people turned yesterday from harrowing worry to unbounded confidence in the flier's ability again to transform apparent defeat into victory

Not only do the airmans admirers insist on believing that the Santa Maria will be fit to continue the flight, but they refuse to express any theory as to the cause of the mishap which might tarnish the reputation of its crew or mechanical equipment.

SEVEN NURSES ARE GRADUATED AT ST JOSEPH'S

Exercises Held in Lyceum Are Attended By Many Friends.

PRIZES PRESENTED.

Nurses Commended For Faithful Work By Speakers of Evening.

The auditorium at St. Alphonsus' Lyceum was filled to capacity last evening for the Graduating Exercises of the Training School for Nurses at St. Joseph's Hospital. The big hall was crowded with relatives and friends of the graduates and the stage was a bower of beautiful flowers, ferns and palms, hothouse blooms and wild spring blossoms alternating in the bowls, vases and tall standards filled with roses, carnations, trilliums and marsh marigolds which made a lovely setting for the girl graduates in their white uniforms, their arms filled with pink roses. The stage was draped on walls and artificial ceiling with yellow and white, the colors of the Hospital, and arranged with a number of colored electric lights. A group of the pupil nurses from the Hospital was also in attendance, as well as a large number of the physicians of the city.

Graduates of St. Joseph's Hospital Training School for Nurses this year are seven young ladies: Miss Frances Catherine Minard of Douglas Miss Evelyn Jayne Brennan of Cumberland, Miss Mary Kathleen Patrick of Williamsburg, Miss Mona Mary Kelly of Smooth Rock Falls, Miss Catherine Grace Shannon of Ennismore, Miss Mary Stylita Fitzmaurice of Bracebridge, and Miss Mary Veronica McGuire of Ennismore. Owing to illness, Miss Patrick was unable to be present at the exercises last night.

Dr. F. P. McNulty acted as chairman, and opened the programme with a concise, well-worded speech, in which he referred to the amount of Social Service work done in this age and generation, to the activities of the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs and to the growing sense of responsibility held by the community toward the individual, instanced in ameliorative legislation such as the Workmen's Compensation Act, the Mothers' Allowance Act, Old-Age Pensions, and the Minimum Wage Act.

Dr. McNulty alluded to the splendid equipment of St. Joseph's Hospital for the treatment of disease, and to the new devices recently installed there, also the large number of graduate nurses maintained on the permanent staff. He finished with congratulations to the graduates.

Address to Graduates.

In place of His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, who was unable to be present last night, Rev. P. Costello addressed the graduating class, extending his congratulations on their attainment of their diplomas after three years of arduous training under severe discipline.

"When we think of the work of the nurse, we stand in admiration of her duties," said Father Costello. "Man's most precious prerogative is that of life, and in times of ill-health the vigilance and firmness in execution of her duty manifested by the nurse often saves the life of her patient. The work of the nurses in the last Great War was responsible for the saving of much life. There would have been many more little wooden crosses erected in France and Flanders had it not been for their

GREAT BRITAIN TO ENTERTAIN OCEAN FLIER

Captain Lindbergh Returning By Way of Brussels and London.

ANY FLIGHT FEASIBLE.

Hopes To Call on Belgian King at Brussels on Saturday.

PARIS, May 26 (United Press). — Captain Charles Lindbergh, officially knight of the Legion of Honor and unofficially the darling of Paris, was honored yesterday by the Chamber of Deputies.

True to his record of arriving on time, Lindbergh reached the Presidency of the Chamber at 3 p.m. The deputies, characteristically, were 15 to 20 minutes late for the reception.

Regardless of political opinions, the deputies rushed Lindbergh to shake his hand. A Communist deputy urged him to visit Russia. Lindbergh replied: "I won't make it this time."

The black deputies from Senegal, West Africa, seemed to interest Lindbergh as much as anything.

Lindbergh yesterday refused an invitation to spend the week-end in the royal palace at Brussels as guest of King Albert and Queen Elizabeth of the Belgians.

Marshal Foch asked Lindbergh to accept the services of his personal aide-de-camp, Captain l'Hopital, during the remainder of his stay here. L'Hopital accompanied Lindbergh yesterday, acting as his interpreter. The captain learned English when he accompanied Foch to the United States.

All tailoring records were broken to provide Lindbergh with a wardrobe here.

Inspects Plane.

Captain Charles A. Lindbergh tinkered with his Ryan monoplane yesterday at Le Bourget field and pronounced it ready, except for a minor adjustment or two, to carry him to Brussels and London.

There still was enough Roosevelt field gasoline in the tanks for the projected flights, and Lindbergh intimated that he would carry on with American fuel.

Lindbergh was not satisfied with the way the holes ripped by souvenir hunters had been patched and said he would return to the field to direct the repatching. He still hopes to be able to fly to Brussels Saturday to see King Albert.

Transportation home had not been decided on yesterday.

Lindbergh had not yet received President Coolidge's invitation to return to New York aboard a United States warship, but thinks the passage probably would be more comfortable aboard a liner. Having sacrificed comfort to necessity on the eastbound voyage Lindbergh seemed to be inclined to even the score on the westward voyage.

Any Flight Feasible.

Any flight conceivable is feasible now, Lindbergh told reporters.

"If a man can fly a plane over the ocean in one night without particularly feeling ill effects there is no reason why he could not fly two nights without being completely exhausted," Lindbergh said. "There is no place in the world which could not be reached by air if the flight was properly prepared."

The young airman did two more graceful acts of the sort which have endeared him to all Paris.

While refusing to accept the tempting offers to commercialize his fame, he donated $500 to the American hospital there.

He sent a telegram to the mother of the missing aviator, Francois Coli, Charles Nungesser's companion on the unsuccessful French flight across the Atlantic.

Visits Bleriot.

Louis Bleriot, designer and pilot of the first airplane to fly across the English Channel was Lindbergh's host at luncheon yesterday. The luncheon was a private affair at Bleriot's home. Lindbergh said he was glad of the opportunity to talk to the man who, as the first to fly across the Channel, "placed France in the lead of world aviation at that time."

Lindbergh inspected at Le Bourget the plane being constructed for Paul Tarascon, who plans to fly from Paris to New York in August. The craft is a monoplane of 380 horsepower. Lindbergh inquired especially whether the plane would float and was assured that it would be as solid as a boat.

Doumergue Thrilled on Visit to England; Immaculately Garbed As Guest of Royalty

PARIS, May 26 (AP)—President Doumergue enjoyed all the fuss and trappings of State on his three-day official visit to England last week, he has confided to his intimates. Although the French Chief Magistrate is a man of humble origin and given to simple tastes, being rather irked by the pomp of the Elysee Palace, he nevertheless found the ceremonies he went through in Great Britain gracious and pleasant.

It was learned that the President had an entire wardrobe prepared, including an Oxford doctor's gown and a mortarboard, and was really disappointed last Summer when the fall of the Briand Cabinet, coupled with the general strike in Great Britain, forced him to postpone his scheduled visit at that time. He personally supervised the selection of his shirts and other aticles of clothing. When he arrived in England as the house guest of King George and Queen Mary, he had a wardrobe that even the fastidious Lord Curzon might well have envied.

Furthermore, President Doumergue is one of the few Frenchmen who can wear a monocle and carry it off properly in English eyes. His proverbial serenity of countenance lends itself to the problem of holding the tricky glass, a feat that many of his colleagues, who are more excitable, find difficult.

DERAILMENT ON C.N.R. LINE

Train From Here To Port Hope Meets With Minor Accident.

HOLDS UP TRAFFIC.

Traffic on the Peterborough-Port Hope line of the Canadian National always was held up for a few hours this morning by a slight accident. The pony truck of the engine drawing the passenger train which leaves here at 7.00 a.m., left the tracks near Fraserville. Little damage was done, but the train from Port Hope which goes on from here to Lindsay and Toronto, was also held up.

CHAMBER HONORS ATLANTIC AVIATOR

Capt. Charles Lindbergh Given Ovation By French Deputies.

PARIS, May 25 (Canadian Press). —Captain Charles Lindbergh, the "new ambassador of America," was introduced to the French Chamber of Deputies this afternoon by Myron T. Herrick, the "temporarily retiring ambassador," and received a tremendous ovation.

Fernand Bouisson, President of the Chamber, greeted the birdman officially, while below the dais stood General Giroud, President of the Aviation group and almost the entire membership of the Chamber.

"All of us acclaim you and all of us pay tribute to the illustrious aviator, first to cross the Atlantic, whose valor is equalled only by his modesty," said the President.

Lindbergh, addressing the Chamber, recalled that when Bleriot crossed the English Shannel in 1909 people asked "What good did it do?" Today people were asking "What good has it done to cross the Atlantic?" He hoped it would produce the greatest good not only for the great spirit of friendship between the two countries, but also in future actual and regular communications across the Atlantic by air.

HUSKY BUILDS HEALTH AS IT GIVES RELIEF

Thousands of Cases Prove Reconstructive Qualities of This Preparation.

Most of us seek relief when we are suffering or are in a weak, run down state, but few of us receive any lasting help—our troubles keep returning. Husky, the herb preparation, strengthens the organs of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels and therefore it gives relief of a permanent nature for such ills as headaches, dizzy spells, indigestion, gas and sour stomach, constipation, catarrhal affections, rheumatic pains, nervousness and weak, tired feelings. Husky is not a one-dose, cure-all. It must be taken regularly and over a reasonable length of time, but then its help is lasting.

Mr. Lake Talks

Mr. E. C. Lake, 413 King St., Toronto, tells of his case and how Husky helped as follows: "For five month my health had been run down. I suffered from stomach trouble. Indigestion would follow each meal. Gas would form on my stomach and cause a terrible bloated feeling. Constipation added to my misery and, I also suffered greatly from headaches. I began taking Husky not long ago and this medicine has improved my health wonderfully. I am no longer bothered with indigestion, gas or bloated feelings. Constipation is a thing of the past and headaches no longer affect me. I am certainly feeling much better and stronger in every way. I have had a might fine experience and I can recommend Husky to all who suffer in any way I did."

E. C. LAKE

At Good Drug Stores.

Every person in this city suffering in any way Husky is recommended to relieve, should begin the Husky treatment now. Husky can be obtained at good drug stores everywhere and when taken regularly and over a reasonable length of time it will help you just as it is helping thousands of others.

BLOOD HAS DAILY TIDE.

In the blood stream, pumped from the heart to give us life, there are daily tides, like the ebb and flow of the tides of the sea. Dr. A. F. Bernard Shaw, of Newcastle, England, recently made this discovery while studying the white corpuscles of the blood. These white cells, whose duty it is to fight disease germs which enter the blood, are known to vary in numbers from time to time. Dr. Shaw found that the number increases and decreases in two regular daily waves.

The high tide of white corpuscles usually comes just after midnight and again in the afternoon. Dr. Shaw suggests in Popular Science Monthly that these tides may bear some relation to the hours of eating and sleeping, or may be due to changing positions of sun and earth.

TAME PACIFIC INVITES FLIERS

Flights To Manilla and South Pole Projects of Future.

PLANNING FLIGHTS.

WASHINGTON, May 26 (United Press).—An American birdman has conquered the Atlantic. America will probably seek next to master the far reaches of the Pacific and the Antarctic by air.

This was the prediction yesterday of Assistant Secretary of Commerce William P. MacCracken, civil air head.

His imagination fed, like that of millions of other Americans, through the unbelievably successful feat of Capt. Charles A.Lindbergh in spanning the Atlantic from New York to Paris by air, MacCracken declared a "trans-Pacific flight to Manila is among the great projects of the future." Simultaneously he ventured the view that Lindbergh's achievement "likely would lead to an early attempt at the south pole."

American Flays Rules

"A trans-Pacific flight to Manila is among the great projects for the future," he said. "Lindbergh's flight to Paris is over a greater distance than any single leg of a Pacific Coast-to-Manila flight via Honolulu and Guam. Such a flight is clearly practicable, and awaits only someone's enthusiasm. It would be especially interesting because all "between points" are under the American flag.

"The chief effort of airplane builders in the light of Lindbergh's achievement will be to increase the safety of planes consistent with weight-carrying capacity. With some further experience in long-distance flights with heavy loads the feasibility of the trans-Pacific flight can be safely predicted."

Other authorities agreed, too, that the Pacific again will engross the imagination of flight promoters.

One notable effect of Lindbergh's success will be to reawaken confidence in the great efficacy of "stunt flights" in promoting the rapid development of commercial aviation, officials said. The unparalleled world-wide enthusiasm over the New York to Paris flight will be a stimulus to officials and private promoters, as well as aviators, it is believed.

Finances Won't Handicap

During the spring several projects, including one by Lindbergh himself, have been under consideration for a flight from the Pacific Coast to Hawaii. One of these has been in abeyance for lack of financial support. This difficulty, it is believed, may now easily be overcome.

Within the last year naval aviation experts have made extensive studies concerning the practicability of a flight by airplanes from the Pacific Coast to Manila.

New Types Of Pottery Dug Up In Palestine

JERUSALEM, May 26 (AP)—The discovery of a rich store of early Israelite pottery by the Mizpah expedition of the Pacific School of Religion, under Professor William C. Bade, has resulted in a decision to extend the operations of the expedition into the Summer.

Near Tell-en-Ansheh, in an area adjacent to the ancient Semitioc temple found ten days ago, the expedition discovered two closed cisterns hewn out of the bedrock. The importance of the find was recognized immediately and the Governor of Jerusalem accepted an invitation to open the cisterns.

They contained a rich collection of early Israelite pottery, including forms entirely new to ceramics in the Near East. Many jars and pitchers were found whole and scores of others which were in pieces, are being assembled.

TYPHOID EPIDEMIC NOW UNDER CONTROL

Health Officers Convinced the Source of Infection Has Been Located.

MONTREAL, May 26 (Canadian Press). — Positive assurance that provincial intervention in the typhoid situation has resulted in suppressing the source of infection and in preventing the occurrence of new cases was given by Hon. Athanase David yesterday. The Provincial Secretary stated that he and his officials were convinced that the source of infection had been located and cut off absolutely; that adequate remedial measures were being taken; that except for the development of cases infected before the preventive steps were taken, there will be no further spread of the disease, and that within one month the epidemic will be completely stamped out.

Issues Statement

MONTREAL, May 26 (Canadian Press).—Dr. D. Ernest Pollin, acting mayor of Montreal, has issued the following statement to the Canadian Press:

"The source of the typhoid epidemic in Montreal has been eradicated through the prompt and joint action of both the provincial and the municipal board of hygiene, which have taken over the absolute control of two dairies in which a source of infection had been discovered.

"The superintendent of the board of hygience of the city desires me to state that there is now no danger whatever for any user of milk in Montreal as all the precautions and the most drastic measures have been taken to prevent any new outbreak.

"There is absolutely no compulsory inoculation either for citizens or visitors, though some citizens have been inoculated of their own free will, and there is no danger whatever of being quarantined."

WEDDING BELLS.

CUMMINGS—COCK

CAMPBELLFORD, May 26—Miss Mary Cock, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cock, became the bride of John D. Cummings last night at 7 o'clock at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Adams, on Second street. The beautiful wedding service of the Presbyterian church was read by the Rev. James Grier, B.A., minister of St. Andrew's church.

Young Breadwinner For 5 Dies of Fear

DURANGO, Colo., May 26.—A.P.)—Richard Moser, 18 years old, sole support of five younger brothers and sisters, died here last night of fear. Young Moser died on the operating table of a hospital—died of fear that if he did not recover from the appendicitis operation he was about to undergo the little brood he had fought so hard to keep together for the last few months would become wards of the state and spend their childhood in an institution.

Physicians diagnosed his death as due to sudden dilation of the heart "caused from extreme mental suffering and the fear that he would die."

Moser's father died a year ago, and his mother when her last child was born. Since then he has successfully provided for the family.

CONTINUE SEARCH FOR MISSING AIRMEN

Two Men Say They Heard Explosions on May 9th Morning.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., May 26 (Canadian Press).—Interest in the efforts being made to solve the mystery of the missing French aviators, Nungesser and Coli, was stimulated yesterday when Hon. G. A. Bartlett arrived from the vicinity of Burin, with a report from two men of Paradise Sound, an inlet of Placentia Bay, to the effect that they had heard a series of three explosions about ten o'clock on the morning of Monday May 9. It was at that time that the French airmen in their Trans-Atlantic flight were expected to pass over Newfoundland, and numerous persons have testified that they heard and saw a plane similar to the "White Bird" of Nungesser and Coli as near as 20 miles from Paradise Sound on that morning.

The report, which is now being investigated was made by Henry Collins and his son, who were working in the woods two miles inland. It was foggy and raining and they knew nothing about aeroplane flights being under way. They said they heard a crash as though some great object had struck the earth or the cliffside of Paradise gulch, which is a deep cleft stretching back from the head of the sound.

There was a second crash similar to the first, the men reported, then an explosion or crash that seemed to shake the ground.

After making their report yesterday and learning of the search being made for Nungesser and Coli, the two men went back to the gulch to search the area in hopes of finding the cause of the noise they heard.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 26.—After an absence of some months a former citizen, for whom a warrant had been issued, for an infraction of the B. O. T.A., returned to town yesterday and was immediately placed under arrest by Chief Light, who happened to notice him going into a garage. This man was wanted at Cobourg and provincial police were not long in arriving to take their man to the place out of which the warrant was issued.

STEEL HOUSE BURNS QUICKLY

Steel houses were reduced to scrap and ashes with such rapidity in Bo'ness, Scotland, recently, that the occupants barely escaped with their lives. All that remained of a double cottage where the reinforced chimneys and the kitchen stoves at the base. The fire started in cottage No. 13, occupied by William Carr, an insurance agent, and spread so quickly that the family of Robert Findley, a Bo'ness postman, had to escape in their night clothes. All furniture and personal possessions of both families were destroyed, and firemen fought desperately to prevent other steel houses in the block being consumed by flames.

FLOOD WATERS ROAR THROUGH LEVEE BREAK

Gap 1,500 Feet Wide Is Torn in Southern Levee.

INHABITANTS FLEE.

Loss Greater Than Any Other Inundation Suffered in Louisiana.

NEW ORLEANS, La., May 26. — With a roar that could be heard ten miles away, flood waters of the Atchafalaya River swept through a break in the levee 1,500 feet wide yesterday, causing greater financial loss than any previous inundation in Louisiana.

Fifty square miles of Pointe Coupee parish is already flooded. Fleets of motor cars and trucks raced ahead of the flood yesterday to carry stragglers of the 50,000 inhabitants of the area to safety. Most of the population of the valley has already moved out.

Current through the break in the levee at McCrae is estimated at 40 miles an hour and although the crevasse came on a falling river, engineers said nothing could stop complete inundation of the richest section of the state.

Barges Swept Away.

Six barges tied securely to the levee north of the McCrae break were swept through the opening Tuesday, according to a report to flood headquarters at Baton Rouge, but no lives were lost.

Six parishes below Pointe Coupee are destined to feel the strength of the waters within a week, increasing the devastation. Cotton, sugar and corn crops will be seriously affected. The area, which will probably be inundated, also includes practically all the acreage in the United States where perique tobacco can be grown.

Evacuation of the lower parishes was already under way, although ample time remains for removal of all inhabitants, live stock and valuable property.

Ten Villages.

Ten villages and 100 square miles of farm land in north-western part of Pointe Coupee parish will be inundated within 24 hours, engineers predicted yesterday, as flood waters from a break in the river levee at McCrae advanced.

Flood relief headquarters at Baton Rouge reported no loss of life. Most of the threatened area has been evacuated.

OLD MASTERS

O what hall I hang on the chamber walls?
And what shall the pictures be that I hang on the walls,
To adorn the burial house of him I love?

Pictures of growing spring and farms and homes,
With the Fourth-month eve at sundown, and the gray smoke lucid and bright,
With floods of the yellow gold of the gorgeous, indolent, sinking sun, burning, expanding the air,
With the fresh spring herbage under foot, and the pale green leaves of the trees prolific,
In the distance the flowing glaze, the breast of the river, with a wind dapple he e and there,
With ranging hills on the banks, with many a line against the sky, and shadows,
And the city at hand with dwellings so dense, and stacks of chimneys,
And all the scenes of life and the workshops, and the workmen homeward returning.

—Walt Whitman: From "When Lilacs Last Bloomed Round the Dooryard."

THE WEAVER.

In ev'ry fabric from my loom—
Whose beauteous threads my hands caress,
There's woven fast with artlessness,
Part of my life—so give it room.

And ev'ry work that toil doth bring
To full completion—fit for use—
Has within it, tho' recluse,
Sacrifices hovering.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

THE NEAREST THING TO HEAVEN.

The nearest thing to heaven
Is not an azure hill,
Nor yet a pine upon its crest
A-reaching higher still.
It's somewhere in a valley,
It's somewhere down below,
The nearest thing to heaven that
On earth you'll ever know.

It's down among your kinfolk,
Your own folk, rich or poor,
It's just to have a friend or two,
A friend a friend for sure.
It's coming home to supper,
To quiet peace and rest—
The nearest thing to heaven is
Some place you love the best.

You hear the song of angels
When little children sing,
And even in some hour of grief
You hear a whirring wing.
It's somewhere where they love you,
It's someone who is dear—
The nearest thing to heaven is
Some little heaven here.

BRINGING UP FATHER — By Geo. McManus

"I WANT TO HELP" SAYS ALLEN BOUDRIA

Tells Facts From Own Experien ce To Help Others. Almost Wild With Pain, Weak and Rundown, He Won New Health and Strength Through Tanlac.

Allen Boudria, engineer, of 432 St. Patrick St., is one of Ottawa's best known citizens. "My purpose in telling the facts of my experience," he said, "is to help others who suffer as I did.

"For five years I was in misery. My whole system seemed out of gear, but my stomach troubled most. Even a drink of cold water would cause my stomach to bloat and swell abnormally. Gas would prevent me from sleeping at night so that I had to get up and walk the floor for hours. Violent stomach pains nearly drove me wild. I've seen times when I was doubled over, unable to straighten up.

"My friend M. Lapointe told me how Tanlac had helped him out of similar trouble, so I got some and used 9 bottles in all. It just made me over. I feel 30 years younger than I am, and weigh 214 lbs. My appetite and sleep are both fine. I eat what I like and sleep like a top. Tanlac and nothing else, made this great change. I'm for Tanlac."

If overwork or neglect have worn you down get Tanlac, the great natural tonic made from roots, herbs and barks. Your druggist has it. Over 32 million bottles sold.

no particle of evidence that the trade delegation or Arcos or any of their employees, ever engaged in military espionage or any work of a similar nature."

M. Rosengolz emphasizes that in the eyes of Chesham House (Soviet Embassy) officials, Premier Baldwin has brought forward no facts, or any other trace of evidence which could in the least support his accusations against the Soviets.

"Whatever he said on the subject of espionage, as well as the mysterious lost document," adds the charge, "contains nothing but unfounded allegations."

Can Give Proof

Regarding the telegrams relative to China cited by Premier Baldwin, as sent from London, M. Rosengolz says that it can be proved from copies in the central telegraph office files in London that no such telegraphic correspondence took place.

"I declare categorically," he avows, "that neither I nor anyone of the Embassy staff ever received or sent any such telegrams."

The charge denies Premier Baldwin's reference to a subterranean photostat room in Soviet House, explaining that it was nothing more than the ordinary photostats which exist nowadays in most of the up-to-date commercial houses. Furthermore, he denies the 'sensational declamations" relative to burned papers which Scotland Yard men said they found during the Arcos raid.

He contends that there is no truth in the British Premier's assertions regarding a paper which fell from the pocket of Anton Miller (a Soviet employee) in a scuffle at the time of the raid, M. Rosengolz having Miller's word for it, that Miller never had in his possession a list of secret addresses.

"Evidently," continues the charge, "Mr. Baldwin has been misled by persons who invented the story, for what they mistook for a list of secret addresses was in reality a list of various branches of the people's commissariat for trade belonging to its delegation abroad, and which used the same code."

M. Rosengolz declares that the government's decision to abrogate relations immediately is not only a violation of the trade agreement, "but it is an unprecedented arbitrary act in the history of international relations."

He contends that "the evident weakness" of Mr. Baldwin's arguments, without giving the Soviets an opportunity to explain the accusations against them, show that "we have to deal with a well-thought-out act by the present government, which came into power with the aid of the notorious Linovieff letter."

CAR RECOVERED BY POLICEMAN

Constable Light Arranges Return of Automobile To Owner.

YOUNG MAN LET OFF.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 26. — A couple of young bloods from Marmora recently blew into town, with markers defaced and lights out.

When accosted by the chief, after they had left their car, they denied owning the car, and gave the chief wrong names. The chief kept a watchful eye on both the car and the young men, and it was not long before one of them was seen to be setting the markers right, and later they made their way out of town with the car. The chief had, however, taken the number, and had ascertained from Toronto the name of the owner of the car and his place of residence.

The matter was settled out of court owing to the otherwise very fine character of the young man.

KING SAYS CERTAIN, ETC.

"This action is being taken on our own initiative as a result of the evidence we have before us at the present time," Premier King stated when asked whether Canada had been bound by the action of the British government.

The prime minister pointed out that the situation in Canada was quite different from that in Great Britain. Canada, he said, had never had diplomatic relations with Russia though Great Britain had had such relations up to the present time. Thus the Canadian action merely meant that termination of a trade agreement and cancellation of certain quasi diplomatic privileges enjoyed by the Russian trade commissioner.

Questioned as to what effect the government action would have on the Russian trade mission, Premier King said that he assumed that the trade commssioner would return to Russia. "He will not be recognized by the Canadian government," the Premier added. "If he wishes to remain as a commercial agent it is up to him."

The general result of the termination of the agreement, he pointed out, would be that Canada would return to the same status, in regard to Russian relations, as existed for many years previous to the Great Britain agreement.

Premier King said that he had not seen Longin F. Querus, head of the Soviet Trade Mission to Canada, who was in Ottawa yesterday.

VICTORIA DAY SPORT PROGRAM AT CAMPBELLFORD CARRIED OUT DESPITE CONTINUOUS SHOWERS

Polly Stout, Hal E, and Hal Direct Win Horse Races.

CAMPBELLFORD WINS.

Percy Bland Wins Five Mile Race in 33 Mins., 48 Secs.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 26. — Campbellford put itself more prominently on the map on Victoria Day than ever before, in the carrying out of all that was advertised for Victoria Day. The early morning gave promise of the retirement from active service of Old Jupiter Pluvius, but towards noon the old boy began to hesitate and it was not long before he had finally made up his mind to stick to the job. However, the committee in charge of the sports decided that it would be unfair to the horsemen and the Warkworth baseball team to call off the celebration, and on scheduled time the advertised sports began. When asked by the Examiner if the Seymour Agricultural Society did not stand to lose by not cancelling the races, J. M. Stone, secretary treasurer of the Sports Committee, replied, "We have kept our word with the owners of the race horses and the many who came some miles to see the races and ball game, and that's worth a whole lot more than the money we will be out"—Ata boy!

During the past few years a considerable quantity of cinders has been placed on the race track, so that, in spite of the rain, the track was in very good shape. Horsemen state that the local track is one of the best in Ontario. Admiring the courage of the Sports Committee the rain took its journey to other parts during the horse racing, ball game and the Marathon.

Old time race track men tell us that we had some of the best that is to be had on the track today

There were horses from Hastings, Roseneath, Trenton, Indian River, Frankford, Havelock and Peterborough. The owners were more than satisfied with the manner in which the races were conducted and the liberal purses. Class A, $150, Class B, $125; Class C, $125. The timers were Russell Peake and J. R. Battesby, both local men, and the judges were John R. Hancock of Colborne; W. R. Nelson of Warkworth, and C. R. Turley of Frankford. D. A. Owens of town was the efficient clerk. The following is the official slate:

Class A

Polly Stout, Major Hal, Mr. Haley. Time 2.29, 2.30, 2.29½.

Class B

Hal E. Final Directum, Bub, So. Dakota Maid. Time 2.29½, 2.29¼, 2.29¼, 2.35¼.

Class C

Hal Direct, Dick Winger. Carry John, Opera Girl, Alex, Jack Moore, Harry C., Kentucky Bird. Time 2.49¼, 2.49½, 2.49¼.

Among the horse owners in attendance were S. Blewett, R. Elmhirst, E. Jones, C. Armstrong, L. Stevens, Sy Garrison, Mark Lake, Joseph Wassau and Messrs. Hess and Jones.

The Baseball Game

What about the old ball game? Well, we're just going to give it to you. There's generally three sides to any baseball tale—your side, our side, and the right side. We're going to give you two sides of it. Don't look at the score, and then say "Rotten!" because it wasn't. True, it wouldn't keep one up all night writing home about it, but nevertheless it was a good game of ball. Campbellford players are ready to cough up an acknowledgement that Warkworth never got those fielders and basemen out of any home for old men. They were certainly good, and all that the pitcher and catcher lacked was just a little more team work, but even at that it would have been impossible to defeat Campbellford while Thornton Ivey, our high school boy, was pitching the ball he pitched on that day. Twenty-three—1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23—strike outs is the record Ivey carried off the diamond in the game.

The fair ones were by far in the majority at the ball game and demanded women's rights, and having made the demand, took them. The umpire and Warkworth players heard from the girls quite frequently. They broadcasted all afternoon and there was no static. "Back to the bush!" "He's got a wooden arm!" "Dead from the neck up!" "You don't look good to me!" and "He's all right — it's the world that's crazy," were some of the chance expressions hurled at Mr. Ump and the Warkworth players.

As we have said above the success was due to the wonderful pitching of Thornton Ivey. So fast did Ivey travel that, at the Regent theatre at night, His Worshoip the Mayor called upon him to come to the platform to receive the Marathon cup, all of which went to show that the popular young pitcher was not a thousand miles away from the mind of the chief magistrate.

Here's what you're waiting for:

"Good old band!" greeted the Northumberland Regiment band, under command of Bandmaster Captain William Pearson, as "The Middy" announced their parading down Main Street en route to the race track About twenty-five bandsmen were on parade, nearly all with active service and "Canteen" ribbons up. Don't know that we're supposed to give out this information, but there was a nice little bit of real, genuine sympathy shown by the band today towards one of their number who is at present in the Kingston General Hospital. The entire earnings of the band go for the purchase of comforts for the afflicted one—"Good old band."

Prizes Presented

The presentation of the prizes to the winners of the marathon rack took place between pictures at that very popular theatre, the Regent. His Worship Mayor G. A. Kingston, in making the presentations, reviewed the history of the marathon in an exceedingly entertaining manner. His Worship said: "This is a new feature which occurs only once a year and it gave him a great deal of pleasure to preside on this occasion. The marathon, said His Worship, is nothing new. In 490 B.C. a great battle was fough at Marathon, where the Greeks were victorious over the Persians. A Greek ran from Marathon to Athens to announce the news of the victory—as great a feat at that time, said the speaker, as flying from New York to Paris is today. 775 B.C. saw the start of the Olympic races—our civilization is not new after all. He recalled a story in the classics where one was advised to go to the barber's shop for information, and thought it was still a good place for gossip, but not so good now that the women find their way there (laughter). The qualifications of a runner was summed up as follows:

1—A Greek must have no stain on his character, either religious or civil.

2—Ten months' training in a gymnasium.

3—No guile or no underhand work in his contest.

A herald declared the winner's name and record. A saying "Let the runners' feet be put to the line," was recalled.

The prizes, continued the speaker, were without value. A garland of wild ivy together with a palm branch to be placed in the hand. Later more valuable prizes were given. The winner was supposed to go to the temple. Roses were scattered in his path and a sculptor was engaged to make a statue. A larger sum of money was given, and rations provided for life. His Worship brought a roar of laughter when he stated that he did not think that the town council would do anything like this for the winner of the Marathon now. In the fourth century the government forbid these races, and it was not until 1896 that theye were revived, and in 1920 Campbellford had adopted the Marathon. His Worship then invited Percy Bland to the stage and presented him with a costly silver cup: then Leo Bush, winner of the second prize, was given a ticket to Rochester and enough money for expenses. Distance 5 miles; time 33 4-5.

Notes

Among the out-of-town clergy seen at the ball game were: Rev. L. H. Fowler, B.A., of Warkworth; Rev. M. L.Hinton of Hastings, and the Rev. Mr. Jones, Warkworth.

To The Examiner, Mr. T. J. Horkins, chairman of the sports committee, expressed himself as being very well pleased with the day—all things considered.

Alarge number of British flags.

J. S. Blute saw that the boys were kept supplied with firework well on into the night.

C. H. Coveney, said to be the best informed racehorse man in town, said that there was no fault to be found with the races.

HISTORY PRIZES.

Bishop Fallon's announcement of the establishment of perpetual memorial prizes in honor of Hon. Thomas D'Arcy McGee and Sir George E. Cartier, two of the Fathers of Confederation, as part of the plans of the Diocese of London for the Diamond Jubilee, will be welcome to those who have been pointing out the need of stimulating the study of Canadian history.

It is particularly pleasing to note that the competition will be thrown open, not only to the pupils of the Separate and Catholic secondary institutions in the Diocese, but also to the pupils of the Ruthenian College at Yorkton, Sask.

The pupils of the latter institution are newcomers to Canada and the necessity of encouraging them to study the story of this country's past and to learn of the ideals aimed at by the statesmen who were responsible for making Confederation a reality can readily be recognized.

The birth of a new interest in Canadian history is one of the first fruits of the jubilee celebration and will serve to more useful purpose in the final analysis than many of the more spectacular features that are being associated with the jubilee programme.

MONTREAL'S EPIDEMIC.

The Provincial Treasurer of Quebec has voiced the fear that, as a result of the typhoid epidemic in Montreal, the tourists traffic to Quebec this summer will be very materially interfered with.

Last year tourists spent $50,000,000 in the province, so that Quebec will be hard hit because of the outbreak.

The Montreal epidemic, which has cost 289 lives and involved a total of nearly 4,000 cases since the beginning of March, is an indictment of the civic government of Montreal that calls for an investigation.

In these days an outbreak of typhoid fever on a major scale is only possible when the machinery for safeguarding the public has completely broken down.

That seems to have been the case in Montreal where immediately after it had been announced that the authorities had the situation in hand the epidemic again assumed alarming proportions.

The Provincial Board of Health has now asserted its authority and is taking steps to stay the progress of the diseases, a course made necessary by the utter failure of the civic government to deal effectively with the crisis.

It is to be hoped that the provincial health officials will be successful in quelling the outbreak.

BEYOND THE POLE.

Great Britain's break with the Soviet Government and the decision to terminate the trade agreement with Russia are the result of absolute confirmation of the belief that the Soviet cannot be trusted.

Premier Baldwin's statement leaves no doubt as to the treachery of the Soviet.

The agreement entered into some years ago has been used to cover widespread political propaganda and to cloak the diffusion of Communistic doctrine.

The Arcos House, the Russian commercial headquarters in London which also houses the Russian trade delegation, has been shown to have been a clearing house for all kinds of anti-British correspondence, and this underground communication has been extended to Canada, the United States, Mexico, South America, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa.

The Soviet has placed itself beyond the pole by the duplicity with which it has carried on its communistic plotting against the Government of Great Britain and of other countries behind the shield of a trade agreement.

There was no other course for Great Britain but to terminate the treaty.

Defenders of the Soviet in Canada should be able to see that the communist organization they have been so eager to endorse has been proven to be without honour and that it is not fit to be trusted.

HERE WAS A WISE MAN.

A little procession on Victoria Day afternoon, consisting of three small boys, and a man carrying a blackened tea pail, suggested that one Peterborough citizen had solved the problem of making a holiday earn rich dividends.

Evidenly the four were returning from a hike up the river somewhere and, judging from the smiling faces exhibited by the quartette, not even the wet and cold had been able to kill the joy of the occasion.

Offhand we venture to call the senior member of the party a wise man.

He had invested a few hours of his time in an enterprise that won for him a chance to renew his youth by contact with three youngsters full of life and enthusiasm, and better than that he had sold himself to his sons as a pal—and that's a great deal in these days when father is usually known as "the old man" and valued largely for his ability to buy motor cars and pay for gasolene.

Some of the families who motored out of Peterborough on Tuesday may have had a better time than this little squad who trudged a mile or two up the river road to build a fire and lunch in the open, but we'll be bold enough to say that we don't think any of them had.

Somebody said during Boys' Week that there was nothing a father could give his boy that meant as much as a little of his time.

The citizen carrying a blackened tea pail who shepherded his little flock down George street the other day had made that gift, and it is a safe wager that both he and his sons found it worth while.

We don't know who he was and we hope he'll understand that the incident is mentioned merely in the chance that it may result in some more "daddies" deciding that an hour or two with "sonny" is better than giving him some spending money and then forgetting all about him.

CHEERFUL STATISTICS.

On the authority of an official statement in Ottawa, Canadians may cease to worry about the birth rate in this country. The rate in the Dominion, it is announced, is the highest for any white race in the world. That is interesting, coming with an announcement that this promises to be one of the best years for immigration of the right character that Canada has known in more than a decade. True there are two schools of thought on this. One holds that there are enough people in the country now for the work at hand and the positions to be filled. The other says that immigration is one cure for remaining stagnation, that production begets demand, and the argument goes on along lines which have been threshed out since the word economics was first coined, and with the same indefinite result. There is every evidence, however, that conditions are steadily improving all over Canada. The proportion of positions to be filled does not show such a great discrepancy when compared with those seeking them as was the case even a year ago. One group of investigators has ventured the view that this will be the best year for employment that Canada has known since the war ended.

But to get back to the birth rate. Quebec, with 32.25, appears to be the leader among Canadian Provinces. Then comes New Brunswick where the rate is 27.1 per thousand. Ontario, according to another statement, has 22.6 per thousand. These figures are good enough to dispel a lot of the predictions of the pessimists who see the white race dying out on this as well as old world continents. A further comfort for them and others, who may be inclined to fits of melancholy fears that the white race will vanish from the face of the earth, is found in the statement that the lowest death rate in the world is in Saskatchewan, 6.8 per thousand. Think of the advertising possibilities that gives Saskatchewan where another national park has been created from a huge stretch of territory abounding in primitive forest glories, lakes with sandy beaches, fine streams and lovely haunts of game. All the folks who want to live to be a hundred years or more will be looking to Saskatchewan as their mecca.—Brantford Expositor.

CANADA AND THE EMPIRE.

At this time the thoughts of Canadians, in common with the thoughts of Britishers in all parts of the Empire, are of the Motherland and of the sister dominions. After the so-called "charter" granted at the Imperial conference, celebrations this year should be of a specially grateful character. What is the answer of Canada to be to the claims of the Empire, under the conditions of today? Are we to take a worthy share of the responsibilities, or are we to accept all the advantages and let others bear the heaviest part of the burden? It is good to take a pride in the Empire, to boast of our membership and to glory in the strength of the imperial commonwealth; but the Empire can not endure on mere praise; its growth, and very existence, depends upon the active co-operation of its component states in the work of development and in the task of defense. Great Britain is no longer able to carry out that task unassisted enthusiasm for the Empire must take the practical form of material contribution, if it is to be of any value. There must be a more effective effort to increase inter-imperial trade, as well as a more equitable distribution of the cost of imperial protection.

Canada is in the best position to help. We have ample room but the immigration problem must be handled with intelligent forethought. The determination can at least be made that this Dominion shall remain British, and that imperial considerations shall be put first. Modern marvels of science are bringing the dominions ever closer together, and distance is being effectively overcome; with the increased facilities for communication should come a solidarity of sentiment and a more complete understanding. There are varying problems, of course, but if the common purpose is kept steadily in view, the future of the Empire is assured. We must all learn to "think imperially."

Canada celebrates this year the Diamond Jubilee of Confederation, and will be visited by the Prince of Wales and the British premier. The Duke and Duchess of York's tour through Australia and New Zealand has been a splendid success. The royal family admirably fulfills its function of knitting the dominion together in a common sentiment of loyalty and affection. There is also the economic bond of mutual interest. Canada plays a worthy part in the promotion of inter-imperial trading in its great industrial exhibition held annually in Toronto, which is taking on more and more of an imperial character. Next year, Australia is to follow suit, with an "All-British" exhibition in Melbourne. Special efforts are being made to secure some of the exhibits shown at Toronto for the Australian fair, and in this way Canadian exhibitors will be given an opportunity of contributing to the upbuilding of inter-imperial trade. It must be remembered that the Empire is based on something more substantial than mere sentiment.—Hamilton Spectator.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Like many other things these days, Government control is coming in on the instalment plan.

Ireland never looked sweeter to any home coming exile of old Erin than it did to Capt. Lindbergh last Saturday.

There is some doubt as to what were the first words of The Flying Fool as he landed at Paris. Anyway they were not "Who won the war"?

The Provincial Board of Health has taken charge of the fight against the typhoid epidemic in Montreal. The city authorities were evidently powerless to control the situation.

Lindbergh is to be brought home on a United States naval destroyer. He will not have as fast a trip as on his previous crossing of the Atlantic, but he won't mind waiting a few days.

It took six days to make the world, and you can't change it in one.—Oshawa Reformer.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, May 26 (Canadian Press). — There was some demand from foreign buyers for grain in the Montreal market Tuesday and sales of odd loads of Manitoba Spring wheat on passage were made at an advance in prices of 1s 6d to 2s per quarter, but apart from this business on the whole was quiet. The trade in cash grain in the domestic market was also slow, but the undertone was stronger for oats and prices were generally higher.

On account of the continued strength in the cash wheat situation at Winnipeg, a much stronger feeling developed in the local market for Spring wheat grades of flour and prices were marked up 20c per barrel which makes a net rise for the month to date of 60c per barrel, but they the still 20c per barrel below this date last year. There was an improved demand from foreign buyers and as the prices bid were in line with some millers' views a moderate amount of business was done.

In sympathy with the above, the undertone to the market for Winter wheat flour was stronger, but no further change in prices was announced. The demand was somewhat limited and the volume of business was small.

There were no new developments in the market for millfeed, prices for all lines being about steady, but the volume of business was not large. The demand for rolled oats was limited, but the tone of the market was firm.

A steady feeling prevailed in the market for eggs and prices showed no important change. There was a fair demand from grocers and other dealers for supplies to meet actual wants and a moderate amount of business was done. The receipts were 3,690 cases.

There were no further developments in the local potato situation, the undertone being strong at the late advance in prices noted on account of the continued small supplies coming forward and the fact that stocks on spot were not sufficient to meet the demand. Sales of odd cars of Quebec White B grade were made at $2.50 to $2.60 per bag, and Reds at $2.10 to $2.30 per bag of 90 pounds in bulk, ex-track.

A stronger feeling developed in the local butter situation and prices scored an advance of ½c to ¾c per pound which was attributed to the fact that speculators have commenced to show more interest in the market at the present level. The receipts were 496 packages.

There was some demand for cheese from English importers, but the prices bid were entirely out of line with values here, and no business resulted, but there was some trading reported between houses. The receipts were 4,790 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, May 26 (Canadian Press)—An avalanche of selling overtook the grain markets yesterday after a wild new upturn. Much of the selling was to realize profits, but there was also speculative selling by traders who figured that advances of late had been too rapid. A sensational price bulge at Winnipeg was the chief new bullish incentive yesterday.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 1¼ to 2½c net lower, with corn 1¼ to 1⅝c down; oats ⅜c off to ¼c up, and provisions showing 7 to 60 cents decline.

Corn and oats swayed with wheat. Better weather, too, for corn planting was expected.

Provisions were responsive to the fact that hog values had declined to the lowest level since December, 1924.

BALDNESS AND BRAINS.

Many claim that the bald pate is a sign of intelligence, but others point to statistics to show that the intellectual giants of history have been those with luxuriant hair.

After a careful study of the problem, I am sure that there is no direct relation between the amount of hair and the amount of intelligence. There is no doubt, however, that the one with strong hair usually has more vital power, but this may either be used in the physical body or through the mind.

The circulation of blood to the hair roots is not the same as to the brain, and the scalp which has a poor blood supply may cover a brain with a good circulation. The skull separates the scalp from the brain, and one of the common causes of baldness is that the blood circulation just under the scalp is not as active as in other parts of the body. This is usually due to what is called a "tight scalp," and the bald man can not, as a rule, wiggle his scalp back and forth. If the blood supply to the scalp is not in good condition, or defective, the hair will not be nourished properly. Each hair grows very much the same as a young onion and requires the right amount of irrigation of blood to its roots if it is to grow into a strong hair.

Those with a tight scalp can save themselves from becoming bald if they will use some measure for increasing the scalp circulation. Tonics are of practically no value, but a good treatment may be given with the daily application of ice to the scalp. Hold the piece of ice to different places of the bald spot until the skin reacts and becomes red. Then massage with the finger-tips, rubbing in cocoanut or almond oil. Another good way to bring the blood into the scalp is to sunburn it with ultra-violet rays from sun-light or from an ultra-violet lamp. Don't waste time on guaranteed tonics as there is always a catch in it some place.

Some bald-headed men are so optimistic that they will buy one hair tonic after another, even from their bald-headed barber. I heard, the other day, of a man completely bald who always buys a brush and comb every time he buys a new guaranteed hair tonic. This is what I call "The Height of Optimism."

Systemic physical culture exercises will always help in increasing the general circulation and actually be a great help in supplying a better circulation to the scalp. It is also important to use all of the foods rich in silicon, which is the principal mineral used in growing hair, nails and bones. All of the greens are rich in silicon, and a plentiful supply may be obtained from real whole wheat grain.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

SPECIAL TRAINING CAMPS

By Dr. Frank Crane.

If you have made no arrangements for your boy's vacation this summer I would recommend taking up the subject of sending him to a Citizens' Training Camp.

You may not want your boy to be a soldier and you may be opposed to militarism, but this should not blind you to the fact that the army is the best training in the world for young people.

There the boy learns obedience and discipline, things that will stand him in good stead all through life.

His physical condition is well looked after and every care is taken that he should be trained in the manly arts that are the physical foundation for every kind of success.

The training camp will get the boy out of doors and that is what he needs.

The training camp is a mighty school of democracy. It teaches the young man that he is no better than anybody else, he has to toe the mark just like everybody does and he gets a correct notion of the importance of the nation.

There has been a good deal said and written about individualism and self-expression, but this does not do away with the importance of co-operation. It is necessary for one to learn how to get along with his fellows, to restrain himself and to exert his energies in the best way for the general good. He gets the idea drilled into him that the individual is of minor importance compared with the State, and he gets the right notion about his duties and obligations.

There is no higher sense of honor and personal integrity than that found among army officers, and it is good for a boy to associate during his formative years with these people.

Whatever other uses the army may have there is no doubt that it is the most admirably equipped for training people, and to use the army as a school for boys is to employ it in the most valuable way.

The Citizens' Training Camps are not strongholds of militarism, but they are the best developers of civilization, and too high praise cannot be accorded to their efforts.

WELCOME Y.P.L.

The Citizenship Department in Charge of Weekly Meeting of League.

WELCOME, May 26.—The weekly meeting of the Welcome Young People's League was held on Thursday evening. The meeting was in charge of the Citizenship Department under the leadership of Miss Violet McCann. The topic was "War," and her treatment of the subject was rather unique. Instead of having papers given she had prepared a number of questions on the topic. She gave one question to each member present. He was to answer the question and then give reasons for his opinion. The questions were ably answered and interesting discussions followed. The members all felt as if they had contributed in making the meeting a very interesting and enlightening one.

After the meeting the president, Mr. Ernest Bamsay, had charge of a baseball contest. There were about twenty-five questions to be answered, and each answer had to be connected with playing baseball. Prizes were given to the winners.

Next week, the social and literary department are planning to have a croquinole tournament, followed by refreshments.

Fell Off Wagon.

What might have been a very serious accident occurred this week when Helen Kelogg, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Kelogg, fell off a wagon and the wheels passed over her face. She was sitting on the wagon when it jolted and she was thrown off. Fortunately no bones were broken, nor was her face cut, but she was bruised quite badly.

Old Bell to Be Memento of Fire

OTTAWA, May 25.—In connection with the installation in the Parliament Tower of the great carillon, the first shipment of bells for which reached Ottawa on Monday, memory has turned again to the old bell which used to boom the hours over the House of Commons. This bell, after valiantly striking several times during the early stages of the fire that destroyed the Parliament Buildings in 1916, finally was silenced, and in the fall of the tower was considerably cracked and dented. It now lies ingloriously in the back yard of an old Government building on Wellington street, but the Public Works Department is considering a project to restore it to some degree of its former greatness. Eclipsed by the great carillon and disabled casualty of the war years, it cannot hope to attain its pristine glory, but it is proposed that it be placed on a stone pedestal somewhere in Parliament Hill or in the Clock Tower, with a suitable inscription to the effect that it is a relic of the former Parliament Buildings and a souvenir of the wartime conflagration that destroyed that noble pile.

Scout News and Notices

DELORO BOY SCOUT NEWS.

The first week-end camp was held on Saturday and Sunday about two miles east of Deloro, with five of the older Scouts and the Scoutmaster attending.

Camp was reached about 2.30 p.m and after a supply of dry wood had been stored away for the morning, and the rest of the equipment brought from Deloro, the shelter was covered over and the food and equipment stored inside just in time to miss a shower of rain, which lasted, off and on till dark, when it cleared up and stayed fine for the rest of the hike. A smudge was kept burning to keep the flies and mosquitoes away and a signal fire lit which could be seen in Deloro. Cedar boughs made a very soft bed and some piping hot tea for supper cheered any dampened spirits, and as all had brought a change of clothes everybody was warm and dry. The wind soon dried the rocks off and as soon as the shelter was straightened away for sleeping in a circle was formed round the fire and songs and stories passed the evening hours very nicely. Lights out came at ten o'clock and within a very short time nothing could be heard except an occasional slap at the odd mosquito.

Four-thirty saw everybody up and about with a dash to the creek for a wash and to warm up. During the morning a very clear trail was blazed from the Camp to Deloro, the hikers bringing back a fresh supply of water. The shelter has been remodelled slightly, to give a little more pitch to the roof, and the next trip should see a large section of it thatched and made waterproof. A fifteen-foot ladder was made and placed down the sloping cliff to the shelter and it makes it very easy to climb up to see the surrounding country.

Sunday proved to be a very warm day and started the summer's coat of tan on everyone.

Camp broke up at four in the afternoon, everyone reaching home tired but happy, the only casualties being plenty of scratches and fly bites.

In the patrol contest for the week, the Bull Patrol crept further ahead, and the Ram Patrol will need to put in some extra practice if they are to win out for the month of May,

SEEK $100,000,000 ESTATE.

That they have a right to a large share of an estate in Liverpool, valued at $100,000,000, has just been learned by a family in Linwood, N.Z. So hopeful are they that a father and son are now on the way to England to prove their claim. Those interested are John and Henry Tabley, civil servants. James Tabley, a tanner, and Mrs. M. Shaw, all of Linwood. The estate is said to have an income of $5,000,000 a year and dates back to the gift in 1335 of crown lands of Edward III to Gilbert Ford, ancestor of the Tableys. Information of their possible windfall came to the New Zealand people through the activities of a man named Horrodson, who in two years' investigation uncovered a claim against the Tabley estate.

MANXMEN PLAN TO BUILD TOWN FOR EMIGRANTS

Wish To Provide Place in Canada For Surplus Population.

TO BE SELF CONTAINED.

Artisans and Farmers Would Be Sent Out To Farm Colony.

TORONTO, Ont., May 26.—Intimation that plans are under consideration for the establishment in Canada of a big Manx settlement to take care of the excess population of the Isle of Man, was given yesterday by A. B. Crookall, Mayor of Douglas, and a member of the House of Keys, the Manx Legislative Assembly, who, with a party of sixteen of his fellow-countrymen, is making a tour of Ontario and Quebec as well as a number of United States cities, under the guidance of C. K. Howard Jr., steamship representative of the Canadian National Railways.

Advantages Explained

In outlining the proposed settlement Mayor Crookall stated that it would be agricultural purely, but that it would be self-contained, inasmuch as the plans called for the sending over of sufficient artisans and tradesmen to form a Manx community within itself. "I am aware that self-contained communities of this nature may not find favor in certain provinces" said the Mayor, "and that fault has been found on the grounds that such people do not readily assimilate It must be remembered, however, that in this particular case it is an entirely English community and the peculiar psychology of our people would respond more readily to a plan of this nature than that of any other. We Manxmen are practically all agriculturists but our land resources are limited. Therefore, each year there are more than 400 boys with a sound training in mixed farming who must seek elsewhere for a livelihood. There is no opening for them on the island, but being the people of a small island they are naturally timid of venturing out alone into the world, and by the means of such a community any scruples they might have would be overcome and they would make valuable settlers to whatever country they went. If necessary, I shall come myself and settle in the new community."

Going more into the details of the proposed plan, Mayor Crookall said that the idea called for the securing of a large tract of land, and at first a few families, accompanied by a number of the younger men, together with some artisans and a tradesmen or two would come to Canada, and while the artisans were building their homes, the others would clear the land. By this means a small Manx village would be created and this would gradually grow into a good-sized town as the eligible youth of Man joined them. The Mayor stressed the point that the settlement would be entirely agricultural in nature as only sufficient of the other classes would be permitted to come over to meet the requirements of the community.

Second Tour.

Last year, Mayor Crookall travelled Canada from coast to coast to look into the opportunities for the funding of the community, but he stated that as yet the plan was in the embryo and that no definite province had been decided upon. One reason for the tour of the leading Manxmen this year was so a number of them could see something of Canada and also to visit the various Manxmen in Ontario and Quebec, as well as Cleveland, where there is a large Manx settlement, with a view to securing their attendance at a grand re-union of Manxmen in the Isle of Man in June of this year. At that time the proposal to form the Manx colony in Canada will be formally placed before the convention, and if the scheme is adopted as anticipated, immediate steps will be taken with the Government to acquire the land and commence active operations in laying the basis for the colony.

The Manx party, which includes other members of the House of Keys, as well as prominent business men and newspaper proprietors, was welcomed to the city by Toronto Manxmen and made a tour of inspection, visiting the Parliament Buildings and being received by Mayor Foster.

The party left for Niagara Falls on the 2 o'clock Canadian National train and from there will go to Cleveland, returning subsequently to Montreal via Philadelphia, Washington, and New York. They will sail for the Isle of Man on the S.S. Albertic, returning in time for the opening of the World Manx Association. Mayor Crookall stated that more than 500 Manxmen would come from Canada and California, arrangements being made with the Canadian National Railway to operate special trains for their convenience to the port of sailing.

Could Not Sleep Heart and Nerves Were So Bad

Mr. Geo. Meek, Windsor, Ont., writes:—"I suffered with my heart and nerves and could not sleep at night for noises in my head. I managed to keep at my work somehow, until I began to have dizzy spells which got so bad I could not go to my work. I was afraid to go out any place, for very often I would stagger on my feet, and everything in front of me would turn black and fade away. While I was home sick a friend told me to take MILBURN'S HEART NERVE PILLS. I got four boxes and by the time I had used them the pains and noises in my head ceased and I was able to get a good night's rest. Although that was six years ago I have never been troubled with that complaint again."

Theatres

AT THE REGENT.

A NEW SCREEN STAR

George Jessel, star of "Private Izzy Murphy," the Warner picture, which comes to the Regent Theatre to-day is a descendant of Sir George Jessel of England, who was the Royal Counsellor and Master of the Rolls in Great Britain during the reign of Queen Victoria.

His own father was born in the United States and became a theatrical manager. He produced "La Belle Marie" 35 years ago at the old Star Theatre and the show had a run in many cities. It was written by him in collaboration with Hal Reid, father of Wallace Reid, motion picture star. He managed Agnes Herndon, "the Ethel Barrymore of her time," and Charles J. Richman.

His father died when young Jessel was 9 years old, and the boy went on the vaudeville stage. Prior to his screen debut in "Private Izzy Murphy" he had scored one of the biggest of Broadway hits as the star of "The Jazz Singer."

In "Private Izzy Murphy" he is supported by Patsy Ruth Miller, Vera Gordon and Nat Carr.

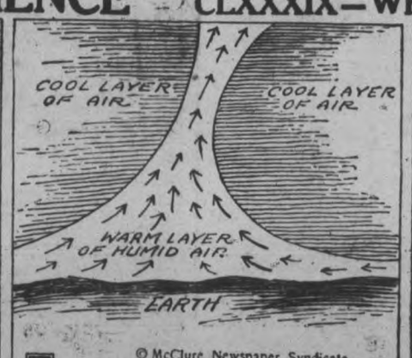
OUTLINE OF SCIENCE — CLXXXIX—What Causes the Tornado? — by MAX HAHN

SCIENCE HAS LEARNED SOME THINGS ABOUT THE TORNADO, BUT THE COMPLETE STORY REMAINS TO BE TOLD. WHEN THE HUMIDITY IS HIGH THE TORNADO IS MOST LIKELY TO APPEAR AND ITS FAVORITE SCENE OF RAMPAGE IS THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.



© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

IN A GENERAL WAY THE CAUSE OF THE TORNADO IS KNOWN. A ROARING SUCTION IS CREATED AS AN ATMOSPHERIC DISTURBANCE SETS A CURRENT OF WARM AIR SWIRLING UP THROUGH THE LAYER OF COOL AIR.

TORNADOES USUALLY TRAVEL FROM SOUTHWEST TO NORTHEAST. BECAUSE OF THIS AND THE FACT THAT THEIR DIAMETER ORDINARILY IS SMALL, THE PERSON WHO SEES AN APPROACHING TORNADO MAY SAVE HIMSELF IF HE RUNS NORTHWEST

IN SOME INSTANCES TORNADOES ARE BELIEVED TO TRAVEL 500 MILES AN HOUR, BUT ORDINARILY THEIR VELOCITY IS LESS THAN 50. LUCKILY THE TORNADO DEVASTATION AREA USUALLY IS LESS THAN 25 MILES IN LENGTH.

OUTLINE OF SCIENCE — CXC—Do Battles Cause Rain? — by MAX HAHN

DO YOU REMEMBER HOW EVERY RAIN DURING THE WORLD WAR WAS BLAMED ON THE BOOM OF THE CANNON OR THE DUST FROM GUNPOWDER? SCIENTISTS WHO HAVE BEEN INVESTIGATING THE SUBJECT DENY THAT BATTLES CAUSE RAIN.

THE WEATHER STUDENTS SAY RAIN FALLS EVERY FEW DAYS ANYWAY IN THE REGIONS WHERE THE BIG BATTLES ARE FOUGHT. NATURALLY THE GUNS ARE HAULED INTO POSITION AND TROOPS MOVED IN FAIR WEATHER IF POSSIBLE BECAUSE THAT IS THE EASIEST TIME.

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

THEN AS SOON AS THE PREPARATIONS HAVE BEEN COMPLETED, IF THE WEATHER STILL FAVORS, THE ATTACK IS STARTED. THE BIG GUNS ARE FIRED, THE BARRAGE LAID AND THE BOYS GO OVER THE TOP.

USUALLY THE REGULAR RAIN, CAUSED BY METEOROLOGICAL CONDITIONS INDEPENDENT OF THE BATTLE, BEGINS TO FALL BY THE TIME THE OFFENSIVE HAS BEEN UNDER WAY FOR A DAY OR TWO. HENCE IT IS THE ORDINARY RAIN AND NOT ONE CAUSED BY THE SHELLING THAT SPLASHES ON THE BATTLEFIELD.

✓Kotex discards as easily as tissue. Thus no laundry, no embarrassment of disposal.

Being 5 times as absorbent as ordinary cotton "pads," it permits lightest gowns and frocks without slightest fear. Dance, motor, go about for hours without a moment's doubt. And it deodorizes; thus ending all fear of offense.

Obtain at any store without embarrassment simply by saying "Kotex."

Try today and you'll never again risk the uncertainty of old ways.

W. I. MEETING.

Annual Meeting of Roseneath Branch Held at Fenella.

ROSENEATH, May 26.—The annual summer meeting of the Roseneath branch of the Woman's Institute was held in the Town Hall at Fenella on Thursday afternoon, May 19th and the large attendance listened to a very interesting and instructive address given by Miss Elizabeth McGee of Chesterville, Ontario.

The meeting opened at 2.30 p.m. The president of Fenella branch, Mrs. William Rogers in the chair, who opened the meeting with a few well-chosen remarks and expressed her appreciation on behalf of Fenella Institute for the good "turn out" from Roseneath. The programme opened with all singing, "The Maple Leaf" followed by a reading by Miss Ruby Herrington, entitled, "The Modern Belle," duet by Mrs. W. J. Jibb and Mrs. Frankie Curtis with Mrs. V. Brenton at the organ. A paper on "Thoughts on Motherhood," was given by Mrs. Albert Nill and was exceedingly beneficial and a good lesson to be taken from it. Then Miss McGee took the platform, her subject being, "Woman, Her Place and Her Power," saying woman's first place is the home where all should be peace, love and happiness. No matter what riches we have it does not count unless our soul is right. Never have we faced a time for opportunity more than the present time. Power has been given to woman by the franchise, so why not use our influence in the proper way. The Woman's Institute have 30,000 members, therefore let us go together, work together and make our country the very best place to live in. Miss McGee has been active in institute work in Eastern Ontario for a number of years, lending much appreciated support at the annual conventions and her visit to our local branch was very much appreciated.

The programme continued in community singing, "Way Down Upon The Swanee River" and "My Old Kentucky Home."

Mrs. Lottie Nichol, president of Roseneath Institute addressed the gathering with a few favorable remarks and thanked the Fenella Institute for the invitation from the Roseneath branch. "God Save the King" was then sung and a delicious and bountiful lunch was served, consisting of salads, devilled eggs, cakes, cookies, pie, tarts, sandwiches, etc., and a dessert of ice cream, making the afternoon one of profit and pleasure.

TRENT RIVER, May 26.—Victoria Day passed off as usual with the exception of high winds accompanied by a drizzly rainfall which continued throughout the day, and on through the night. A high speed tourist motor launch passed through during the afternoon, en route up the canal.

At "Whitehall Gardens," music was supplied by Townsend's Florida orchestra, of seven pieces, from Toronto, which played in splendid time for the popular dances. The floor was in excellent condition, and there was a large attendance.

"Coral Gables Casino" was the attraction at the south entrance to Trent River, under the management of Harold E. Burgess, with music supplied by Varsity Entertainers, of five pieces from Toronto. An exhibition of fireworks was given throughout the evening also "sparkers" were illuminated which made a brilliant effect when carried by those who were dancing. The crowd consisted of many from Campbellford, Havelock, Norwood, Hastings and Warkworth. The grand opening of this pavilion takes place on June 3rd, when the same orchestra returns for the season. ECZEMA ITCHED A GREAT DEAL

Over Face, Neck and Hands. Cuticura Heals.

"Eczema broke out all over my face, neck and hands. It was in blisters and itched a great deal. My skin was awful sore and red, and sometimes the blisters would break and water would come from them. I was not able to do my work, and lost a lot of sleep. The trouble lasted over six months.

"I tried many different remedies without success. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after using four cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed." (Signed) Miss Laura J. Brine, Botsford Portage, N. B.

SAFEGUARDING MILK
BY PASTEURIZATION

(Report of M.H.O., Toronto, Continued from Saturday.)

Professor Winslow in 1915, in referring to the objections raised to pasteurized milk, on account of its digestibility having been affected, states: "This seems again to be an absolutely unfounded supposition. Within the last five years the milk supply of New York, Boston and Chicago has been transformed from 90 per cent. raw milk supply to 90 per cent. pasteurized milk, with no recorded increases in nutritional diseases of children. Even if scurvy were caused by pasteurized milk, it could at once be cured by adding orange juice to the diet, but it is not so caused."

In a careful study carried on in Washington 351 babies fed on raw milk gained on an average of .4030 oz. a day, while 557 babies fed on pasteurized milk gained on an average of .4077 oz. One hundred and ten babies were fed for part of the time on pasteurized milk. During the raw milk period they gained on an average of .4312 oz. and during the pasteurized milk period an average of .4607 oz. Some of the leading authorities in England and the United States are now even advocating the use of boiled milk, the digestibility of which one might possibly suspect as being unfavorably affected.

Dr. Charles E. North, Director of the North Public Health Bureau, in a report dated 1912, in referring to the digestibility of pasteurized milk, gives the following practical evidence:

"Fortunately New York City has for several years carried out a gigantic experiment in infant feeding at its fifty-five municipal milk depots, where babies are fed the year round, to the number of 18,000 daily in summer and 10,000 daily in winter. For three years all of this milk has been scientifically pasteurized. Records have shown that the babies have gained weight; have kept well; have shown no signs of rickets or scurvy, and in every way gave evidence that pasteurized milk is not inferior in food value or digestibility to raw milk.

Numerous other instances could be quoted of the unchanged nutritive value of pasteurized milk, but the foregoing are more than sufficient to demonstrate this fact.

Goodyear Announces the new balloon

Far in advance of any previous tire. It is the world's greatest tire

AN entirely new Goodyear Balloon—the greatest tire ever offered.

Exclusively Goodyear's—another Goodyear triumph!

Its first big advantage is long, slow, even wear.

The second big advantage is traction. Safe and sure-footed, the sharp-edged, diamond-shaped blocks in the tread's centre seize and grip and hang on.

The third advantage is appearance. This tire will grace the highest-priced car and improve the appearance of the lowest-priced car.

These are major benefits—made possible only by this advanced new-type semi-flat tread bristling with road-gripping edges and by the amazingly durable and elastic Supertwist Cords of which the casing is made.

Supertwist Cords are 61% more elastic than old-style cords. They give the tire longer life because they stretch and recover instead of breaking under shocks. (See chart for difference in stretch.)

Selected from more than 80 separate and individual designs—this tire has been tested for a year under the harshest kind of conditions. We proved its traction, its wear and its strength for 5,400,000 tire miles on Goodyear's test fleet before releasing it to you.

The new Goodyear, THE WORLD'S GREATEST TIRE, is the crowning achievement of the tire company:

—which has never been halted in its onward sweep and which in recent years has steadily increased its pace.

—which every year, for the last ten years, has made and sold more tires than any other company in Canada.

—which operates its own cord mills and direct branches, to the end of delivering to the tire user the greatest possible value for his money.

These facts explain why the New All-Weather Tread Goodyear Balloon is The World's Greatest Tire.

This great tire is available from all Goodyear Selected Dealers. It is the newest reason why more people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind.

Confederation and After— Sixty Year Of Progress

THE CHALLENGE OF THE NORTH. SIXTY YEARS OF PARLIAMENT.

In the structure of Confederation, the parliament of Canada was the keystone. It was the one erection of the Fathers of North America Act about which the walls of the nation were erected. The Act passed the British House of Commons in the early spring of 1867. On March 29, 1867, it was given Royal Assent in the House of Lords. By proclamation it came into effect on July 1, and on November 6, of that year, the first session of the first parliament was opened by Rt. Hon. Viscount Monck, the first Governor General of the Dominion.

The first session of the first parliament lasted until May, 1868. The parliament under the premiership of Sir John A. Macdonald, lived through five sessions, dissolution being granted by the Earl of Dufferin, the Governor General, in 1872. Fifteen parliaments have been summoned and dissolved since July 1, 1867, and 1927 finds Canada between the first and second sessions of the sixteenth parliament.

Fourteen ministries have held office under the Crown. Of these eight have been Conservative, two have been Unionist and four have been Liberal. Ten citizens of Canada have held the high office of Prime Minister and thirteen Governors General have represented three reigning sovereigns in this Dominion since July, 1867.

Four times during these sixty years Canadians have stood to arms and on otw of these occasions troops have fought abroad. These occasions were the Fenian Raids, the Northwest Rebellion, the South African War, and the Great War of Europe. With these interludes the story of the Dominion has been a domestic one. It has been a story of immigration, industry and administration, and over all three phases the parliaments of Canada have exercised the dominant influence.

Quite apart from considerations parties and the rise and fall of politi movements the chronicle of Confederation is without a parallel in the history of democratic government. Never before has such a mere handful of people occupied, administered and prospered on such a vast area of country. Even now—sixty years after—the world can look to Canada for lessons in administration. With a population not much greater than some of the cities of the world but spread over half a continent democracy functions in all its branches and the citizens prosper. It is not only a tribute to administrative ability, it is a tribute to British parliamentary government, which has been proven equally adaptable in the compact little crowded islands over the seas and in this great sprawling nation of British North America.

To the men who have led the governments of Canada more than to any others belong the credit for the administrative achievements of the six decades. The Ministries of the past sixty years are as follows:

Rt. Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald (July, 1867-November, 1873).
Hon. Alexander Mackenzie (November, 1873-October, 1878).
Rt. Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald (October, 1878-June, 1891).
Hon. Sir J. J. Abbott (June, 1891-December, 1892).
Hon. Sir John Thompson (December, 1892-December, 1894).
Hon. Sir M. Bowell (December, 1894-April, 1896).
Hon. Sir Charles Tupper (May, 1896-July, 1896.
Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier (July, 1896-October, 1911).
Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Borden (October, 1911-October, 1917).
Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Borden (October, 1917-July, 1920).
Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen (July, 1920-December, 1921).
Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King (December, 1921-June, 1926).

AVIATORS LAND IN SOFT GROUND

Forced Landing Near London Damages the Plane Slightly.

MEN ARE UNHURT.

LONDON, Ont., May 6 — An aviator and his mechanic, said to be from Toronto, but whose names cannot be secured, escaped injury when their two-seater plane came to a forced landing in a ploughed field near Hyde Park on Monday night. The machine turned over in the soft ground, snapping the propeller and damaging the wings. Other parts of the machine are believed to be practically undamaged. Parts are being brought from Cleveland, Ohio, and it is expected that repairs will be made by Friday.

The men are reported to have left Flint, Michigan, on Monday afternoon. A heavy rain storm and some wind were encountered which finally forced the machine to earth. Although the men stayed overnight at the farm house of Squire J. C. Wallace, fourth concession of London township, and about three miles west of Hyde Park, they did not give their names, although the driver of the machine is said to have related war experiences and claimed to have been shot down seven times in France. The men left for Toronto yesterday.

WALES' MARRIAGE AGAIN DISCUSSED

Visit of Spanish Princess To London With Parents Causes Rumors.

LONDON, May 26 (United Press). —Gossip regarding the matrimonial plans of the Prince of Wales was revived to-day by the report that Princess Beatrice, eldest daughter of the King and Queen of Spain, would accompany her parents when the latter visited London next month. Wales was a guest of the royal family at Madrid recently. Beatrice will be 18 years old on June 22, and Wales will be 33 the next day.

Against the possibility of Beatrice ever becoming the Princess of Wales, the wise acres to-day raised the obstacle of her religion. The Spanish royal family is Catholic, and whenever the names of Beatrice and the Prince have been linked, this fact alone has been sufficient to cause well-grounded doubt.

Despatch Says Arrival of Pinedo at Fayal Not Definitely Known.

ROME, May 26.—(Canadian Press.) —The despatch to Stefani News Agency from Horta, Island of Fayal, in the Azores, to-day say the report that Commander De Pinedo's plane has arrived here, is not confirmed.

All despatches received in Rome this morning on the subject tended to modify the previous information that Pinedo's plane was near Fayal. To-day's advices concurred in affirming that the seaplane was still being towed toward the Azores by a three-masted Portuguese vessel.

Angles Trisected By School Teacher

SEATTLE, Wash., May 26.—Successful trisection of all angles, as problems that has baffled mathematicians for 2,000 years is claimed by Bertice C. Hastings, 62-year-old Seattle high school instructor.

Trisection of angles is one of the three geometric problems unsolved by mathematicians.

The problem—which was studied by Archimedes, the Greek philosopher, as early as 250 B.C. and by Rene Descartes and Sir Isaac Newton in the 17th century, was solved by Hastings with the aid of a ruler, a compass and certain established geometric principles, he told inquirers.

Squares are constructed within the angle to be trisected, he explained, but the rest of the process is too technical for comprehension by the layman without the use of extensive diagrams.

Engineers, designers and draughtsmen, Hastings declared, will find the discovery to have practical application of great value.

Celebrate July 1 in Peterboro'

ANIMAL HOME IS CONSIDERED

Humane Society Will Try to Get Site for Building.

REPORT OF CONVENTION

A regular executive meeting of the Humane society was held in the Chamber of Commerce on Thursday evening. The president, Dr. Thomas Johnston, presided.

The new animal home was again discussed and it was decided that the proposed building be erected on a city lot, if such lot could be obtained from the city.

A committee, composed of Mrs. R. H. Parsons, J. Skinner, D. C. Grant, F. H. Dawson, and J. E. Robbins, was appointed to make arrangements to take part in the big parade to be held in Peterboro', July 1.

The inspector's report showed good work done during the last month. Complaints investigated at Campbellford, Cavan, Dummer and Stirling stockyards, stables and tie-up places were inspected.

As the secretary was a delegate to the convention of the Ontario S. P. C. A., held in Hamilton, May 6, a report of the convention was read as follows:

The second annual convention of the Ontario S. P. C. A. was held in the Royal Connaught hotel, Hamilton, Friday, May 6, 1927. The convention opened with the president, the Bishop of Toronto, presiding. The general manager J. M. Wilson, gave a report of general activities of all the affiliated societies throughout the province during the year, and he was glad to report that a number of new societies had been organized. Mr. Wilson gave full explanation of the lethal box now used at headquarters for the humane destruction of all small animals. He reported that The Humane Pleader had now a circulation of 8,000 and urged that it was the duty of every member to subscribe for this periodical. The new member's pin was introduced to take the place of the old one, and has been adopted from coast to coast.

Mr. Wilson also reported on starvation of stock, the steel trap, the abuse of horses in the lumber camps and the docking of horses. Each of these subjects was discussed by the convention. Dr. Fowler, V. S., and president of the Guelph society, stated that starvation was very prevalent and one of the worst cruelties. Nineteen hundred and twenty-six, being a wet year, some crops were not harvested, a long winter, and no amount of food prepared, and, unless farmers were good managers, the food supply ran out and, in most instances, farmers were not in a position to buy with the result that stock suffered, and the next summer is gone before they are in condition again. He also said that it takes a certain amount of food to keep an animal alive and extra food to keep it in good condition. He suggested that in some way we try to educate these farmers by having an article written for agricultural magazines.

At this time in the convention a committee, composed of Mr. Martin, J. J. Kelso, Toronto; Miss Marshall Saunders, Toronto, and Mrs. T. W. Rutherford, Galt, were appointed to form resolutions—same to be submitted to convention for consideration after the luncheon.

Miss Harrison, school teacher in Toronto, gave a report of her work among the children in her own school. She said: "The hope lies in the children, and teachers are an effect for good or evil. If we get the children, we'll get the parents." Miss Harrison has 400 children in her school as members of the junior society. Instead of asking the Board of Education to assist, she approached the different teachers—composition, literature, singing, art and mathematics, asking them to occasionally use some subject pertaining to animals instead of what they were in the habit of using. She said the teachers are interested if only approached.

Dr. Fowler then gave an address, first speaking of the abuse of horses in the lumber camps where he had visited. There was no consideration for sores of any kind. The horses suffer and are kept working. He said that an inspector should visit these camps, and that he should be a husky one. He then spoke o the awful cruelty of docking horses' tails and cropping dogs' ears. Some horses have been docked with a hatchet, some with a chisel, and no anesthetic. He explained about the nerves of the tail and how they affect the spine, also how the mane on the horse's neck keeps flies off by the shaking of the horse's head, and the muscles of the shoulders twitch to shake off the flies and the tail used to keep flies off the stomach and hips—making it a very necessary defence. Dr. Fowler stated the American Kennel club had taken the stand against dog-cropping, and after 1928 no cropped dog may compete for prizes. It was felt that something like this should be done regarding docking.

Before retiring to the banquet hall for luncheon, Mr. Scholfield, president, Toronto Humane society, gave a short address of welcome.

After luncheon the delegates remained in the banquet hall; the resolution committee retired to form their resolutions and the convention continued. Mr. Geo. Coppley, ex-mayor of Hamilton and chairman of the Ontario executive, opened the session by a short address, after which he called upon the mayor of Hamilton for an address of welcome.

The Bishop then introduced the afternoon speaker, Canon Shatford, of Montreal. Canon Shatford commenced his address by saying that he first became interested in humane work 20 years ago in Montreal. While canvassing for his diocese he visited a wealthy man, who would give no donation because the clergy took no stand regarding humane work. However, before leaving him Canon Shatford agreed to give an annual humane sermon for every $50 the gentleman would give. He donated $200, so a humane sermon was preached once a year for four years. Canon Shatford then sent for humane literature and became very interested, always availing himself of the opportunity to lift his voice for the animals. He said: "There is no curse like cruelty. Cruelty animals is the last word in cruelty—animals are so defenceless and not adequately protected—we want to eradicate cruelty in any form when such tremendous service is given to mankind by the animals. All through humanity they are performing service. Cruelty is practised innocently, for instance. Sweetbreads are secured through cruelty and it ought to be our business to know how these things are obtained. Ignorance is no excuse as far as practice on animals is concerned. We should refuse to share in products secured through cruelty and pain and take our pledge that we will not tolerate cruelty to make us comfortable.

"We must also get rid of the idea that animal creation is dumb. They have a speech of their own. We must correct that idea that animals are not as sensitive to pain as humans. Their hearing is more acute, smell more keen, and sight is sharper. Any person who has any sympathy will shudder at fish being tossed from the water and left to die on the shore instead of being killed. Is there anything that can take the place of the fidelity of a dog—our greatest friend—sensitive to all emotions? Science can not truly advance on cruelty. Two of our Commandments have regard to animals. We must avoid fanaticism and exaggeration and be careful of our accusations of vivisection. Base all arguments on solid facts. Begin our work with the young. Old people are solid, set and conservative. Give the young an object-lesson occasionally. May the time come when the inventions of the devil for the suffering of animals will be a thing of the past and placed on exhibition, such as, spurs, whips, checkreins, snares, steel traps, etc."

The speaker then made a suggestion that each member push the sale of the member's pins and the wearing of it. We must set our faces against the dog derby, bull-fighting, rodeo and performing animals.

The resolution committee then submitted their resolutions, which were adopted.

Delegates were present from Sarnia, Brantford, Galt, Preston, Kitchener, Guelph, Stratford, St. Marys, Orillia, Toronto, Welland, Peterborough. The next annual meeting and convention will be held in May, 1928.

Lindbergh Settles Dispute on Words

PARIS, May 25 (Canadian Press). — "I am Charles Lindbergh."

These were the first words of Charles Lindbergh as he landed at Le Bourget last Saturday night. Because of an animated discussion as to his exact words, which some said were "So this is Paris," and others "Here I am, I have done it," the managing editor of "Le Matin" to-day questioned Lindbergh on the matter.

"Why did you say 'I am Charles Lindbergh'?" asked the editor.

"I was afraid they might think I was somebody else," replied the famous flier.

THE STORY OF QUALITY WITH CARNATION BEGINS the COW

A QUARTER of a century in the milk business has taught us that milk quality must begin with the cow.

And so the Carnation Milk Farms, with their world-famous herds of Holstein cattle, seek to encourage and provide better dairy stock.

But Carnation does not stop at "better cows". Carnation seeks "better farms"—and the Carnation Field Force spends its time inspecting farms and educating farmers. Carnation seeks "better methods"—and the Carnation Condenseries are models to which the whole world looks for newest thoughts in the handling of milk.

Safety, purity, uniformity and double-richness—these are yours for the price of a tin of Carnation milk. Use Carnation for cooking, to secure better results and in place of cream at one-third cream's cost. Order from your grocer several tins or a case of 48 tins.

Uncle Wiggily

To-day's Bed time Story.

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND BULLY'S BOAT.

Copyright, 1927, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Uncle Wiggily, could you please come out to the duck pond with me for a little while?" croaked Bully No Tail, the frog boy, to the pink-nosed rabbit gentleman one morning.

"Why, Bully, is anything the matter?" asked Mr. Longears, for he could see that the little green frog chap was quite excited. "Bawly hasn't fallen in the pond; has he?"

Then Uncle Wiggily laughed, for the moment he had forgotten that it wouldn't harm Bully or Bawly in the least to fall in the water. They could swim as well as a gold fish.

"Oh, no, Bawly hasn't fallen in," croaked Bully. "Nobody has fallen in," he added. "Nothing like that has happened. I just want you to come down to the pond to see the new boat I have made."

Hurray!' croaked Bully.

"It will give me pleasure to do that," answered Mr. Longears politely. "And if you want me to go sailing in your new boat that will please me also."

"Oh, my boat isn't large enough for you to get in, or me either!" chuckled Bully with a croaking laugh. "It's just a little toy boat I made out of a match box with a little paper sail. But it looks fine and you should see it scoot along when the wind blows it!"

"I'm excited already!" said Uncle Wiggily, for he always took an interest in what the animal boys and girls did who lived near his hollow stump bungalow.

"Come along to the pond, then," invited Bully and soon he and the rabbit gentleman were at the water's edge.

Floating near shore was a cute little boat made of a match box, with a paper sail. It was such a tiny boat that one of Uncle Wiggily's ears would have filled it completely, and had Bully put one of his paws on board the craft would have sunk.

"But it sails fine with a few little pebbles in it!" croaked the frog boy.

He loaded the match box boat with a cargo of tiny stones and gently shoved it out toward the middle of the pond. The wind blew on the paper sail and away went the little vessel.

"Hurray!" croaked Bully.

"Hurrah!" echoed Uncle Wiggily.

"I'm going to get my brother Bawley so he can help me have fun with my boat," said the frog boy as the little ship sailed around in a circle and came back whence it had started. "You may play with my boat until I come back, Uncle Wiggily," he added generously.

"Oh, thank you!" chuckled Mr. Longears and he was too polite to tell Bully that, really, he felt a bit too old to play with a toy made from a match box and a bit of paper. But Bully did not stop to listen to anything. Away he hopped through the woods to find his brother Bawly.

Left alone beside the pond, Uncle Wiggily watched the frog's little ship floating in a tiny bay. Mr. Longears was about to take a nap while waiting for the frog boys to return when, all of a sudden, a little voice said:

"Oh, I don't know how I am ever going to get there in time. It is so far to crawl all the way around the pond. It will take me almost a week and by that time anything may happen!"

"Ha! This sounds like trouble!" thought Uncle Wiggily, sitting up straight. He saw two ant ladies crawling over the leaves. They looked very much worried and when Uncle Wiggily asked them the cause of their trouble he larger ant replied:

"Oh, my sister Jemmina is ill! She lives across the pond, on the other shore. My cousin and I want to get to her, but it is such a long way to crawl we may never get there."

"And we can't swim across the pond," added the cousin ant.

"Why not go in a boat?" asked the rabbit.

"Where could we get a boat?" asked the ant whose sister was ill.

"Here is a boat all ready for you!" cried Uncle Wiggily, pointing to Bully's. "I'll take out the stones and put you on board. Then you may sail across the pond to see your sick sister."

"But I can't sail a boat!" cried the worried ant.

"I'll sail it for them!" offered an early June Bug who buzzed along just then. "I used to be a sailor. I'll sail the match box boat."

"Oh, joy!" sighed the worried ant ladies. So they got on board. The June Bug sailed them across the pond and they arrived in time to see the sick ant get well. And the June Bug sailed the boat back in time for Bully and Bawly to play with it.

Had Salt Rheum All Over Her Hands

Mrs. Herbert J. Mason, Grand Falls, N.B., writes:—"I had salt rheum all over my hands and especially between my fingers. It got so bad it was impossible for me to put them in water or do my housework. After trying many medicines and salves, that did me no good, I heard of being so wonderful, and after taking three bottles I am entirely relieved of my trouble. I am sure I can't recommend B.B.B. too highly to those who have salt rheum like I had."

THE HOME GARDEN

Starting Perennials.

The least expensive way to start a large bed of perennials is to use seed. If put in fairly early, some bloom may often be obtained the first year, although early blooming has a tendency to weaken the plant, and should, therefore, not be encouraged excessively. Spring planting gives the best results with the seed going in from May until the first week in July. Care must be exercised in watering of bed containing fine perennials or other seeds. A heavy spray will wash these out. It is a good plan to spread a piece of burlap or coarse cloth, such as is used in potato bags, over the bed before turning on the hose. This may be left on until the young plants come through the soil. The perennials should be left in this nursery bed until next spring, when they can be transplanted to their permanent positions.

Gladiolus Culture.

The main planting of Gladiolus can go in now. This flower will bloom in from fifty to ninety days, depending on the variety, and, therefore, if a long season of flowering is desired, the planting should be spread out. The Gladiolus will grow in any soil, but prefers a rich mellow loam properly drained. Plenty of moisture and sunshine, preferably filtered through light tree growth during the heat of the day is necessary for the best results. In other words, it is advisable to plant where a few trees south of the bed will shade the flowers around noon. It is well to change the site of the Gladiolus bed every season to prevent injury from fungus diseases, some of which are becoming very common. In sandy soil the bulbs should be planted four inches deep, but only half this depth in heavy clay. When planted in clumps for decorative effect, space about eight inches apart, but where grown for cut flowers one may plant four inches apart in rows in the vegetable garden. Dig the soil to a good depth, plant the bulbs, and cultivate frequently until the plants make this impossible. When the spikes begin to appear, nitrate of soda at the rate of about one ounce per square yard can be used every two or three weeks to hurry the plants along. In very hot weather, water well at night or early morning, but late in the day during a cold spell

Dahlias.

Throughout most of Ontario the best time to plant Dahlias is from the last week in May until the second week in June. The best soil is sandy, well drained, deeply tilled and generously fertilized. As this plant will grow to a height of about four feet, it is necessary to space about the same distance apart. The tubers should be placed on their sides with the buds pointing upwards in holes six inches deep. Close to this drive a stake to which the plant is tied as it grows up. Nip off all but one or two side shoots where large flowers are desired.

In the Vegetable Garden.

A second or third planting of vegetables such as spinach, lettuce, onions, beets and carrots can go in now. Among the older rows which are well established, one must cultivate and thin if the stuff is to be kept growing quickly. A little nitrate of soda every ten days will be found a wonderful help to keep the garden green and growing. If convenient, it is also advisable to give a thorough soaking with water every three or four days, if the weather is dry. In watering, always remember both with flowers and vegetables that one thorough weekly soaking is worth a dozen daily sprinklings. After this watering or a rain, get out the hoe and loosen up the top soil so that the moisture may be conserved.

The side saddle again is becoming popular among English women.

Bobby Jones, golfer, has won 120 cups, but the only one he prizes most is his first, only three inches high, won when he was six years old.

MOTORISTS URGED TO SAVE FLOWERS

Official of Motor League Appeals Against Uprooting Flowers and Leaving Picnic Litter.

"What a pity it is that in this season when roadside flowers and blossoms add charm to the lure of the road, many motorists and also non-motorists will persist in mutilating shrubs and trees and rooting up wild flowers and ferns. Because of the depredations of these vandals certain wild flowers are being exterminated. We have all seen tonneaus crowded and even running boards laden with miscellaneous assortments of branches, blossoms and other blooms, ferns and plants and even small trees and shrubs ripped out by the roots. We have seen many delicate wild-flowers wilted and trampled under foot on the floor boards of cars, cast off by the roadside or relegated to garbage pails. They had helped make our highways and sylvan retreats beautiful, and their removal is to be regretted."

"We have appealed to all motorists not to destroy the flora and to do their bit towards discouraging this destruction just as we have appealed them to scrupulously respect property rights, to leave the places at which they picnic as free from refuse as they would desire others to leave them and never leave bottles, broken glass or cans on the shore or in creek, stream, river, pool, pond or lake. It is the work of but a very few minutes to gather up the garbage and other refuse of a picnic or camp, and if a suitable receptacle is not at hand to wrap it up, place it in the car and, on arrival home, put it in the garbage container. Picnicers and campers, needless to say, should see to it that fires are entirely extinguished. We occasionally have heard some doubt expressed as to whether a carelessly tossed away cigaret or cigar butt or a lighted match ever started a fire in the woods. Let me assure you that I have seen these things start fires in the bush as I have seen apparently dead-out-camp-fires fanned into flame by a breeze, long after they were deemed out by campers. Ignited dry humus will smoulder like punk, for hours."

"If all Canadian motorists were as careless of the rights and privileges of others as are members of the thoughtless or selfish minority our highways and byways would lose much of their beauty and charm and rural motoring would be much less worth while."

Medical authorities recognize that it is a distinct advantage to health to be ten or twenty pounds overweight between the ages of 20 and 25. Sub-normal weight is more healthful later in life.

This War memorial stands in Canadian Pacific Stations in Montreal (Windsor Station), in Winnipeg, in Vancouver.

THE founders of the Canadian Pacific Railway well knew that the road which they planned would be not merely a great nation-building force in time of peace, but a powerful engine of defence in the Empire's day of need. Their faith was more than vindicated in 1914-18.

At the first rumors of war, the resources of the Canadian Pacific Railway were immediately turned over to the defenders of liberty and the Empire.

Both Atlantic and Pacific fleets co-operated with the transcontinental railway, its rolling stock, its shops, its terminal elevators and all its varied mechanism, for moving supplies.

Through its connections with United States Railways, and with the asset of its experienced personnel, the Canadian Pacific became at once a powerful auxiliary of the Allies' War Machine.

On the sea, the Company had special opportunities of service. Perhaps no more romantic story is to be found in naval annals than that of the Empress of Russia and her exploits on the Seven Seas. The Company's ships transported safely overseas from 1914 to 1918 more than 14,000,000 tons of supplies.

The total number of the Company's employees joining the army was 10,187. The Canadian Pacific allowed six months' full pay to each employee voluntarily enlisting, and let it be known that such men would be taken back into the service on their return.

All troop trains were handled with a skill which the military authorities characterized as "truly amazing." At all times the entire organization of the Railway was at the disposal of the Government.

Returned soldiers taken into employment up to the end of 1920 numbered 18,000 men, of whom more than 11,000 were in addition to the former employees who came back into the service.

Friday, May 27, 1927.

(Copyright, 1927, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

For good luck one should push affairs in the early morning. According to astrology, the later hours are subject to adverse planetary influences.

Merchandizing and banking are well directed in the morning and there is a sign indicating much activity next month.

This is read as a favorable date for signing contracts, especially if they be of a commercial character.

Teachers and heads of colleges have the best possible direction of the stars and should benefit in the next few weeks.

Large endowments for educational institutions and increase of salaries for professors are prognosticated.

Many new methods will be introduced into classrooms and science will provide inventions that greatly facilitate the acquiring of knowledge.

Women are subject to sinister sway to-day and will be wise to follow beaten paths, adjuring flirtations or romance of any sort.

This is not an auspicious rule for theatres and places of amusement. Audiences may dwindle or may be critical.

Again radical changes in fashions and increase in the cost of clothing are indicated.

There is a sign that gives promise of tremendous increase of American trade in the Mediterranean ports.

Storms on the Great Lakes may be extraordinarily severe this summer when freakish weather is to be expected in all parts of the country.

Texas is to furnish some sort of a sensation next month, unless the seers be wrong in their reading of the stars.

Persons whose birthdate it is should avoid all unnecessary recreation involving waste of time and money.

Children born on this day probably will be fond of sports and will be exceedingly good company, amusing and cheerful.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

By four o'clock Stephen Churchill had led Cherry, in his amazing direct examination, through a long and utterly frank recital of her adventure with Albert Ettleson, and through the events of that evening which had broken her spirit to the point where she had, the next day, accepted Ralph Cluny's offer of marriage. Jim Lane had broken into a cold sweat of agony as his daughter had told, without dramatics, of his whipping her as a punishment for her escapade with Ettleson. Cherry had not spared herself, and Churchill, following the line he had adopted from the beginning of allowing her to tell the worst about herself, had not attempted to spare her on direct examination.

"You had exchanged love letters with Mr. Ettleson?"

"I had." Cherry's voice was low and dragging with shame.

"You were in love with him?"

"No, sir, I was not. I—I was anxious to escape from the entanglements of my life, and Mr. Ettleson had offered to get me a job in New York, as a dancer in a musical comedy. I was ambitious, too, and I—I had to flirt with Mr. Ettleson to get him to help me."

"Did you have any improper relations with Mr. Ettleson?" Churchill asked suddenly.

"No, sir, I did not!" Cherry's voice rang out indignantly, utterly convincing.

"Did you intend to reward Mr. Ettleson for helping you by becoming his mistress?"

"I did not!" Cherry flamed. "He had talked of divorcing his wife to marry me, but I had not promised to marry him in that event. I only wanted to get away."

"Did you have any idea, when you went to Darrow to join Mr. Ettleson, that he intended to occupy the same stateroom with you on the trip to New York?" Churchill persisted.

"I did not. I did not even know he was going to New York then. He had said he would lend me the money for the ticket and would give me letters to musical comedy producers in New York. I had not even expected to see him again."

"Was it at Mr. Ettleson's suggestion or yours that he lent you the two hundred dollars which he has told the court about?"

"It was at his suggestion. He knew I did not have any money to buy suitable clothes for New York, and he offered to lend it to me. It was a loan, not a gift. My father paid him back," she added hastily.

"Now, Cherry, go on with the story of your engagement to Mr. Cluny and the events which immediately followed," Churchill directed her.

"I became engaged, as I said, on September 27, Monday. Mr. Cluny gave me a large solitaire engagement ring. That night I told my family, with the exception of my mother, who—who had heart trouble," Cherry's voice broke again.

"Why did you not tell your mother of your engagement to Mr. Cluny?" Churchill asked.

"Because I was afraid it would make her have an attack of heart trouble. She—she loved me very much and I knew she had great hopes of my marrying happily. I knew she would think Mr. Cluny was too old for me. My father and sister and brother were very much opposed to the match from the beginning. They tried to dissuade me from marrying Mr. Cluny, on the ground that he was too old. I told Faith that I was going through with it, because I could not bear to hurt Mr. Cluny's feelings by backing out. And he was so kind and good to me that I really hoped I would be happy with him in spite of the differences in our ages.

"That night—Monday, September 27—I went out with Chris Wiley, after telling my sister I was going to the Warren home, to dance. That was the night that I was at Tony's," she confessed. "I told Chris that I was going to marry Mr. Cluny and he said he would kill me if I did. I told him I would not see him—Chris—any more, that I was going to play fair with Mr. Cluny. I had made the engagement with Chris before I became engaged to Mr. Cluny and I was afraid not to keep it—afraid he would come to the house and make trouble for me."

"Had Mr. Wiley done such a thing before?" Churchill asked loudly, and the audience waited breathlessly for Cherry's reply.

(To be continued.)

THE TABLE—TRUE ART

BY SISTER MARY

The first requisite for a well set table is perfect cleanliness of all linen, silver and dishes and a precise regularity in their placement on the table. This immaculateness and orderliness go hand in hand and no matter how informal the meal, these qualities are observed.

There are a few rules that hold good for any sort of an occasion. When a table cloth is used, cover the table first with a silence cloth of felt padding, asebstos pad to fit the top, or canton flannel. Spread the cloth evenly and smoothly, the center crease exactly in the center of the table. If you use runners and doilies a glass top to fit you table relieves the necessity of pads for hot dishes, thereby adding much to the beauty of the table.

Keep the center decoration low. A tall bouquet makes it impossible for those seated opposite to see each other.

Place covers from twenty-five to thirty inches apart. This "cover" consists of the service plate or room for the dinner plate when a service plate is not used, napkin, silver and glass necessary for the meal. The distance in placing covers is gauged from center to center of the plates.

Knives are placed to the right of the service place, cutting edge toward the plate and the end of the handle one inch from the edge of the table.

Forks are placed to the left, tines up, end of handle one inch from edge of table.

Spoons are placed to the right of the knives.

The tumbler or goblet is placed to the end of the knife or a tiny bit to the right.

Planning the Plate.

The bread and butter plate is placed above the forks just a bit to the left and the spreader is placed across the upper right side of the plate, edge turned in and handle slanting down toward the right.

The napkin is placed at the left of the forks with the hemmed edges parellel with the edge of the table.

Salt and pepper shakers are placed exactly half way between two covers or individual ones placed in the center above the plate.

In placing silver put the fork or spoon to be used first farthest from the plate. This little rule makes it possible for the most unsophisticated to calmly eat his way in to his dessert no matter how many unnamed tools are placed about his plate.

And now for specific instances.

The breakfast cloth nowadays is usually quite gay. It may be of unbleached muslin made attractive with bright colors, or of colored linen, or of stenciled oil cloth. A low bowl of fruit or flowers makes an attractive centerpiece.

The cover is as follows: service plate on service plate, breakfast knife and fork, fruit spoon or knife, dessert spoon for cereal, bread and butter plate and butter spreader, finger bowl, water glass and napkin. The finger bowl is placed above the service plate between the bread and butter plate and the water glass.

When the fruit course is finished the fruit plate is removed and the cereal dish is placed on the service plate. If a "meat" course follows, the service plate is removed with the cereal and fresh plates are placed before the person who is to serve.

Stacking Cups.

The coffee pot is placed to the right of the "pourer," the sugar and cream in front of her plate and the cups and saucers are piled at her left. Not more than two cups or saucers should be piled together and the handles of the cups should be turned toward her so that she may easily arrange them.

So much for breakfast.

Luncheon is a simple affair ordinarily although the more or less formal function arranged for guests often soars to elaborate heights in both its menu and appointments.

While a damask cloth of silver sheen and snowy whiteness is always in "good form," a luncheon table laid with lace or embroidered doilies over the bare wood is attractive and "smart."

The general rules for table setting are followed.

Fancy dishes of nuts and candies that may be placed on the table before the "party comes in" must be arranged to keep the whole set up in perfect balance. Unless the luncheon be very formal, with several waitresses in attendance, all relishes suc has olives, celery and pickles, appear on the table at the beginning of the meal.

Coffee is served after the dessert and may be poured by the hostess at the table or served from the pantry. The cup and saucer are placed at the right and near the edge of the table by the waitress in serving.

And now for dinner.

Formal Dinner.

At a formal dinner when there is a waitress to serve as well as a cook in the kitchen, no food is placed on the table. The roast or bird is carved in the kitchen and arranged neatly in slices or points on a platter. This is served by the waitress at the left of each guest. Any dish from which a guest is to help himself is served at the left. The platter or serving dish is held on the left palm of the waitress on a folded napkin.

The service plate is not removed until a hot plate for the meat course is needed.

When the meat course is finished the plates are removed and the salad is served. Wafers or salad crackers are passed by the waitress.

Before the dessert course everything is removed from the table and the cloth is crumbled with a folded napkin.

The dessert service is the same as used for luncheon.

Coffee may be served at the table for all the guests or in the living room. Sugar but no cream is provided.

However, if there is only one person to serve as well as cook, the custom of the host carving the piece de resistance at the table is convenient.

Salad With Meat.

If there is no maid in attendance and the hostess must serve as well as entertain, she may want to serve her salad with the meat course. In this event the salad plate is placed just at the right of the water glass, opposite the bread and butter plate.

The woman who would entertain without a maid must not attempt elaborate dishes but she can have her table as carefully set and as charming in its simple decorations as the hostess who merely gives her orders to her butler.

ITALIAN BROCCOLI

Italian broccoli, served with Hollandaise sauce, makes one of the most appetizing and "different" of luncheon dishes.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

This acket frock is of blue crepella with blouse and trimming of printed silk.

It is not always easy to say whether a woman is wearing a suit or a coat frock, a jumper or a one-piece frock. You can not tell at a glance whether her costume has gone on in one, two, three or four pieces.

What sometimes appears to be a tailored two-piece suit with a separate blouse, is in fact a tailored jacket worn over a matching skirt attached to a blouse. What appears to be a frock with coat is in fact just a frock with applications of some sort to give the effect of a separate coat.

This is all because the dressmakers nowadays like if possible to supply every frock they make with something that will do in fact or effect for a wrap. That, of course, means more business—and gives assurance that the gown will be worn with a wrap that shows it to good advantage. Even evening frocks at some of the well-known dressmaking shops are shown with wraps to go with them, and the dressmaker of course tries to persuade you to include a wrap with your order for a dress.

Many of the simpler, light daytime frocks this season are accompanied by wrist-length jackets that may be easily slipped on and off and that really do not add very much to the cost of the frock. This removes the problem of choosing the separate wrap—since every frock has its own covering.

The sketch shows a jacket frock made with pleated skirt and short jacket of blue crepella. Printed silk is used for the blouse and the trimmings on the jacket. As a matter of fact the blouse is one in effect only for it really constitutes the bodice portion of the skirt to which it is attached.

An Ex-Buck Private Goes Back to France

Back of the line there are many villages that are just as we left them when we pushed forward in 1917 and 1918. The houses were little wrecked by shell-fire, and the inhabitants did not leave them. I have made a little trip through them, seeking people I used to know. Now I'm going to tell you about it.

By the cross-roads that lead from Bailleul-Arras road down to Athies, stands an old iron sign-post which was there in 1914. It is slightly inclined, like a good soldat after four vin blancs. Part of only one directional wing remains, and the pillar is riddled with shrapnel holes, but it remains on duty, one of the few of its kind in the war zone.

Close to this point are two large cemeteries. One is British, and still has the old wooden crosses. Although lacking headstones, and without the cross of sacrifice, the cemetery is well tended—as, indeed, is every one of the score of British cemeteries which I have visited. The gardeners of the War Graves Commission form a fine body of men, all ex-soldiers, and it would be well if some public tribute were paid to their unremitting efforts to keep beautiful the resting places of their fallen comrades.

Meantime, in the little metal box, inside each cemetery gate, you may find pencilled in the visitors' book many touching words of appreciation. In the book at this Bailleul road cemetery is a note by a lady, written in a fine, cultured hand, recording her visit to the grave of a brother here, and announcing that she is proceeding to the graves of two other brothers, and to that of her husband at Soissons. Husband and three brothers! Mechanically, one closes that book and turns away.

Hard by is a cemetery of a different type, a forest of tall, black crosses, lettered in white stencilled type. It is the graveyard of some 5,000 German soldiers, many of them unidentified. It has a German warden, who lives in the neighboring village of Fampoux, from which his countrymen were ejected in a battle in which the South African contingent alone lost 720 men.

Over on the north of this battlefield, near the point known as Maison Blanche, on the Arras-Souchez road, is an even larger German cemetery. Here a vast number of scattered graves and small cemeteries have been consolidated, and so close are the tall, black crosses that they seem to dance, rising up and falling in a grim Danse Macabre, as our car moves swiftly along the uneven road. The number of graves here defies a casual estimate, but a British graves' official told me that though German cemeteries are not in British charge, he had inquired about the number of Germans buried here, and had been authoritatively told that it is not less than thirty-five thousand.

The cemeteries detain the visitor, as always. And there is yet an interesting section of the battlefied to be reviewed. There is, in particular, Monchy-le-Preux, the village set upon a hill. Viewing it, one can see the temptation which it presented to the cavalry leader who sent horses and men at it at the gallop. But he reckoned without wire, and without those deadly nests of machine guns which were concealed among the ruins. The attack on Monchy was a disastrous day for the cavalry; it was as deadly for the infantry.

Up in the centre of the new village of Monchy, stands two of the most striking memorials to be seen in France. One, whose group of three soldiers, facing all directions, was shown at the Royal Academy a few years ago, is inscribed to the memory of the "37th (English) Division", and bears the familiar Divisional sign of a horseshoe. This formation included regiments from Yorkshire, Middlesex, Somerset, Lincolnshire, Lancashire, Essex, Warwickshire, Bedfordshire, Staffordshire, Hertfordshire, two battalions of Royal Fusiliers and four battalions of Worcestershire men—a noble epitome of England.

It Looks Familiar!

Newfoundland's Day.

The other memorial is unique in that it's plinth is the ruin of an old house, including a fine old wooden fireplace standing four-square among the tumbled bricks. Here is all that remains of old Monchy. The crowning figure is the caribou of Newfoundland, for here, in Monchy, a little party of nine men from Britain's oldest colony held the centre of the village against fierce counter-attacks for eight hours.

One craves for space to tell the story of the courage and losses of the 12th (Eastern) Division whose memorial, near Feuchy Chapel, bearing the Division sign of the Ace of Spades, looks out over Bunyan Trench and the broad marshes of the Scarpe.

And much might be written, too, of the 9th (Scottish) Division whose exploits are commemorated in a fine granite cairn, amid some broken pill-boxes near the Athies cross roads.

There is also the story of the gallantry of the men of the Third Division fought at Tilloy, and particularly of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers, who acquitted themselves with great distinction in the exceptionally hard fighting hereabouts.

But one can give, in these short letters, only a rapid survey, and our interest is mainly with the Canadian troops.

Back of the Line.

From Vimy Ridge I went back to the little villages we knew so well—though many of them belonged to another battlefield that we shall visit later—Hersin, Bully Grenay, Bouvingy, Boyeffles, Sains, Maisnil le Ruitz, Camblain l'Abbé, Madagascar, Maroc, Mazingarbe, Les Brebis, Avesnes le Compte, Haillicourt, Neux les Mines, Brecknamont, Blavincourt, and scores of others. All that were not shelled are just the same as they were ten years ago, except for the absence of khaki. Some of them even have the signs in the store windows in English, and here and there are painted notices: "EGGS" and "COFFE". Up in Gouy Servins I was reminded of the call I paid a Peterborough man whose regimental number was 113,497. What impressed me most was the story his side-kicks told about his wearing silk pyjamas. And yet some people called it war! Me, myself, I was accustomed periodically to conduct a rather close catechism of animated blankets, and pyjamas were but dimly remembered.

In Bully Grenay (do you remember Henriette? She asked to be remembered to all of you) I had a peculiar experience. All you have to say when you want some butter is: "Ahnpitber." In reality this combination of letters is the way "Un petit peu de beurre" sounds when it's spoken by a Frenchman. Five words in one—"Ahnpitber"—and it will usually bring the butter. In the little Cafe just behind the old 18-pounder position on the edge of the village, I was seated with a Yankee, and all he could talk was baseball. I asked him "How many teams did you bet on during the season?" and he said, "One—Pittsburgh." Mlle. was in the offing, and took it for his order—"Ahnpitber."

Even today there are many French villagers who have daily reminders of the visit of the C.E.F. Francois Villet, in Bouvingy, is one of these. He still wears a British warmer that he bought from a poverty-stricken buck private for 10 francs, which in 1918 was 55 cents. Marie Herese whatever her other name was (we never bothered much still has a dixie that some gallant cook gave her. There are turnips and mangels growing now where the horse lines of the heavies were at Barlin. The old chateu at Boyeffles has been restored after the fire that burned out the seventh field battery.

Do you remember the sign at NAPOO CORNER in Lievin—"All ye who linger here shall surely find eternal rest"? There's no danger now in passing along the streets of Lievin, past Fosse 6, and whizz-bang corner holds no terrors. Windy way was not far from Napoo Corner, on the way to Petit Vimy across the fields. It was near here that the Imperial Major pulled his field battery into action beside the eight heavies, but on learning they were Canadians he took up trails and beat it. "You Canadians will draw all the Hun fire there is," he declared. It was only a short run from here to Gouy Servins, and the first battery gang from Peterborough used to visit S.P. there and pick up their water bottles full of rhum. The Imperial post where real soldiers used to try to make Canadians wear steel helmets is rebuilt.

The swimming hole at Souchez corner is gone. But the memory of it remains with many a man. This was the pool where someone had thrown a lot of barbed wire, and the unwary swimmer was likely to come up minus his B.D.Vs or whatever he wore for a bathing suit (if any).

At Blavincourt we were in the good books of the demoiselles until the 22nd Battalion of the second Division pulled in. The French-Canadians put our noses out of joint tout sweet — what Mademoiselle would bother trying to love in English when there were good-looking guys around talking her own language? Caput!

Do you remember Leone at Sains en Gohelle (which we called by an almost phonetic name)? There's not much traffic now at Souchez corner, where the cop used to hold up the troops until nightfall. It was some line-up, too, waiting for the darkness to hide the mules and wagons from Heinie's sausages. Now, if you see a farm wagon in an hour you're seeing a busy day at Souchez. And the sabots go cloppety-clop dans la rue.

At St. Pol (the ravages of the bombing have been eradicated) we had a party one night and our favorite song was:

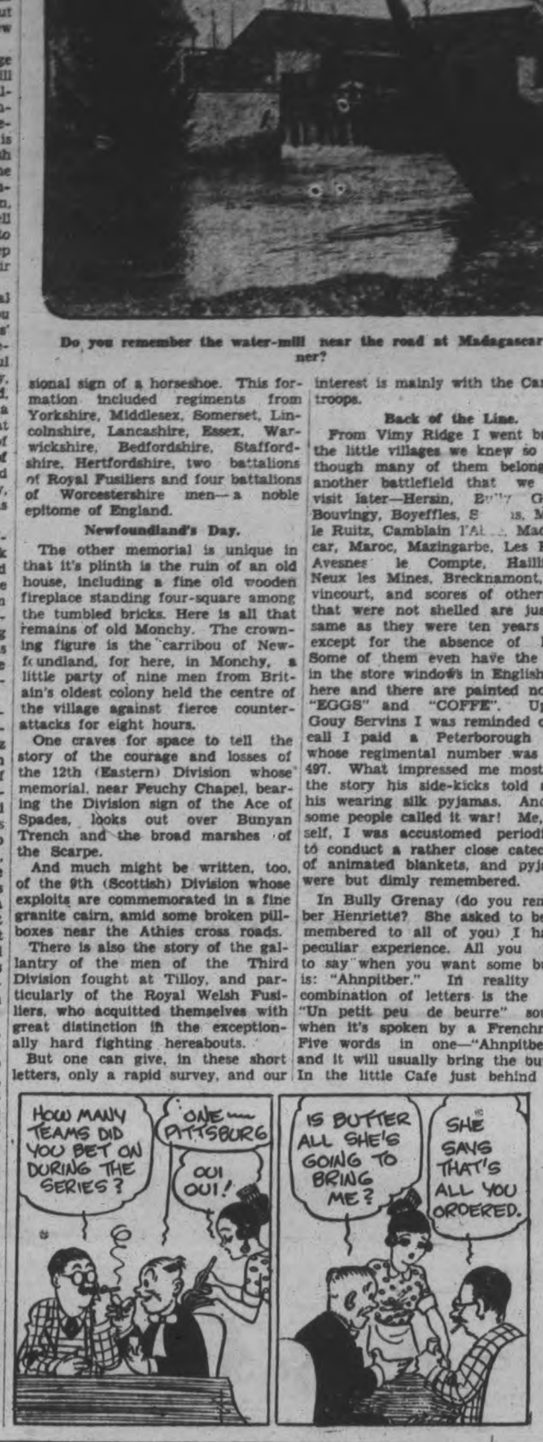
"I cleaned up the Alleman faction,
I whaled all the Heinies afloat;
If you're in for a row or a ruction
Just tread on the tail of me coat."

After cafe and encore cafe with a strong lacing of cognac it went pretty well, too.

The big hut that was used as a theatre in Neux les Mines is now a stable. And, by the way, Juliette Leroy was enthusiastic about sending her love to the troops. She is married and the youngster is called "Tommy."

It would take a book, Mac, to tell all about these little villages that we knew so well. They were unknown to fame before 1914, but some of them are now red-lettered in the calendar of glory. Others are just good sites for estaminets. Either way, tres beans!

PAUL ADAMS.



RESIDENTS OF

then rose to their feet and voiced approval of the latter speaker, remarking that their children were attending irregularly, one day going to the city school, the next to May's.

The Rev. J. L. Hughes remarked that though he had not any children of his own old enough to attend school, it was his firm belief that the welfare of the child should be looked after, regardless of cost, and in his opinion the city school, at a lower rate than a new school could possibly be built for, was the only thing for the children requiring a good education.

Previous to this, a trustee of the school, Mr. Webber, had moved an amendment, that pupils would go to the city schools.

A standing vote was then taken, which resulted in twenty-one for and twenty-six against. No sooner had the results been given out than a man demanded an adjournment of the meeting, but he was ruled down directly by the chairman. Some one then demanded a poll vote be taken, which resulted in nineteen for the amendment and twenty-nine against.

Sites for the building were discussed and a motion was made by Mr. Milby, seconded by Mr. Doig, that the trustees proceed to have the school erected on the site proposed by the board, at a total cost of $30,000. A vote was taken on this which was unanimous. This seemed to put all in good spirits, for when some man suggested that the school be called "Jubilee" or "Confederation" and the first sod be turned on that day in addition to a small celebration, he was loudly applauded for such an appropriate idea. A vote of thanks was then made to the chairman, by Mr. Milby, for the excellent manner in which he handled the meeting.

AROUND THE CITY

Mr. J. J. Duffus, with Mrs. Duffus and family, were passengers this morning on the seven o'clock C.N.R. train, which left the track near Fraserville, and they were compelled to return to the city. Mr. Duffus was en route to Toronto, to attend a meeting of the Ontario Association of Boards of Trade, and of the Chamber of Commerce, of which he is president.

Mine Business Light And Featureless To-day

TORONTO, May 26 (Canadian Press)—Business was light on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day and the market was featureless. Total sales amounted to 372,907 shares. Prices were steady, with declines and gains being equally distributed over the list. Argonaut Consolidated declined 3-4 at 54 and Atlas gained 1-4 at 6 3-4. Columbus Kirk dropped 1-8 at 3 1-2 and Kirkland Lake was down 1 at 135. Stadacona was 3-4 lower at 18 3-4. On the unlisted market, Amulet was up five at 148 and Noranda was five lower at 22.45.

Wheat Prices Continue Upward Move To-day

CHICAGO, May 26 (Canadian Press)—Steep new upturns in wheat resulted to-day from further gains in Canada and a reported big reduction in the seeded acreage there. Unfavorable advices from a wide area were also at hand relative to corn planting delay. Opening 3-8 cents off to 1-2c up, wheat sagged a little more in some cases and then ascended all around. Corn started 1-8 cent to 1-4 cent down but soon scored material gains. Oats also developed firmness. Lard tended upward, meats down.

Opening prices were: Wheat, May 150, July 143 7-8. Corn, May unquoted, July 92 3-4. Oats, May unquoted, July 50.

Toronto Market Active With Many Price Changes

TORONTO, May 26. Canadian Press. — Very active dealing characterized the trading on the Toronto stock exchange to-day and price changes in many isues in many cases came faster than they could be recorded. The market showed an optimistic outlook and gains of a point or more were general. Abitibi was up 3 at 95¼ in light trading, with Brazilian Traction gaining 5 at 148. International Nickel was by far the market leader, with more than 10,000 shares dealt in, the issue gaining 2⅝ points at 66 7-8. Canadian Canners preferred gained one at 92½ and Industrial Alcohol was up ½ at 20. Massey Harris preferred gained ¼ at 108¾. Shredded Wheat was 2½ higher at 68½, and Seagram's dropped 1-8 at 25 7-8. Arnold Bros. lost 3 at 17½. On the unlisted side, Noranda declined 40c to 22.30; Goodfisham and Worts was up ½ at 58½; Imperial Oil gained 1-8 at 43, and International Petroleum was ¼ higher at 29 3-8.

Noranda Gets Control Of Two Large Mines

(Special from The Financial Post Syndicate.)

The much talked of deal whereby Noranda, operating in Northwestern Quebec, secured the Timmins holding of 81 per cent. in Waite-Montgomery and 65 per cent. interest in the Alderson Mackay mine, has been concluded. Noah Timmins is taking Noranda stock in exchange; how much is not known. However, it would seem to definitely place control of Noranda in Montreal because of Mr. Timmins' former large holdings, along with 30,000 shares owned by Hollinger Mines, given as a bonus for a $3,000,000 loan.

This will give Noranda ore valued at $40,000,000 to draw on for its smelter. Horne property has $25,000,000, Waite-Montgomery $11,000,000 and Alderson Mackay mine around $4,000,000. On the announcement Noranda shares sold up to $25 per share and since has eased back $2 per share on heavy New York selling, the writer cannot help but feel that the New Yorkers are not satisfied with the diamond drilling that Noranda has done below the 300-ft. level, and believes that if the truth were known that it would be found that New York's former large holding in this venture is today very small. The truth regarding this suspicion will be learned when Noranda starts to open up the mine below the 300-ft. level, something they do not seem anxious to start.

The deal rather complicates things for Towagmac shareholders, who own 35 per cent. of the Alderson Mackay mine, and for the holders of units in Waite-Montgomery, which were sold to the public at around $800 a unit. A present price of over $4.00 for the million Towagmac shares seems to put a fairly high valuation on this interest. The other assets behind the stock consist of some fairly well located properties, but on which no results of any moment have been had.

Beaver Consolidated, one of Cobalt's old silver operators, is to be wound up. The only tangible asset of the company is 1,200,000 common shares of Kirkland Lake gold and 500,000 preferred shares of the same company. It was recently decided to exchange the preferred for common, and following this decision, President D. B. Hanna said it was proposed to distribute the assets and wipe the company out. Beaver's holding of 1,700,000 shares of Kirkland Lake common, at the present market of $1.50, puts a valuation on the 2,000,000 dollar shares of Beaver of $1.19 each. There are enough other assets to about pay the cost of distributing the assets and winding the company up.

Hon. Chas. McCrea, Ontario Minister of Mines, has made a deal with Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines to conduct an electrical survey of its copper properties in Kamiskotia. The Minister has been urged to allow electrical surveys of properties to apply on assessment work. He wants the test made before he makes any such move. Electrical surveys are not in the public favor since the Amulet-Area fiasco in Quebec. The Hollinger test will either support this opinion or remove the black mark which stands against the system. Hollinger's property is ideal for a test. The rock is heavily over-burdened with sand, and it is a case where a survey should prove helpful. A company as strong as Hollinger is well able to test out to the fullest any results, or "kicks" as they are called, secured in making the survey.

The market during the past week was somewhat reactionary, although the majority of the good stocks have held up well. Lake Shore has passed Hollinger, this $1 stock selling at $20.50, while the $5 Hollinger shares are bringing $20.40. McIntyre holds steady around $25.50 and Nickel is under accumulation at present levels. The penny stocks and silver issues continue weak, and there is a feeling that little action is to be expected in the market for these shares until the fall.

LIST OF NAMES FOUND IN RAID IS PUBLISHED

Several Toronto Addresses on List Held By Anton Miller.

CHANGES RECORDED.

Sixteen Documents Reprinted in Paper Used By Government.

LONDON, May 26 (Canadian Press).—The British Government today made good its promise to publish some of the documents alleged to have been uncovered in the recent sensational raid on Soviet House in London, headquarters of the Soviet trade delegation, and Arcos Limited, Russian commercial organization.

It issued a White Paper, the most interesting part of which, from an international standpoint, was a list of addresses allegedly found in the possession of Anton Miller, Soviet cipher clerk, who, Premier Baldwin told the House of Commons on Tuesday, was found hurriedly burning papers in his office when the raiders arrived.

Paper No. 4 is captioned: List of addresses found in possession of Anton Miller. It contains the following:

List A, Canada (No. 1) Communist party of Canada, Room 301, 95 King street East, Toronto, Canada.

Private address (No. 2) Miss Skene, 54 Victoria avenue, Toronto, Canada. (Inside envelope 1 Macdonald.)

Canada (No. 9), Maurice Spector, 221 Palmerston avenue, Toronto.

Additional addresses found in possession of Anton Miller under heading of "Canada Confidential Matter" were:

Mr. Charles Gray, 168 Lisgar St., Toronto; Mr. E. Pirttinen, 56 West Roxeter avenue, Toronto; Mrs. Mary M. Sutcliffe, 34 Tindale Avenue, Toronto. (Inside envelope Macdonald or other.)

Miss Alice Ayres, 54 Delaney Crescent, Toronto. Cable address Truel-Toronto.

Following note was written after these addresses: "Tim Buck's address is changed to 54 Delaney Crescent. Miss A. Skene's address is changed to 34 Tindale avenue.

While the White Paper gave this out simply as a list of addresses found in Miller's possession, it is assumed to be the same list which Premier Baldwin described as a "list of secret cover addresses or 'illegal' addresses for communicating with the Communist parties in Canada, the United States, Mexico, South America, Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa."

The edge was rather taken off most of the documents from the fact that the premier read them or quoted from them extensively in his Tuesday speech in which he announced the decision of the Government to break diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia and terminate the trade agreement of 1921.

Addresses Well Known

TORONTO, May 26 (Canadian Press).—The addresses of Canadian Communists found in possession of Anton Miller when the authorities raided Arcos House in London recently and included in the list of addresses made public today by the British Government are those of prominent members of the Communist party in Canada.

Maurice Spector is chairman of the organization in the Dominion, while J. MacDonald is believed to be Jack MacDonald, another leading Communist. Miss Skene is an active worker and is a sister-in-law of MacDonald. The headquarters of the Communist party in this country are located in this city.

In a statement yesterday following the announcement of the British Government to break off diplomatic relations with the Soviets, Maurice Spector declared that the Canadian Communists would endeavor to organize the working classes and issue leaflets and manifestos. "We would be on the side of the Canadian working classes and fight for international peace," he declared. Mr. Spector stated that war was being waged against the Soviet because it was a working class government.

Have Large Offices

The Communists occupy three well furnished offices at 95 King Street East and considerable literature dealing with the Soviet and Communistic principles is available. "The Worker," the organ of the party in Canada, is published at the King street address, where a staff of stenographers and clerks is employed.

This morning Mr. MacDonald admitted that he was in touch with the Communist party in England, but declared that he had not engaged in doing or writing anything that was unlawful.

Tim Buck, another leading worker in the Communist cause, recently returned from Russia and is at present in Northern Ontario, it is said.

will prevent any trade development between the two countries because of financing difficulties. The Evening News praised Canada's action regarding Russia in the following words:

"Canada's decision to cancel her trade agreement with Moscow is a gesture of loyalty to Great Britain which will not be forgotten, for the Dominion, unlike the Mother Country, was profiting by her trade with Russia. It was a one-way trade, all in Canada's favor."

Bruce Won't Talk

MELBOURNE, Australia, May 26 (United Press, Special). — Premier Bruce refuses to intimate whether he has received from Premier Baldwin the names of Soviet agents in Australia, saying, "If I had a list of all the names and addresses I would not reveal them. I prefer to let them stew in their own juice, wondering how much we know."

TAKE DIAMONDS OFF CROSSINGS

Railway Companies Will Remove Cross Rails of Car Tracks.

NO LONGER NEEDED.

Diamonds are evidently at a discount in Peterborough.

A large diamond which apparently nobody wants has lain undisturbed for many days on Charlotte Street, at a point where hundreds of people pass every day.

It may be explained that the said diamond is one which was made to be laid on the spot where the C.N.R. tracks and the Street Railway tracks intersect on Charlotte Street. Before it could be put in place the Street Railway passed into oblivion, and the diamond will never adorn the spot for which it was intended.

More than that, all the other diamonds at similar crossing places are to be torn up by the railways and the intersections put into proper shape, leaving open the way for paving operations by the local authorities.

SEVEN NURSES

self-sacrificing devotion to duty.

"Disease is rampant at all times. In every locality you will find the sufferer, attended by the physician and the nurse, who gives sleepless nights and tiresome days to help the invalid back to strength."

Father Costello extended the congratulations of the Bishop and of himself to the graduates on their attainment of success in their training.

Distribution of Prizes

The distribution of diplomas and medals to the graduating class was made by the chief of staff at St. Joseph's Hospital, Dr. J. A. Morgan, who spoke briefly and appropriately in commendation of the work done, in labor and study and self-denial, through three years of arduous preparation for their lifework.

Dr. F. C. Neal presented the special prizes awarded as follows: To Miss Fitzmaurice, the prize to the nurse obtaining the highest aggregate marks, a writing case given by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien; to Miss M. McGuire, the prize for excellence in the principles and practices of nursing, an ivory comb and brush, presented by the Alumnae Association of the Hospital. The presentation was accompanied by a few fitting words from the doctor, and was followed by the presentation of prizes for bandaging, made by Dr. E. H. Wood, who adjured the graduates to do their utmost to keep their patients in good condition by recommending periodic examinations by their physicians. Dr. Wood referred to the eminent English scientist who made the assertion that in gatherings such as that held last evening, one out of every thirty present would ultimately die of cancer, and that ninety per cent. of these cases might be saved by systematic diagnosis at the proper time.

Dr. Wood presented the first and second prizes for bandaging, given by the Medical Staff of the Hospital, to Miss Frances Minard and Miss E. Jayne Brennan, who received respectively a manicure set and a string of pearls.

His Worship Mayor Holloway, who occupied a seat on the platform, spoke of the difficulties attendant on the profession of nursing, characterizing it as "one of the hardest kinds of work that anyone could choose," and said that the city appreciated the excellent work being done in St. Joseph's and Nicholls Hospitals.

The Valedictory read by Miss Stylita Fitzmaurice formed the conclusion of the oral programme. It was beautifully worded and delivered with a smooth, quiet eloquence that impressed the hearers with its force and simplicity. Miss Fitzmaurice finished with words of gratitude from the Graduating Class to His Lordship the Bishop, to the spiritual director, Rt. Rev. Monsignor McColl, to the genial chaplain, Rev. P. McGuire, to the doctors of the staff for their interest and instruction, and to the Superior and nurses of the Hospital who had assisted them during their years of training.

Musical Programme

The musical programme of the evening was excellent, and was received in every instance with hearty applause, the recitation by small Miss Mary Deforge, delivered with an unconscious charm that attracted her hearers immensely, being accorded a special meed of enthusiasm in its reception.

The programme opened with a selection by St. Peter's School Orchestra, who also played later, with piano accompaniments by Miss Olive O'Connell and Miss Mary Reynolds. The orchestral selections were a march, "Musical Times" and "Echoes from Naples." A novelty in the form of a quartette of young ladies playing one piano was the "Galloping March," played by the Misses Veronica Scollard, Mary Reynolds, Hilda Sullivan and Helen Archambault, and a piano solo rendered by Miss Agnes Logan was entitled "Shepherds Hey!" Joseph Nolan, with accompaniment by Miss Mary Reynolds, played a violin solo, "Rendezvous," and little Mary Deforge's recitation was entitled "The Story Teller." A vocal solo, "In the Garden of My Heart," by Miss Ernestine McManus, was accompanied on the piano by Miss Florence Giroux.

The evening concluded with the service of refreshments to the nurses and their friends and attending medical men, followed by a dance in the auditorium, arrangements being in charge of the Catholic Women's League. Excellent music for dancing was supplied by McCormack's four-piece orchestra.

CABINET WON'T ACCEPT MOTION

Chamberlain Says Clynes' Motion is Considered Vote of Censure.

CLYNES ANSWERS.

LONDON, May 26 (Canadian Press). — Sir Austen Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary, told the House of Commons today the Government was not prepared to accept the motion of John R. Clynes, Labor member, that an inquiry be made into the Government's charges of Soviet propaganda in Britain which have resulted in the dicision to sever diplomatic relations.

Sir Austen said the motion was a vote of censure and that the Government invited a clear expression of confidence and approval. There was not a word of truth in the suggestion that he had endeavored to form an anti-Soviet Union. The British Government, he said, had no idea of embarking on any such anti-Soviet campaign.

Mr. Clynes declared that Soviet Russia "must not be condemned without trial."

Clynes Demands Trial

The Government had reversed its former position that British trade and the future peace of Europe would be injured by the severance of relations with Russia. He understood the Government position now to be that Russia was in the dock.

"We accept that position," he continued, "but we demand that in this matter she shall not be condemned without a trial. We refuse to admit either the guilt or the innocence of Russia.

Touching on the question of Communist propaganda, Mr. Clynes said that the Labor party had suffered most from it. By every means open to it, the party had repudiated the Communist purposes, policy, and methods and it had resented and denounced every proven breach by the Russian government of any agreement or understanding between the two countries.

He declared that the party's motion was made from honest conviction that the truth should be revealed by proper and effective inquiry. In a matter so serious the government ought not to reply on suspicions or conclusions.

Mr. Clynes asserted that the government's policy will strengthen communist propaganda and "make astute propagandists even more free to carry on their work and with perhaps greater effect.

He had secured to-day's white paper, which he described as a "bright diverting, comic publication" for which he did not think any government in the world would have become responsible.

Sir Austen Chamberlain said that the government was content to rest upon the information it had disclosed. It thought it unnecessary to produce any more of this information and therefore undesirable.

Plenty of Evidence.

The government had a mass of evidence to show that continuously in every quarter of the globe where the elements of trouble existed, the Soviet government had sought to take advantage of those elements to increase unrest and create trouble, particularly where British interests could be affected.

The Soviets had done this not only in Britain and abroad, he continued, but a baleful part had been played through the Chinese troubles by Soviet diplomacy and agents. Soviet House was the seat not only of trading activities, but of political propaganda and anti-British action.

The Soviet mission was engaged in similar activities in breach of the [illegible] of nations and abuse of diplomatic privileges accorded.

WAR IS COMING SAYS SPECTOR

Canadian Communist Says Britain Will Eventually Attack Soviet.

NATIONAL "BOGEY MAN."

TORONTO, May 26 (Canadian Press).—Maurice Spector, chairman of the Communist Party in Canada, believes that sooner or later Great Britain and Russia will go to war. The Canadian Communist leader stated to-day that even now "the menace of war with the prospect of Canada participating in it, is at least as great as it was during the Chanak crisis, when war with Russia threatened.

"A very serious international crisis is looming ahead," he continued. "I certainly think that the stabilization of Europe, of which the recent Geneva conference showed signs, has been given a decided set-back. Since apparently the critics were correct who pointed out that the Locarno conference was a step towards the isolation of the Soviet Union, we reason that this last diplomatic rupture is a link in the chain of war front against Russia.

"Sooner or later we believe that Britain will attack the Soviet Union, though not necessarily in the immediate future. For a long time before 1914 the relations between Great Britain and Germany became steadily worse. Germany was used as "Britain's national bogey man" and conditions finally culminated in 1914. Today the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics has taken the place of Germany in the eyes of the British ruling class as the menace to their Imperial power."

PIANO RECITAL.

Pupils of Mrs. S. J. Richardson Give Splendid Concert.

A very enjoyable recital by the Junior piano pupils of Mrs. S. J. Richardson, A.T.C.M., was held last evening in the Girls' Gymnasium of the Salvation Army Hall, with an attendance of over one hundred people. The pupils were assisted by five pupils of Mrs. F. G. McNeely, elocutionist, whose selections were received with hearty applause by the audience, and were responded to with encores. The piano pupils gave an excellent account of themselves and of the painstaking tuition of their teacher, rendering their numbers almost entirely from memory.

The programme was as follows:

The Merry Blacksmith (Rolfe) Ivy and Margaret Ham; Lily (Graham) Lillian Barnes; Happy (Graham) Stanley Giles; Columbine, (Graham) Phyllis Braund; A Day Too Late, Miss Marvin (Pontypool); Tulip (Graham) Flora Moore; White Rose (Graham) Raymond Giles; Fairies, Corona Hanidge; Narcissus (Slater) Eva Patterson; March of the Shadows (Barth) Jack Morrison; The Two Rabbits, Olive Cookman; March in C (Rummel) Ivy Ham; Marionettes (Rhode) Gladys Gerard; My Tables, Ruth McNeely; Will o' Wisp (Eilenberg) Kathryn Whaley; The Merry Peasant (Schumann) Bill Morrison; Rob Roy March (Anthony) Ivy and Margaret Ham; Valse Caprice (Tellier) Clarence Thomas; Nocturne (Fearis) Elemere Conlin; The Cripple Boy, Phyllis Moore; Sonatina (Kuhlau) Margaret Ham; Rondo (Diabelli) Jean Cox; The Sensitive Kettle, Corona Hanbidge; L'Hirondelle (Burgmuller); Skating, (Klein) John Londerville; Minuet, (Mozart), Elizabeth Harrison; Doll Dance (Mercadante) Eunice Barnes; Three Little Girls, Olive Cookman; Rondo Villageois (Dennee); Sonatina in G (Clement) Rowland Hill; A Curious Story (Hillier) Alice Davis; Why the dogs' nose is always cold, Phyllis Moore; Sonatina (Clementi), Leslie French; On and On (Martin) Elizabeth Harrison and Mrs. S. 7% First Mortgage (Leasehold) Twenty-year Sinking Fund Gold Bonds

These Bonds provide exceptional security because the total amount of the mortgage is for but 42% of the appraised value of the property, and the Sinking Fund will retire the whole issue before maturity. Net earnings, after all charges and provisions for the Sinking Fund, are estimated at $39,000, or almost twice the amount of the Bond interest.

There is no other building in Montreal like it. Almost one-half of the space in it has been leased before completion.

In our opinion, there is no safer or more desirable First Mortgage (Leasehold) Bond on the market.

Pittsburg Wins Whole Series From Cincinnati

INDIANS WIN OVER TIGERS

Hankins Knocked Out of the Box in the Sixth Inning.

WIND UP SERIES.

NEW YORK, May 26 (Canadian Press) — The Cleveland Indians wound up a long stay at home yesterday by defeating the Detroit Tigers, 9 to 6, in a hard hitting contest. Hudlin, Cleveland's young pitcher, had the best of Hankins, who was knocked out of the box in the sixth inning when the Indians scored four runs. Extra base hits featured the contest, Cleveland marking up three doubles and four triples while Detroit got two doubles and three triples.

The Chicago White Sox won both games of a doubleheader with the Browns at St. Louis, 14 to 8 and 1 to 0, and thereby tightened their hold on second place. The Browns used five pitchers in the first game to stop the Chicago batters. In the second game the Browns held the Sox scoreless until the fifth when B. Falk walked and circled the bases on two sacrifices and a wild throw.

CARDS DIVIDE DOUBLE HEADER

Cubs Take Second Game of Double Bill By Score 8-4.

SHERDEL TAKEN OUT.

NEW YORK, May 26 (Canadian Press)—Chicago and St. Louis divided a double header at Chicago yesterday, the Cardinals winning the first game, 8 to 5, while the Cubs won the second, 8 to 4. Alexander went the route for the visitors in the first game in which he was materially helped by home run smashes by Bottomley and Bell, the latter's blow coming with the bases filled in the fifth inning. Sherdel was driven off the hill in the eighth inning of the second game when Chicago went on a batting rampage, broke a tied score and won.

Three straight singles and a sacrifice fly in the fourth defeated the Reds, 2 to 0, at Cincinnati and gave Pittsburgh all three games of the series. The Pirate dependables turned the trick, Cuyler, P. Waner and Wright drawing singles while Traynor clubbed the ball for a fly to right field. The Red fielding was working better and the Pirates were caught in two doubleplays. Carl Mays held the Pirates to five hits while Hill was hit six times.

KNIGHTS LOSE TO LOCK WORKS

Winners Show Much More Speed and Finish Throughout Game.

FINAL SCORE 16-9.

The Lock Works defeated the Knights of Columbus in softball game played in Central Park last night, the final score being 16 to 9. The winners showed much more finish and experience, and although the Knights put up a good game they were outplayed.

Ranger for the Knights played a wonderful game and was one of the live wires on the losers' team. Murphy in left field made the best catch of the evening when he picked off Crary's fly with one hand. Rose, who pitched for the Knights, was rather wild at times, and only for the fine catching of Ranger, there would have been many more wild pitches. He walked five men and allowed 18 hits.

Dunkerley pitched for the winners and he pitched a very steady game, which, with the team play of the other men, was able to help him out in the pinches, as he walked six men. Each pitcher had one strike-out.

In the third inning, the winners ran in six runs and the Knights staged a rally in the fifth. Foley and Nichols each got triples, and Smith had the only double play of the game.

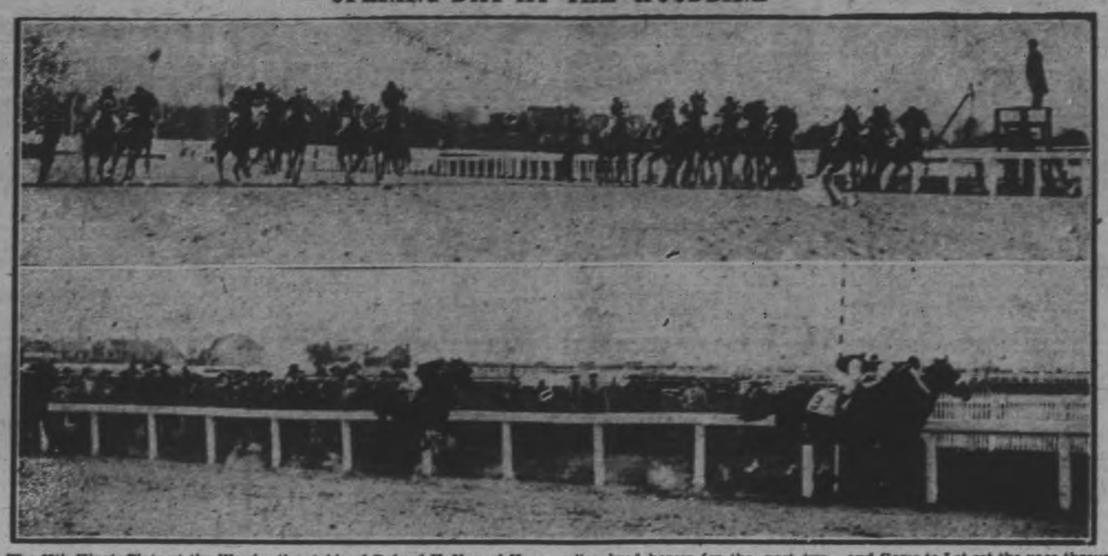
OPENING DAY AT THE WOODBINE



The 68th King's Plate at the Woodbine, on the opening day of the Canadian racing season, was captured by "Troutlet," a three-year-old filly from the stable of Ryland H. New of Hamilton. The stout-hearted filly was trained by the veteran John Nixon of Toronto, who has been training Canadian-bred horses for the past two-score years and more. The prize is worth $10,000 to the owner and $1,000 to the breeder. Mr. Gaiety, Listerine, and Gems to Let set the pace through out the course, but Troutlet finished with a fine burst of speed to nose out the tiring Mr. Gaiety. Pictures show start and finish of the event.

EXHIBITION GAME AT WESLEYVILLE

Welcome and Wesleyville Baseball Teams Battle To 4-4 Tie.

WELCOME, May 26.—An exhibition game between Welcome and Wesleyville boys' baseball teams was played in Wesleyville on Friday night. It was the first game of the season for both teams, so the interest was keen on both sides. Wilford Card, Welcome's young pitcher, pitched well for three innings, then Jack Haskill, a good twirler, took his place for the next three innings. Mac Irwin succeeded him in the last innings. Others who played on the Welcome team were Dick Davison, George Beckett, George Lewis, Fred McConnell, Ross Dickinson, Warren Davison and Reginald Gibbs. The players were frequently changed, as their manager, Rev. Clare, wanted to test all his players and find out how they stood in a game.

The score was 4-4, and on account of the lateness of the day the tie was not played off.

Among those who went from Welcome to view the baseball game were Helen Lewis, Edna Pearce, Irene Martyn, Elva Pearce, Marjorie Runnalls, Ida Clare, Mrs. Clare, and Norma Dickinson.

PLAN ROAD RACE FOR CELEBRATION

One of Chief Features of the Jubilee on July First.

MARMORA, May 26—A road race from Deloro to Marmora and return, approximately eight miles in length, open to young men of Hastings County, 20 years old and under, is definitely planned as one of the chief features of the Jubilee celebrations being held in Deloro on July 1st and July 2nd.

This innovation is to be a yearly affair and the sanction of the Amateur Athletic Union has been applied for. A challenge cup is being donated by Mr. Sidney Kent of Toronto and it will be known as the Sidney Kent Jubilee Trophy. The winner will hold possession of the cup for one year and will be given a miniature cup for permanent possession. Other valuable prizes will be given to the first six runners to finish. This event is being sponsored by the Deloro Amateur Athletic Association with the hope of creating an interest in the county in long distance running and the officials at Deloro are to be commended in making a start along this line of sport. Particulars as regards entries will be published at a later date with the hope that a large number will face the starter.

SICKLE FAVORITE FOR ENGLISH DERBY

Lord Derby's Horse Has Margin Over Call Boy in the Betting.

LONDON, May 26—Lord Derby's Sickle has emerged from the uncertainty of the last few days as the favorite for the Derby. JOHNSON READY.

Washington Senators' Veteran Pitcher Almost Recovered From Injury.

NEW YORK, May 26. — Baseball stock of the Washington Senators started on the up grade yesterday with the word that Walter Johnson, the veteran pitcher of twenty seasons, is almost recovered from an ankle injury received in the training camp this spring, and ready to return to the slab. His return is seen as the added ounce of steam that will carry the Senators back into the first division.

When the veteran does start his regular turn on the mound, probably soon, he will be opening his 21st major league season and pitching his 785th game and 5817th inning—all of them played in a Washington uniform.

FAVOR SHARKEY FOR CHAMPION

Boxing Commission Will Offer No Interference in Dempsey Bout.

HEAVY CONTENDERS.

NEW YORK May 26. — Jack Sharkey, Boston heavyweight, who can make his actions speak—as loud as his words, is favored by the New York Boxing Commission as the next challenger for the heavyweight championship of the world, but no interference will be offered to a bout between Sharkey and Jack Dempsey.

This much was learned to-day from James A. Farley, the chairman of the commission, and he spoke with the assurance that he would be supported by William Muldoon, another members of the commission, a Sharkey admirer of long standing.

"The Champagne of Ginger Ales"

THE witchery of a wonderful flavor has made "Canada Dry" the outstanding ginger ale success of all time.

Somehow it seems as if the very spirit of the snow-clad hills and the stimulation of mountain air have been captured within each crested, emerald bottle. Poured into fragile stemware, it bubbles and dances like a time-mellowed champagne and bids you drink and be merry.

"Canada Dry" is a better, finer ginger ale because we make very definite efforts to have it so. In the purity and quality of its ingredients, and the perfection of the methods by which it is made, it stands absolutely alone.

To millions of people it has advertised the name Canada and the outstanding quality of Made-in-Canada products. Even in New York it is acknowledged to be the finest ginger ale ever sold in the States.

A GOOD WORK, THIS.

The Pontiac delivery truck of Thomas Dawson, Peterborough's well-known cake and bread man, is attracting a good deal of favorable comment these days, in its bright new dress of paint and lettering applied by Harris & Boddy, painters and sign writers. The latters' expert work, a striking example of the art of auto decorating, fittingly reflects the all-round delectable goodness for which T. Dawson's cakes and bread are locally famous. 1d-123-1396

BUS DAMAGED AT RUSH HOUR

Axle of Big Gotfredson Vehicle Breaks, Tying Up Traffic.

CARS USED TO-DAY.

At the rush hour, 5:30 last night, the large Gotfredson transportation bus broke one of its rear axles at the corner of George and Edinburgh streets. The transmission also locked, which resulted in the bus being out of commission until this afternoon. No other busses were available but the Gotfredson Company, in accordance with the fine service which it has been rendering this city, had three cars out this morning at 6:00 o'clock taking the working men to their work. The cars were owned by J. McCann, superintendent of the system, Master Mechanic Scott and T. Foster, who is a bus driver.

Mayor Holloway told the Examiner that he had sent a questionnaire to the manager of the Gotfredson Company and he expected an answer back in time for Friday night's council meeting in order that action might be taken.

FIRE DAMAGES HOUSE AT KEENE

Mrs. G. Adamson Has Narrow Escape When Oil Stove Explodes.

NEIGHBORS GIVE HELP.

KEENE, May 26.—Mrs. Gerald Adamson, of Keene, narrowly escaped being burned seriously on Monday about eleven o'clock when a coal oil stove at which she was working, suddenly exploded, a sheet of flame partly enveloping her and setting fire to the house. Considerable damage was done by fire and water to the rear part of the house, and only the strong efforts of neighbors in and around Keene saved the house from probable destruction. Mrs. Adamson was slightly burned on the face. The damage will be covered by insurance.

The operator at the local telephone office again did quick work in getting help by phone.

NOTHING HEARD ABOUT AVIATOR

Report That Vessel is Towing His Plane Not Confirmed.

HASN'T REACHED LAND.

LONDON, May 26 (Canadian Press).—Although circumstantial reports had been received that Commander Francesco de Pinedo, Italian four continent flier, had reached either Fayal or Flores, islands of the Azores group, in his homeward flight from Newfoundland to Italy, latest despatches from the Azores do not confirm them.

These meagre despatches indicate that nothing is definitely known there later than a report that a schooner had been sighted towing a plane generally asumed to be De Pinedo's.

WEDDING BELLS.

JONES—STAPLES.

A pretty wedding was solemnized yesterday afternoon in Knox church, by the pastor, Rev. William McDonald, when Ella, the eldest daugther of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Staples, Patterson street, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to William Edgar Jones, son of Mrs. Jones, Aylmer street, and the late A. Jones. Mr. R. J. Devey played the wedding music.

The bride wore a stylish coat of Brown silk, trimmed with fur with hat, shoes and hose to match, and carried a bouquet of yellow roses. Her sister, Miss Mary Staples of Toronto, acted as bridesmaid, wearing a black satin dress, with black hat, and carrying yellow roses. Mr. Walker Jones, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

After the ceremony, refreshments were served to the wedding party and guests at the home of the bride's parents, Mrs. D. Foster, Mrs. J. Houghton and Miss E. Trotter taking charge of arrangements.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Jones left for a trip to Ottawa, Montreal and cities in the United States. On their return they will reside at 259 Rubidge street.

HULLAND—WARBURTON.

The wedding was solemnized at George street United Church by the pastor, Rev. J. E. Todd, of Marion Warburton, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Allen of Rockcroft, to George Alfred Hulland of Lindsay.

The bride was daintily attired in a dress of navy silk canton crepe, with hat, shoes and hose and gloves to match. The bridesmaid, Miss Luella Windover, wore a pretty frock of peach silk crepe, with hat, shoes and hose to match. A brother of the bride, Mr. Joseph Warburton, acted as best man.

The gift of the bridegroom to the bride was a gold pendant, and to the bridegroom a gold ring, and to the best man a pair of gold cuff links.

Mr. and Mrs. Hulland will reside at Rockcroft.

SOVIET CANCELS HORSE CONTRACT

First Effect of Canada's Decision To Terminate Agreement.

MONTREAL, May 26. Canadian Press. — The first direct effect of the severance of trade relations between Canada and Soviet Russia, came last night when officials of the Soviet trade commission announced through the Canadian Press, the annulment of the contract that had already been entered into between the commission and Western Canada horse breeders for the purchase by Russia of four thousand horses. It was also stated that other prospective contracts had now been cancelled.

SOVIET EXPECTED BREAK.

MOSCOW, May 26. Canadian Press. — Maxim Litvinoff, acting Soviet foreign secretary, told Russian newspaper men yesterday that the Anglo-Russian breach was not a casual or unexpected event connected with the Soviet House raid or the alleged disloyalty of the Soviet trade organizations, but the logical outcome of the British Conservative government's anti-Soviet policy.
